TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 7. — The buyers yesterday were keen for the good butchers, which were none too plentiful, and single steers were taken at $6.75 a cwt. and large bunches of choice handyweight heifers at $6.55 a cwt. Rogers & Maybee were slow in making commitments for export. The latest cable gave the Old Country market weak, with a top price of 91-2 pence. They will not need as many cattle this week, and they will not likely take more than 700 or 800 on the market. The better local demand for good butchers will prevent them getting many heifers for overseas.

Sellers of heavy steers were loath to take the cut of 10 to 15 cents a cwt. and only about 250 were bought for export up till noon. The top was $7.25 a cwt. and otherh were bought down to $6.00. A few export heifers sold at $6.15, and two choice export cows brought $5.25 a cwt. Medium butchers sold around $5.50 and common butchers from $4.00 up. Butchers' cows were about unchanged, with $4.00 to $4.25 for the good to choice. Loads of Western steckers and feeders were bought at $4.50 and $5.33 respectively.

The market was fairly active, and most of yesterday's cattle were sold.

Good to choice veal calves are scarce and prices are steadily firm. Good but not choice calves sold yesterday morning at 10 1-2 cents a pound and good mediums were within a cent of that price. Top calves sold at 11 1-2 cents and heavy grassers at 4 cents.

Lambs were quite steady and of the receipts of over 2,400 there were not more than 75 sheep. Choice handyweight sheep were taken by Alex. Furlong at 8 cents a pound. Few lambs were sold up till noon, but the price for choice lambs is expected to be no lower than 12 cents a pound.

Hog prices stiffened 25 cents a cwt. yesterday, with sales f.o.b. at $9.50 a cwt. and $10.50 off cars. Continuous light runs are responsible for the increase in price.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 6 (Canadian Press). — There was no change in the export situation in the local grain market yesterday, business being slow owing to the fact that exporters were not disposed to make offers and British importerh were not bidding for supplies owing to the excited condition of the market.

The demand for cash grain was limited, but the tone was firm. Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley was quoted at $1.08 and No. 3 grade at $1.07. Ontario No. 2 white oats 67 to 68 cents, No. 3 grade at 64 cents per bushel, ex-track.

The feature of the local flour market was the more pronounced strength that prevailed for spring wheat grades and millers marked up another 20 cents per barrel. The tone of winter wheat flour was also stronger, and prices scored a further advance of 10 cents per barrel.

In sympathy with the continued strength in grain and flour millers marked up prices on all lines of millfeed another $1.60 per ton here yesterday. The market for rolled oats was also firmer and prices moved up another 10 cents per bag.

The baled hay was without any new feature to note.

A very firm tendency prevailed in eggs at the recent advances noted. A weaker feeling developed in butter, and prices were reduced 1-4 to 1-2 cent per pound on all lines. The volume of trade was small.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in cheese, although the tone was steady. With a fair demand and moderate supplies on hand, the trade in old crop beans was active, and prices ruled at $2.95 to $3.10 per bushel for one-pound pickers.

This Estate is Yours —For the Taxes

Suppose someone should offer you a valuable piece of property on condition that you keep the taxes paid during your lifetime—at your death clear title to the property to pass to your family. That would be a very attractive proposition wouldn't it?

But if in addition it should be guaranteed to you

(1) that the value of the estate will not shrink,

(2) that the rates, which are lower than tax rates of most Canadian cities will never be increased, wouldn't you accept a $10,000, $25,000 or $50,000 estate?

This is just the proposition offered you by the London Life Insurance Company in its new Jubilee Policy —the product of fifty years' service.

Example—
An insurance estate set up in 1923 by a young man age 31.
Value of estate $10,000.00
Annual taxes (premium) 188.50
Rate: approximately 19 mills on the dollar,—reduced in 1924 to 18 mills.

A Life Insurance Estate is one of the most valuable and stable assets you could have—and so easy to secure under this plan. Ask one of our representatives to explain it to you or write to—

SOUTH CAVAN RURAL FAIR

A HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Special Service In St. John's Church, Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 7.—The Harvest Festival services of St. John's Church were held on Friday evening and continued on Sunday at all services.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the products of field and garden tastefully arranged. The altar with its vases of asters and bunches of grapes flanked by two small sheaves of wheat and a loaf of bread typifying the staff of life. The windows were piled with flowers and greens and pyramids of vegetables, the pulpit, prayer desks, choir stall were trimmed with vines and greens and at the base of the lectern was a pyramid of vegetables of various kinds and apples of rosy hue. The ends of the pews had miniature sheaves of grain, touched with clusters of red berries. From the lectern hung a cross of yellow grain studded with blood red blossoms and over the entrance to the sanctuary hung still another cross much larger and proclaiming that the Message of the Cross is in the Harvest Festival as in every other part of the church life..

Over the entrance to the church grounds where it is hoped in time to erect a lych gate, was an arch of smoke plant and scarlet ivy.

At the Friday evening service Dr. R. C. Blagrave, vicar of St. John's, Peterboro was the special preacher at the service which consisted of choral evensong. The choir rendered Caleb Simper's Harvest Anthem, "Make a joyful wise unto the Lord." Dr. Blagrave took his text from the 8th verse of the 26th Psalm, "Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house and the place where thine honor dwelleth."

The speaker preached a thoughtful sermon emphasizing the love and reverence we all owe to God's house where he is to be found ever more than any other place. It is a duty and a privilege to come into God's house and there worship him in the beauty of holiness. We also should honor his Holy Name with our lives, our gifts and our worship. God has given us all and to him should be given out of our abundance for the continuance of his work. Rev. Mr. Geddes, a missionary to Herschel Island which lies at the mouth of the Mackenzie River, was a speaker at the General Synod which has just closed and which was held at London, Ontario. Mr. Geddes related that the Eskimos on that island were a savage and dangerous race until the animal of Bishop Stringer who visited them several years ago and brought them the message of the gospel of Christ, now every person on the island is baptized and the majority are also confirmed and the people are living Christian lives. This shows what good results follow the honoring of God by our gifts in our lives.

At the close of the service the adult members of the congregation adjourned to the school room where refreshments were served by the members of the A.Y.P.A., and where a social hour was spent at which the rector, Rev. W. Cox spoke a few words thanking the people for the splendid response to the Harvest appeal and also for the large attendance at the service.

On Sunday morning at 10 oclock the special Childrens' Harvest service was held at which the rector spoke briefly on the part which children play in this festival.

At the 11 o'clock service which consisted of Holy Communion and sermon the rector was assisted by Rev. A. W. Mackenzie. The subject of the rector's discourse was the Gospel of Decorations, "showing the symbolism of the decorations of God's house for the Harvest festival, the Christian feast of the ingathering which is the Christian equivalent of the Jewish Feast of Tabernacles. The wheat signifies the provision made for man by God and in the bread which we call the staff of life, we finished the product of the wheat. Barley and oats and other grains show God's wonderful provision for the brute creation for which God cares as part of his creation. Vegetables and fruit help to sustain life and God has given us all in abundance, not only for our necessities but also of sufficient quantity and variety to enable us to live in luxury. Flowers, God has given us to cheer us with their beauty, flowers of many varieties which go father as a message of cheer to those who are sick and suffering than the loads of flowers so often heaped on the coffin. The only flowers which have a place on the coffin are those which are arranged in the shape of a cross typifying the life to come, the silent occupant is with God and no longer needs the cheer of the flowers of earth. At this season when God has given us so generously of his gifts we can surely say how wonderful the works of God."

At the evening service the rector continued the message of the harvest speaking of the greatness of God's creations as seen in the world of nature. Nature is God's great store house, it is also God's domain given to man of which the only key to unlock the gate is work. It is also a beauty maiden who can be wooed and won by the fine looking young man called industry.

This season God's goodness to man has ben manifested in even a greater degree than usual by the abundance of the harvest so that the season is more than usually suitable.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 7 (Canadian Press). — Although huge export buying said to total 5,000,000 bushels hoisted wheat and rye to fresh high record prices for the season, profit-taking largely blotted out the advance. On some of the transactions, wheat for delivery next May reached as high as 157 a bushel, a jump of more than 4 cents since Saturday's finish.

Closing quotations on wheat ranged from 1-4 cent net decline to 1 3-8 cents gain, December 149 1-2 to 149 5-8 and May 153 7-8 to 154, with corn 1 3-8 to 2 3-4 cenith down; oats at 1-4 to 2 cents off; and provisions ranging from 17 cents setback to a rise of 20 cents.

In addition to the upward impetus which the wheat market received from the extraordinary volume of export dealings ,a big jump in values at Liverpool and Winnipeg acted as a decided stimulus to the trade here.

Unfavourable weather conditions in Argentina and Canada were also a new motive to purchase, aside from further official reports emphasising the prospect of a smaller world supply of bread grains than last year.

However, the rush of buying with which the day opened led to such immediate tempting profits that sellers became almost in a majority, and for at least the time being the advance was checked with all final quotations well below the day's initial figures.

Special significance appeared to attach to the fact that the net decline of 1-4 cent which resulted yesterday in the July delivery of wheat applies only to the 1925 crop and not to wheat at present anywhere on hand.

Among some traders, however, chances that a temporary pause in export buying might now take place were being discussed as the day drew to an end.

Veteran Visits Hospital Then Ends His Own Life

BRAMPTON, Ont, Oct. 7.—Sad circumstances attended the death of John Armitage, an ex-soldier, who has been suffering from the effects of shell shock and gas, and who was found at Malton Friday with a bullet hole through his head.

Armitage, who is a married man with no family, was conducting a small chicken farm at Malton and was down at Christie Street Hospital on Thursday for examination. He did not return home as expected, and Rev. H. C. Hutchison made a prolonged search for him, finding the remains on a small clump of trees not far from the school house.

Armitage is thought to have returned during the night, slipped into the house and changed his clothes before taking his life. He drew a large amount of money from the bank this week, giving it to his wife.

Dr. J. A. Lawson, accompanied by Chief Herkes, viewed the remains but does not consider an inquest necessary.

Before the Canadian Pacific

THINK of a Canada without Vancouver and Victoria! Without Winnipeg! Without the wonderful cities of the plains!

Think of a Canada ending at Lake Huron; its commercial arm reaching feebly by steamer to the head of the lakes; the fertility of its plains growing fodder for buffaloes; its trade with the mighty West a traffic in beavers' pelts.

That was Canada of the 'eighties.

Small wonder that the sovereign rights to the Northwest were transferred to the Dominion of Canada for £300,000. Without transportation Canada's boundless acres had no value. More, from a national view, that stretch of wilderness was a formidable barrier to a United Canada. For it lay between the mountain-walled colony on the Pacific and the older provinces of the East.

Building the railroad across this unsettled, unproductive continent was the supreme test of the growing nation's courage, its vision, and its resources. The Canadian Pacific was young Canada's answer to those who questioned her political future. By binding together her widely-scattered peoples, by uncovering the wealth of the prairies, by opening the highway from the Orient to Europe, the Canadian Pacific laid the foundation of Canada's greatness. The achievements—and ideals—of the doughty Canadians of the 80's have been the inspiration for the great works of national development carried on by the Canadian Pacific.

DO YOU KNOW that the Canadian Pacific has spent $68,000,000 in colonization, in developing national resources and facilitating and improving the agriculture of the country.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Team of Horses Ran Away and Gave Some of the Residents a Thrill—Social Events.

CAMPBELLFORD, October 7.—Mr. David Plumpton, near Codrington, came to Campbellford on Monday with seven large hogs for shipment. As the waggon was on the scales to be weighed, a train came along which frightened the horses. They started to run and narrowly escaped the office in the elevator, where Mr. James E. Johnston works. They then turned and ran down the street and across the bridge over the creek and on to near where Mr. McKeel lives, when they came up against a big tree, which stopped them.

While near the station both Mr. Plumpton and Mr. Wilbert Nelson tried to stop them. One of the horses kicked Mr. Nelson on the leg. He was taken to the doctor and his wound attended to. Fortunately the injury is not very serious.

The horses were not hurt in any way. The accident caused great excitement for a while.

The lady teachers of the staff awarded the ribbons to the prize-winners after each event. This field day was certainly the best that the High School have ever had. It is to be honed that the citizens of the town will avail themselves of every opportunity of seeing a good day's sport such as they witnessed on Friday.

The High School staff and pupils wish to thank the citizens of the town who so generously contributed to the splendid collection of prizes for their field day.

A student is allowed to accept only two prizes, and this increases enthusiasm among the contestants. The prizes are on view in J. B. Ferris & Co.'s window on Bridge Street.

Wedding Bells.

Walmsley, of Belleville, was groomsman.

Miss Isabel Locke, sister of the bride, played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register Miss Irene Compton, of Toronto, sang "O Promise Me."

The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver, to the bridesmaid an onyx ring set with pearls, and to the groomsman a vanity roll.

Chief Justice Regrets Religion Can't Be Taught in Schools.

NEW YORK, October 7. — William H. Taft, Chief Justice of the United States, has endorsed the movement launched by Collier's for a moral code acceptable to all denominations for use in the public schools. Writing to Collier's, Mr. Taft says:

"I am sorry that the situation is such that religion itself may not be taught in the schools, or under associations so near to the schools that it becomes part of the instruction. We tried to do it in the Philippines, and it was tried in Minnesota. However, if it is impracticable, then I think your plan of a moral code, agreed upon by all, should be promoted."

LAKEFIELD LOSES BAPTIST PASTOR

Rev. T. L. White and Wife Leave Village This Month.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 4.—It is a matter of deep regret that Rev. and Mrs. T. L. White are leaving the village this month and will in future reside in Scotland, Ontario. Mr. White has been for more than four years the pastor of the Lakefield Baptist Chuch where his faithful work and devotion to duty has won for him the love and respect of his congregation, who are deeply regretting his departure.

In the village life Mr. White has been an outstanding figure, taking an active part in all branches of the community life. His musical ability was of a high order and on several occasions he trained a community choir. In sporting circles he has been both prominent and popular, he was a member of the football team and the Ministerial hockey team. He was also an enthusiastic player in the soft ball league.

Mr. and Mrs. White will be very much missed in the village and good wishes will attend them to their new home. Mrs. White, Sr., who came out two and a half years ago from England to be with her son and his family, will of course, accompany them in their move and her departure will be also regretted among her many friends.

NEWS OF MARMORA.

Special Anglican Service Held at Deloro on Sunday.

MARMORA, Oct. 7.—The Anglican service at Deloro on Sunday evening last partook of a harvest thanksgiving nature. The decoration of the hall platform was a veritable work of art and in itself a forcible though silent sermon of the majesty of the Creator's works. The service rendered differed but little from that rendered at St. Paul's and Holy Trinity on the previous Sunday. The choir comprised those available from the choir of a week ago and the orchestra was made up of Messrs. S. B. Wright, R. Hunter, A. V. Yates and W. H. Rigg. The Rev. B. F. Byers, M.A., of Stirling, who officiated, preached an appropriate sermon on Psalm 65:11. He reminded his hearers that the Harvest thanksgiving was held that their thoughts might be carried to the Giver of all good gifts. We find our dependence to be one higher than ourselves. If we entef into the spirit of thanksgiving it will be to confess. "All things come of Thee, O Lord; and of Thine own have we given Thee." After the flood God gave a material promise to the world. "While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest shall not cease." The material side of harvest is not to end in itself but to set before us the spiritual side.

It was intended that we should be led to the one great thought of a fraternal love in the world. It is back to antiquity that we are carried as we dwell on the promise of harvest. The seed of the woman was to bruise the head of the serpent. The reverend gentleman in concluding, called attention to the cause for thanksgiving. We have in this fair Dominion not only for the gifts of nature but for the labors of those gone before into which we enter whereon we have not sown. There was a large congregation present and the service was characterized by much heartiness.

FLAPPERS KEEN TO JOIN POLICE FORCE

Women Rushing To Scitland Yard To Join Up.

LONDON, Oct. 7. — English women, aroused by a desire to enlarge the long restricted horizon of their activities, are rushing pell-mell to Scotland Yard these days in an endeavor to enlist in the Metropolitan Police Force at the very fountain head of police administration in England.

Their endeavors are a little premature. Nevertheless, they are greatly encouraged by a committee report recommending increase in the number of women "bobbies", at present very small. But parliament must enact the necessary legislation to provide for the salaries of the police women before actual recruiting can commence.

All this to the contrary ambitious women, not content with merely writing to Scotland Yard, beseige the entrance of the big round-towered building off Whitehall in an attempt to press in person their claims to perferment as members of the police force. All sorts of women are among the besiegers, old, young, iddle-aged. Girls with bobbed hair, and other gay young friskers are strangely mixed up with grave old plodders, all anxious to serve as guardians of John Bull's peace.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE GEORGE STREET TEETOTALERS.

To the Editor of Examiner.

Sir,—I am wondering why those people are called moderationists. Is it because they use in such great moderation what they are pleased to call the good creatures of God? Let us see. Take, for instance, consisteney. They make very noisy professions of their great love for personal rights, and yet their literature makes it clear that they do not care one cent for personal rights, unless they happen to be the persons. If you ask them what about the personal rights of women and children to protection and decent treatment you will only receive an evasive answer.

Then they invite us to repeal the O. T. A. because they say it does not perfectly prohibit, and at the same time they ask us to bring on Government control, which they well know does not perfectly control. Consistency, thou art a jewel!

Then take accuracy. Take all of the statements made by them about the O. T. A., its non-enforcement, its increasing drunkenness and crime, etc., etc., and place these statements under the most powerful magnifying glass, and what a modicum of truth will be discernible.

Then there are the good qualities of sound judgment, love of justice, broadminded charity, etc., which should come to every man as the result of lengthened experience, close observation and the study of history. Place their literature under as strong a glass as you will and how many of these qualities will be revealed?

Why, sir, all of the foregoing does not suggest the moderate use of these good things—it suggests total abstinence therefrom. I therefore make bold the suggestion that the name of these people be changed to teetotalers.

From now until the 23rd October all letters addressed to 444 George street, Peterborough, will be delivered to the George street teetotalers and will receive their prompt attention, whether the day be wet or dry.

J. C. SMITH.

To the Editor of Examiner.

Sir,—Some of your correspondents do not seem to be aware of the fact that General Booth, the founder and head of the Salvation Army, was not in favor of prohibition. He was definitely opposed to all "nostrums" for the reform of the world, he said. Christ, General Booth constantly held up as the sole and only hope of the world. There was no other way, he proclaimed. Unless the minds and the hearts of men and women are turned to Christ, he maintained it was useless to talk of reform, and if they were, no other reform is necessary. It was not the means of sin which sinned, but people who misused them. It was this lack of faith in Christ that the General declared was and is and will be the cause of all our troubles. Marvellous conversions of great sinners and drinkers certainly served to bear him out. It is, of course, impossible to ask God to help to prohibit that which He created and the means of making which are wholly and solely His. General Booth's idea certainly seemed to be from his preaching a strong condemnation of all substitutes. He regarded such as signs of infidelity, a disease he foresaw as spreading in high places over the world.

GOVERNMENT ASTRAY.

Governments Should Be Made To Understand That They Serve the People.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press). — "I think the people of Canada might do many more foolish things than take such action as would let the Government know that it is a servant of the law and not its master."

This was the declaration of R. L. Calder, K.C., Crown prosecutor, in the course of an address delivered here last evening. "Too many people in politics to-day," he continued, "are content to lash the rudder to the mast and let the ship of state go ahead, right or wrong. The first step in practical politics as I see it," he said, "is to make all the governments understand that they are servants of the people."

SERMON AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The minister of St. Paul's, Rev. R. Pogue, spoke on the text Sunday evening, "If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed." He took for his subject, "True Freedom." Among other things he said: "There is nothing that men love more than they do freedom. It is an instinct of human nature. It is not only true of men, but it is true of all living things. We cannot imprison life anywhere without it showing a desire to break its bondage. The desire of the human heart for liberty is a God-implanted desire. It is a fundamental instinct of life.

"But what is true liberty? What is the freedom of which Christ speaks? Is it the same as that for which some men raise so loud a cry, men who form themselves into so-called 'liberty leagues' throughout the country, and who ask for the privilege of doing their own sweet will irrespective of the claims and rights of others? Is that freedom? Is freedom the privilege of doing just as one pleases? Let us be careful here in our definitions, careful to understand what the nature of true freedom really is. An individual is free when he lives the life which God intended he should live. He is free when he realizes the highest purpose of his existence. He is freest when his life is of most value to himself and others. Freedom cannot be considered apart from others. I am free, for example, to extend my arms tonight to their full length, and do what I please with them so long as there is no one else within my reach. But I am not free to thrust my fist in another man's face. My freedom ends at the point of his nose. So that in defining what true freedom is we have to take into consideration the relation of our conduct to others. It cannot be considered apart from the well-being of others.

"The colt in the field kicks up its heels and runs whithersoever it wills. It has a freedom of a kind. But that is not the purpose of the existence of such a noble creature as the horse. The horse is intended to be the servant of man. He is intended to be of service to the world. And in order to be of service he has to be taken from the field, and have the bit and bridle placed upon him and brought into subjection to the will of man. The horse is never so free as when he has been brought to do the bidding of his master, as when he walks along the straight furrow or speeds along the roadway conveying his master to his desired destination. That is a much higher freedom than the freedom of the colt in the field.

"I paid a visit a few years ago to one of our farmers in the country. He was driving a beautiful team of horses behind a disc-harrow. As they walked along with their heads in the air doing the will of their master and preparing the soil for the seed, they were the very embodiment of true liberty. He left them standing for a moment behind the house while he came round and sat down for a chat with me on the verandah. In a moment we heard a noise, and hastening to see what was the matter we saw that the team of horses running madly away with the disc-harrow behind them. Soon the harrow was broken. Then they dashed against a fence as though the rails were nothing but cow-webs in their wild desire for liberty and freedom.

"That is a liberty of a very different kind to the liberty of obedience to the will of their master. And that is the kind of liberty exactly that certain types of people are crying for, who are organizing themselves into so-called 'purity leagues.' They are asking for the privilege of running amuck through the streets of civilization and doing whatsoever they please irrespective of the effect of their wild conduct upon themselves or those with whom they come in contact. That is the Bolshevist's idea of liberty. He wishes to free himself from the encumbrances of the traces and harness of civilization, and regardless of how his conduct may affect his neighbor he wants the privilege of doing his own sweet will.

"Needless to say, that is not liberty. That is license, and it is a license which a society that believes in its own preservation, and which believes not only in the greatest good to the greatest number, but the highest good of all, will refuse to acquiesce in. The reason why a high civilization passes prohibitory laws is because it wishes to secure the highest good of all its citizens. So it will not permit a man to engage in a business that will endanger somebody else. It goes further than that, and it says, that if a man will not protect himself and will not render the highest service of which he is capable to society, it will withhold from him that which is interfering with his usefulness and with his best service. Society, therefore, says that a man is not free to drink what he pleases, and that for two reasons. First of all, he is not free to drink if the indulgence of his appetite in any way interferes with the well-being of society. No man has the right, in order to gratify his own thirst or his own appetite, to demand that an institution shall be maintained on the street corner that may work injury to other parts of the community, and be a temptation to the sons and daughters of other parts of the community. And not only that; he has no right to gratify his appetite or his thirst if in so doing he himself will in any way be a burden upon the community. He cannot make another pay for his indulgence. Nor, indeed, has he the right to the indulgence of his own appetite if that indulgence is going to interfere with the highest and best service which he owes to his family and to the community of which he is a citizen."

NEW BORING MILL IN A LOCAL PLANT

Structural Work Under Difficulties at Canadian General Works.

To provide space for the new forty-foot boring mill and to separate the foundations for the existing two forty-ton cranes and the gallery and roof supports, with their heavy loads, from the new concrete bearings for the mill, some unusual work has just been completed at the local C. G. E. plant.

It involved the removal of three steel spans with four columns and piers and their replacement with a single long span. The old column piers were taken out and new ones placed while still operating the cranes and using the gallery for machine working space and without seriously interfering with shop operation. The crane power lines at this particular point were turned off on Friday night and restored on Monday night. Material and heavy cranes passed over the new span early Tuesday morning, and the tests shown by instruments that under-load the levels were correct to a hair-line; absolutely no settlement or deflection could be recorded.

The loads carried by shoring and under-pinning during the preparation were over a half million pounds and involved careful planning and execution.

The first phase of the foundation work for the new mill is complete and the concrete piers and foundation will be rushed to early completion for the new machine.

The new steel work was fabricated and erected by the company's own engineers, and the work was planned and carried out under the personal supervision of Mr. J. L. Brower, manager of the bridge department, Canadian Allis-Chalmers, Limited, which is a subsidiary of the Canadian General Electric Company.

The new forty-foot boring mill is being built by the Bertram Company of Dundas, Ont., and will be the largest in Canada. The foundations for the mill will require the placing of over three hundred cubic yards of concrete after the excavation and placing of forms is completed. The total bearing on the soil, including the concrete mass, cranes, gallery, roof and fixed and moving loads, including the boring mill, will be over three million pounds.

MINISTER RESIGNS.

Baptist Preacher of Modernist Ideas Stuck To Religion·

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Presbytery of New York received yesterday but delayed action upon the resignation of Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Baptist preacher of modernist ideas, who for five years has held an assistant ministership in the First Presbyterian Church of this city.

The resignation was Dr. Fosdick's answer to the request of the Presbytery that, in answer to the ruling of the General Assembly five months ago, he should renounce his Baptist membership and become a Presbyterian or relinquish his association with the local church.

WOUNDED IN DUEL.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 7.—(United Press).—Minister of Agriculture Le Breton, former Ambassador in Washington, and a deputy, Diego Luis Molinari, were both wounded slightly in a duel with sabres here early to-day. Both men were touched half a minute after the first assault. The duel grew out of a political quarrel, resulting from a letter written by Molinari, a follower of ex-President Irigoyen, criticizing the Minister of Agriculture and his aspirants. Three of Le Breton's friends have also sent their seconds to Molinari, and will fight a duel with him as soon as he has recovered. Le Breton, it is understood, tendered his resignation to President Alvear before sending his challenge to Molinari.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore the natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well known druggisst say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

PREMIER MADE ELECTION MORE CERTAIN TO-DAY

Speech Delivered By MacDonald Made Certain a General Election.

DID GREAT WORK.

MacDonald Said, Liberals Proposed To Investigate Editor Campbell.

(By Lloyd Allen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Defying the Opposition and Liberal tactics, Premier MacDonald probably made certain a general election by his speech to-day, before the first Labor Party conference since Labor came into power.

"I should not complain if a challenge came on vital issues," MacDonald said, "but the Liberal proposal to investigate Editor Campbell (a Communist charged with sedition, proceedings against whom were dropped by the Government) is in the spirit of medieval crookedness and torture."

"The Government is not to be censured," the Premier continued. "It is only to be insulted, it is not to be executed, it is merely to be put upon the rack."

"The Opposition mistakes their men. We shall surrender nothing."

"If there is an election, the responsibility for it is not ours."

When MacDinald predicted a victory at the polls, he was wildly cheered. The convention passed a resolution congratulating the Premier on his achievements and promising utmost support in the event of an election.

The convention officials intimated that resolutions proposing affiliations between the Laborites and the Communists would be ruled out of order.

This was made even more plain when MacDonald defended the Anglo-Russian Treaty, but repudiated Communism, denouncing it as "detestable."

"Communist and a mischievous stirring up of strife," he said, "whereas the Laborites propose a democracy of freedom and progress.

"Communist is a product of czarism and war, and we shall have nothing to do with it. Unless we are prepared to engage in a crusade against Communism, we might as well put up our shutters."

Large crowds waited outside the large assembly hall in the west-end awaiting the arrival of MacDonald and other Cabinet Ministers.

The speakers' platform resembled the Ministerial bench in the House of Commons, inasmuch as nearly all the members of the Cabinet were present.

When the Premier took the platform he was met by a burst of applause. He began his address by defending the accomplishments of the Labor Government.

"We did not enter office hoping to create a new world by agitation," he said, "but we do believe we have created a new spirit to which the old world is showing a new response.

"We are besieged on all sides with demands that the unemployment ills be miraculously cured. They are not cured but no Government has done more than we have.

"We have reduced sugar duties and have otherwise removed from the classes £30,000,000 annual tax burdens. This good work will be continued.

"I believe that some progress has been made toward world peace and I am hopeless of the Dawes plan."

SELF GOVERNMENT INDIAN RESERVES

Selecting Council of Chiefs Is To Be Superceded By Election Method.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press).—What will prove an epochal move in the direction of completing the establishment of democratic self-government on Indian reserves of Canada is to be made this month on the Six Nations Reserve at Ohsweken, near Brantford, Ont, according to an announcement by the Department of Indian Affairs. The present hereditary and appointive system of selecting council of chiefs is to be superceded by an elective method.

By an Order-in-Council, passed in September last, Part II. of the Indian Act, entitled Indian advancing is applied to the Six Nations band of Indians, and under that order the reserve is to be divided into six sections, each section containing approximately an equal number of electors and each of these sections to elect two councillors.

With the view of carrying this order into immediate effect, electors on the reserve are ordered to meet at the Council House, Ohsweken, on Tuesday, October 21 next, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., for the purpose of electing members of the Council of the reserve.

OPENING MEETING LOCAL ENGINEERS

D. V. Canning Will Speak On Subject Of Automatic Stations.

The opening meeting of the Peterboro Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms on Thursday, October 9th at 8.15 p.m.

The meeting will be addressed by D. V. Canning Jr., E.I.C., B.Sc. on the subject of Automatic Stations, covering Hydro Electric Generating Stations and Railways Sub-stations. Mr. Canning is a graduate of McGill and a member of the Switchboard Engineering staff of the Canadian General Electric Company.

The subject of his address is a fascinating and important one in these days of ever increasing electrical development, which affects, directly or indirectly practically every one. A few short years ago electricity was considered as something beyond the ken of the man in the street, and reserved for a strange class of beings who conversed about it in strange and unintelligible phrases, nowadays, when every high school boy knows at least the rudiments of the science, and practically every urban home, and a good percentage of rural homes, uses electricity for one purpose or another the subject is of public interest.

The Peterboro Branch, following their usual practice invite the general public to attend the meeting. The lecture will be illustrated by three reels of motion pictures of a very high class order showing various types of automatic stations in actual operation.

BABIES' CLINIC BOARD MEETING

Reports Show That the Clinic Is In a Flourishing Condition.

The quarterly meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic was held recently in the board rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, with a fair attendance of the members. Mrs. W. Galbraith, the president, occupied the chair.

Reports were given, showing the Clinic to be in a flourishing condition. Dr. Jessie Birnie, in her report compared the totals in final statistics with regard to infants for the months of May and June, with those of July and August. In the first two months, the total number of births was 77, the deaths averaging a little over seven per cent. In July and August, births were 76, and the death average a little over five per cent.

A large number of new babies have been brought to the Clinic during the last quarter, the maximum total of new babies for one day being ten. The attendance was good, and the doctors were very faithful in their support of the work.

Owing to press of other duties Mrs George McCartney, who has been for a number of years engaged as the Clinic nurse, was obliged to tender her resignation, which was regretfully accepted by Board members. Miss Mamie Foote was appointed as Clinic nurse in her place.

Miss Foote, who has been substituting for Mrs. McCartney for some time, gave her report for the quarter, as follows:

Total number of calls made, 214; total attendance, 282; weekly average 22; total number of new babies, 56; follow up calls made, 3. These follow-up calls included two for intestinal lavage, and one for preparation of baby food.

"There were a number of cases of whooping cough in the city, but as far as I can learn, these are subsiding. Nevertheless, I have discouraged the mothers from coming to the Clinic absolutely, until all are well again, the Baby Clinics' motto being Prevention.

"The cleanliness and happiness in the majority of the homes was very evident, and whether it is a matter of many or of few, they have mother-love, and are interested in the work and objects of the Baby Clinic, which they are realizing means much to their little ones. This work and the objects of the Clinic is in most instances very interesting to them and means more to them than they had dreamed of. The idea is still prevalent in the minds of some that we are a "Sick Babies' Clinic," and I found it a text for the day: 'We are a Well Babies' Clinic.' However the interest and appreciation is growing, and is shown by the attendance week by week. I make special reference to a young father's appreciation of the work, as expressed by him at the Exhibition tent, and seeking literature and information generally regarding the work. I feel the Clinic goes forward in service to humanity, with these words: 'Be not weary in well doing.'"

Began An Attack

LONDON, October 7 (United Press). — General Wu Pei Fu's Central Chinese Army began an attack in force on Marshal Chang Tso Lin's Manchurian armies near Shan Hai Kwan, the Central News Tientsin correspondent telegraphed to-day.

A tremendous artillery barrage was laid down by the Wu army at dawn and his troops advanced after it in a wave plan evolved during the World War.

The Manchurians were retreating all along the line.

LIBERALS ASK PROGRESSIVES TO JOIN THEM

PREMIER SPEAKS.

Says Meighan Party Was Only An Instrument To The End.

BRANDON, October 7. Canadian Press. — A plea for unity and co-operation between Liberals and Progressives on the common ground of their mutual opposition to the principles of Conservatism, was made here last night by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, and the leader of the Liberal party, to an audience that contained many progressives, including their Federal leader, Robert Forks.

"If," he said, "the forces of those who think liberally and progressively, are united from the Atlantic to the Pacific, there is going to be a long term of Liberal-Progressive administration, but, if divided, when we come to face the forces of high protection (which are never divided when need arises) then we may have an even longer period to regret the mistake we have made. The division in our forces is likely to mean a victory for the party of Arthur Meighen. "Names are secondary," he declared, "and the party was only an instrument to an end."

"We are told," added the Premier, "that what has been done by this government in the way of tariff reduction, has been done under the pressure of Western Progressives. That is not true. It was done because we are seeking to carry out honorably promises we made to the public of Canada, and to put into practice the Liberal platform of 1919. The Progressives and ourselves have not been playing small politics or seeking partizan ends.

"I am thankful for the support which the Progressives have given us but I would like them to consider, having regard for the welfare of the country and knowing what the Tory government means to the country, if the time has not come when those on common grounds opposed to Toryism, should consider where they stand?"

FERGUSON LETTER ON GOVT. CONTROL

TORONTO, Oct. 7. — (Canadian Press)—Premier Ferguson, replying to queries from Rev. L. A. Moore, chair man of the Plebiscite committee of Temperance forces, has written a letter stating that should the people vote for government control of liquor on Oct. 23rd the only liquor imported will be imported by the Ontario Government and only sale of liquor permitted will be through government agencies.

No private agencies or individuals will be permitted to sell spirituous or malt liquors" states letter. "There will be no return to bar or sale by glass in any form."

The Premier added that should the choice of the people be for government control of the sale of spiritious liquors "government will exert its full power earnestly and honestly to see that business is carried on under such limitations and rigid restrictions as will eliminate to the greatest degree evils which flow from traffic in liquor."

The Premier stated his belief that those who engaged in illicit traffic commonly called "bootlegging" should be sent to jail without option of a fine.

CHAPTBR XXVII (ccntinned)

And how was he to know that all the price she was thinking of was his own life, which she conceived would be forfeited if the assistance of the Silver Heron were invoked?

Before he could return her any answer his attention was diverted A sullen threatening note had crept into the babble of the crew, and suddenly one or two voices were raised to demand insistently that Asad should put to sea at once and remove his vessel from a neighborhood become so dangerous. Now, the fault of this was Marzak's. His was the voice that first had uttered this timid suggestion, and the infection of his panic had spread instantly through the corsair ranks.

Asad, drawn to the full of his gaunt height, turned upon them the eyes that had quelled greater clamors, and raised the voice which in its day had hurled a hundred men straight into the jaws of death without a protest.

"Silence" he commanded. "I am your lord and need no counsellors save Allah. When I consider the time come, I will give the word to row, but not before. Back to your quarters, then and peace!"

He disdained to argue with them to show them what sound reasons there were for remaining in this secret cove and against putting forth into the open. Enough for them that such should be his will. Not for them to question his wisdom and his decisions.

But Asad-ed-Din had lain overlong in Algiers whilst his fleets, under Sakr-el-Bahr and Biskaine, had scoured the inland sea. The men were no longer accustomed to the goad of his voice, their confidence in his judgment was not built upon the sound basis of past experience. Never yet had he led into battle the men of this crew and brought them forth again in triumph and enriched by spoil.

So now they set their own judgment against his. To them it seemed a recklessness—as, indeed, Marzak had suggested—to linger here, and his mere announcement of his purpose was far sufficient to dispel their doubts.

The murmurs swelled, not to be overborne by his fierce presence and scowling brow, and suddenly one of the renegades—secretly prompted by the wily Vigitello—raised a shout for the captain, whom they knew and trusted:

"Sakr - el - Bahr Sakr - el - Bahr Thou'lt not leave us penned in this cove to perish like rats"

It was as a spark to a train of powder. A score of voices instantly took up the cry; hands were flung out toward Sakr-el-Bahr, where he stood above them and in full view of all, leaning impassive and stern upon the poop-rail, whilst his agile mind weighed the opportunity thus thrust upon him, and considered what profit was to be extracted from it.

Asad fell back a pace in his profound mortification. His face was livid, his eyes glared furiously, his hand few to the jeweled hilt of his scimitar, yet forbore from drawing the blade. Instead, he let loose upon Marzak the venom kindled in his soul by this evidence of how shrunken was his authority.

"Thou fool" he snarled. "Look on thy craven's work. See what a devil thou hast raised with thy woman's counsels. Thou to command a galley Thou to become a fighter upon the seas I would that Allah had stricken me dead ere I begat me such a son as thou"

Marzak recoiled before the fury of words that he feared might be followed by yet worse. He dared make no answer, offer no excuse; in that moment he scarcely dared breathe.

Meanwhile Rosamund, in her eagerness, had advanced until she stood at Sakr-el-Bahr's elbow.

"God is helping us!" she said in a voice of fervent gratitude. "This is your opportunity. The men will obey you."

He looked at her, and smiled faintly upon her eagerness.

"Aye, mistress, they will obey me," he said.

But in the few moments that were sped he had taken his resolve. Whilst undoubtedly Asad was right, and the wise course was to lie close in this sheltering cove where the odds of their going unperceived were heavily in their favor, yet the men's judgment was not altogether at fault. If they were to put to sea, they might by steering an easterly course pass similarly unperceived, and even should the splash of their oars reach the galleon beyond the headland, yet by the time she had weighed anchor and started in pursuit they would be well away, straining every ounce of muscle at the oars, whilst the breeze—a heavy factor in his considerations—was become so feeble that they could laugh at pursuit by a vessel that depended upon wind alone. The only danger, then, was the danger of the galleon's cannon, and that danger was none so great as, from experience, Sakr-el-Bahr well knew.

Thus he was reluctantly forced to the conclusion that, in the main, the wiser policy was to support Asad, and since he was full confident of the obedience of the men he consoled himself with the reflection that a moral victory might be in store for him, out of which some surer profit might presently be made.

In answer, then, to those who still called upon him, he leaped down the companion and strode along the gangway to the waist-deck to take his stand at the Basha's side. Asad watched his approach with angry misgivings; it was with him a foregone conclusion that, things being as they were, Sakr-el-Bahr would be ranged against him to obtain complete control of these mutineers and to cull the fullest advantage from the situation. Softly and slowly he unsheathed his scimitar, and Sakr-el-Bahr seeing this out of the corner of his eye, yet affected not to see, but stood forward to address the men.

"How now?" he thundered wrathfully. "What shall this mean? Are ye all deaf that ye have not heard the commands of your Basha, the exalted of Allah, that ye dare raise your mutinous voices and say what is your will?"

Sudden and utter silence followed that exhortation. Asad listened in relieved amazement; Rosamund caught her breath in sheer dismay.

What could he mean, then? Had he but fooled and duped her? Were his intentions toward her the very opposite to his protestations? She leaned upon the poop-rail straining to catch every syllable of that speech of his in the ligua frnnca, hoping almost that her indifferent knowledge of it had led her into error on the score of what he had said.

She saw him turn with a gesture of angry command upon Larocque, who stood there by the bulwarks, waiting.

"Back to thy post up yonder and keep watch upon that vessel's movements, reporting them to us. We stir not hence until such be our lord Asad's good pleasure. Away with thee"

Larocque, without a murmur, threw a leg over the bulwarks and dropped to the oars, whence he clambered ashore as he had been bidden. And not a single voice was raised in protest.

"Because this pet of the harem," he said, immensely daring, indicating Marzak by a contemptuous gesture, "bleats of danger into the ears of men, are ye all to grow timid and foolish as a herd of sheep? By Allah What are ye? Are ye the fearless seahawks that have flown with me, and struck where the talons of my grappling-hooks were flung, or are ye but scavenging crows?"

MACDONALD TIRED OF HIS POSITION

Says That The Commons Are Not a Gang of Foot Pads.

LONDON, Oct. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, of Wickham Steed, in Review of Reviews, refers to Liberal amendment to Conservative vote of censure in connection with dropping of edition charge against Editor Campbell, of Workers' Weekly and dwells on "the unfairness" of asking the government to submit its case in advance to select a committee on which its political opponents hold the majority.

"Responsibility for complicating or preventing the work we are trying to do in national interest," said Premier, "should fairly rest on the Commons itself. Though the government has not a majority in the lobby it is entitled to demand fair play. We are not a gang of foot pads." Mr. MacDonald continued that he would personally rejoice at being relieved of worry and strain of the office.

"The Girl's agony as she was chased around the lonely house by the drunken lust-crazed man, her suffering as she struggled"

These are the words of The Examiner concerning the testimony given by the dying girl to her friend, and related in Court. Then we have the evidence of the accused's brother that the prisoner had been making home-brew and was drinking heavily. This is the history—the inside history of the O.T.A. in a nutshell.

Why does not The Bulletin refer to these damning facts? Because it would establish the fact that the manufacure of home-brew, now so general and wholly due to the O.T.A., has introduced a more terrible era of murder and debauchery than ever before. That's why. (Advt.)

Giants Win Third Game of Series 6-4 - Roseneath Defeat Hastings in First County Playoff

MANAGERS USED UP RESERVE PITCHERS

Watson and Frisch Were Outstanding Figures in the Giants' Second Victory.

"PECK" WAS LAMED

Harris Muffed a Throw, Starting Marberry's Collapse and Giving Giants Two.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Out of one of the wildest baseball maelstroms that any world's series has ever witnessed, the New York Giants emerged victorious Monday over over Washington in the third game and gained a commanding edge in the 1924 championship struggle.

Fought out on a new battlefield before the greatest crowd that ever flocked to the Polo Grounds, lair of the four-time National League champions, the Giants won by a margin of 6 to 4, but the outcome was in doubt until the final play in the ninth inning, when the Senators were checked only after staging a typicaly spectacular finish.

Had Bases Full.

Three runs behind going into the ninth, after a luckless battle against heavy odds, the Senators scored one run and had the bases full with only one out when "Long John" Watson, the third Giant pitcher of the inning stopped the rally and saved the game for the McGraw men. This was the climax to a game that, though sparkling at times with the most brilliant sort of play, was also largely of sandlot character, punctuated with loose work, missed opportunities and marked by the most ineffective exhibition of twirling any series contest has witnessed in years. In a "parade of the wooden pitchers," four moundsmen were called into the hectic fray by each of the rival managers, while the rush of other reserves produced a total of twenty-nine combatants before the smoke of battle had cleared.

The Giants, leading from the start but never out of danger, won because they were steadier, displayed the more effective punch when it was needed and a critical moments, put up a formidable defensive barrier in which Frank Frisch, playing one of the most spectacular games of his career was the outstanding figure.

The Senators fought gamely and they were always threatening but the American League champions played against heavy odds after losing the services of their veteran shortstop, Roger Peckinpaugh, bulwark of the team's great infield, and batting hero of Sunday's victory. Peckinpaugh, pulling a "charley-horse" running out an infield grounder in the second inning, was forced to retire and Washington's makeshift inner defense, after that, was wobbly.

Senators Collapsed

But Peck's mishap which Manager Harris said last night was not serious and probably would not keep him out today, was only one of several factors that produced the Senators downfall and damaged their prospects of gaining their first world's championship. In this crisis the team's pitching staff collapsed, its attack fell down in the pinches while two costly misplays one by the usually reliable Harris and another by Miller, substituting at third base for Bluege who had moved over to fill Peck's shoes at short, figured in the reversal.

The Senators fought their losing battle before a record-breaking crowd of close to 50,000 that cheered them with enthusiasm scarcely less than that from a crowd that saw two opening games in Washington. The Giants, making their first appearance before their metropolitan followers since the cloud of scandal enshrouded them, were noisly and spontaneously received by the crowd which seemed to have largely forgotten the dark page in the closing chapter of the National League race, but the real acclaim was given the battling Senators.

Crowd With Senators.

In the fourth inning, when the Senators scored twice and pulled up within one run of the Giants, the crowd called wildly for a further rally that was checked, however, with the bases full. Again in the eighth, when the visitors threatened to break through, and in the ninth, when they were stopped once more, they were encouraged by excited outbursts. It seemed to puzzle, and possibly, rattle the Giants—this unusual home town demonstration—but they pulled themselves together in the face of it and won out.

The size of the crowd, however, was full proof of the interest that had been aroused by the fight between the Senators and Giants in spite of circumstances which seemed at first might jeopardize the playing calibre of the championship. Officially the paid attendance was 47,608 but several thousand more did not contribute to the gate receipts of $186,752 which also established a new record for the Polo Grounds. The previous record attendance was $46,302 established in the fourth game of last year's world's series, when the receipts $181,622, also set a high mark up to that time.

Frisch and Watson were the heroes of the Giant triumph yesterday but dramatic as was Watson's rescue feat in the ninth when a hit would have at least tied and possibly won the game for the Senators, the most spectacular role was enacted by the "Fordham Flash."

Frisch Brilliant.

Two of the three startling defensive plays Frisch pulled, all of them, curiously enough, at the expense of "Goose" Goslin, turned the Seuators back when they were most dangerous. The first of the these, and the most brilliant, came in the fourth inning when Frisch raced into centre field and grabbed Goslin's looping fly over his shoulder while going at top speed.

MORE SEATS AT WASHINGTON

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, is a busy gent these days. Here he is inspecting temporary seats built to take care of the crowd at the opening of the World Series with the New York Giants.

At that time there was one out and the only man on base was Rice, who had walked, but the full importance of Frisch's play quickly became apparent when Judge followed with a rousing double, Bluege walked, Rice scored on a sacrifice fly by Miller and McQuillan blowing up completely, passed two more men, "Rosy" Ryan, his successor, forced in a run with another pass before Leibold flew out to end the rally, which, but for Frisch's great play, might have turned the whole game into a rout..

Frisch retired Goslin again in the fifth on a catch scarcely less brilliant than that of the preceding inning, but the other notable "pinch play" by the Giant captain came in the seventh. Here with two on base, he scooped up Goslin's crackling grounder and got his man by an eye lash.

Pitchers Yanked

McQuillan, chief hope of McGraws' right handers, and "Firpo" Marberry, Washington relief star who had stopped a Giant rally and saved yesterday's' game, were the opposing moundsmen at the start, but though they were credited, respectively, with the victory and defeat neither lasted four innings. Ryan relieving McQuillan was erratic but helped his own cause with a slashing home run into the grand stand in the fourth and stuck to his guns until the ninth when Jonnard who pitched to only one batsman and walked him and Watson were thrown into the breach.

Marberry went to pieces in the second inning when the Giants took the lead with two runs, aided by two bases on balls, a wild pitch and a hit batsman But Harris was as guilty here as Marberry for the Washington manager, with one out, muffed a throw from Bluege on Jackson's grounder and lost a bright chance for a double play which would have stopped the Giants with out a tally.

The Giants scored again in the third, Kelly crossing the plate on his single, Terry's safe blow and a double play which checked further tallying, but Marberry was replaced by a pinch hitter in the Senator's fourth inning sortie.

The Giants steadily added to their lead as Harris shifted his boxmen in quick succession, Ryans' homer was made off Russell, Marberry's successor who was also in the box in the ninth when Miller let Gowdys' sharp blow through his legs and the backstop tallied on Ryans' sacrifice and Lindstrom's double. Martina, the third hurler, got through the seventh without damage but Speece, the fourth and last, was found for three hits and one run in the eighth.

NOTES OF THIRD GAME.

Scorers Rattled Trying To Keep Track of Pitchers' Exits.

NEW YORK, Oct 6. — Jackson got his first hit to-day, a single in the ninth on which he evehtually socred New York's sixth run of the game. He immediately stole second.

The home run record of world's series competition is endangered thus far this series. To date five circuit smacks have been hit, breaking all records for three games to 1923. The series last year, however, when ten home runs were hit in the six games eclipses this year's classic.

It looked exceedingly bad for Marberry in the second when he put on the Santa Claus act and presented three Giants with tickets to Judgeville They came down so fast at Judge that he thought it was raining Giants. Harris' error of an apparently easy throw unnerved the relief artist and he proceeded to blow up.

Old time fans fail to recall any other single game in the world's series where more sparkling features were injected into the scene than were produced to-day, Frisch twice robbed "Goose" Goslin of a sure hit by turning his back to the plate and nailing a pop fly in short centre. Rice also scintilated with a one-hand stab of Lindstrom's liner in the fourth while Young's shoestring catch in the sixth off Ruel was also dazzling.

McGraw and Harris poured pitchers at each other during the latter stages of the game until he scorers became rattled trying to keep matters straight. It looked as though the manager who ran out of pitchers would lose but both seemed well protected.

The Senators pulled an especially snappy twin-killing in the third when Marberry ticked Wilsons' hopper and it rolled to Peckinpaugh who tossed to Harris and thence to Judge, cutting down a pair of ambitious Giants.

Jonnard's exit out of the game was almost as sudden as his entrance. He pitched only five balls, four wide of the plate in the ninth and Bluege walked, forcing in a run. Harris was forced in and Jonnard out.

"Muddy" Ruel still has to feel the thrill of a world's series hit. The snappy Washington catcher hasn't hit safely in the present series, though he has been hitting the ball.

ORIOLES WIN EASILY

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—By walking away with to-day's game 10 to 1, the Orioles of the International League, left for St. Paul to-night leading in the "little world series" three games to one. The Saints, champions of the American Association were helpless before the speed, slow ball and curve of George Earnshaw The score:

SOX WIN TITLE.

Cubs' Only Victories Pitched By Alexander In City Series.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—The White Sox remain Chicago champions even if they did finish last in the 1924 American League race. Bowling over the Cubs to-day 5 to 3, the American League nine, led by Johnny Evers, retained their city title won lasto year from the National Leaguers after a lapse of twelve months.

It was the sixth game of the series, the Cubs having captured the first and fifth combats solely on the pitching of Grover Alexander.

Hollis Thurston and Ted Lyons hurled the Sox to victory to-day.

The score:

Cubs	001 000 200—	3	10 0
White Sox	103 000 01x—	5	8 2

Aldridge, Jacobs, Kaufmann, Blake and Hartnett; Thurston, Lyons and Schalk.

GIANTS STRONG AT FIRST

Kelly and Terry, Who Hit Homers Both Hold Down Position

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—The Giants had one too many first basemen for the Senators and Walter Johnson in the opening game. Kelly and Terry Saturday's home-run hitters, are really both first-sackers, although Long George seems to do a pretty fair job wherever he is put.

JOHNSON AND NEHF PITCH WEDNESDAY

"Big Swift" Confident He Can Beat Giants In Second Clash.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—Mogridge, veteran Washington left hander, and Barnes, youthful Giant righthander, will pitch the fourth contest of the world's series to-day, the rival managers announced after Monday's game.

If the Giants win again, Manager Harris will call upon Walter Johnson to make the last ditch stand of the Senators in the fifth game.

"Sure I can beat 'em," Johnson said when asked if he though he could upset McGraw's team in his second attempt. Arthur Nehf, who won over the veteran senator ace in the opening game, will work for the Giants Wednesday.

"We've had other reverses this season and I guess we can come back after this," Bucky Harris, Washington manager said. "Peckinpaugh had to leave the game because of a Charley-horse and that handicapped us some, but I think he'll be back to-day."

Manager McGraw of the Giants gave credit for the victory to the defensive play of Frisch.

"But the pitching was rotten," he added.

ROSENEATH WON FROM HASTINGS

First of Clarke Cup Finals Close Contest Between Pitchers.

SCORE WAS 5 TO 4

ROSENEATH, Oct. 6.— In the first game of the home and home finals for the Clarke trophy cup, Roseneath, champions of the first half of the Northumberland league, defeated Hastings, champions of the second half, in a closely contested game, by the score of 5-4. It was a pitchers' duel between Leach of Roseneath and Stevenson, the southpaw of Hastings, with the honours fairly evenly divided. Both pitchers were in top notch form, but Leach's team mates came through with some timely hitting, which counted up enough runs to win. Moore, of Roseneath, got a three-bagger and Bates and Leach a two-bagger each. Leach practically won his own game in the fourth innings. With two gone, second and third occupied and the count two and three on him, he connected with the ball for a smashing two-bagger, scoring both runners. The score was a tie, 3-3, previous to this, and his hit gave Roseneath a lead of two runs, which Hastings could not overcome. Hastings scored another in the seventh on a hit, a steal, a sacrifice infield out and a long fly to the outfield. They had a chance in the ninth when they got a man to second with two gone, but he foolishly tried to steal third and was caught cold.

Both teams had several errors, some proving real costly.

C. Davidson, of Campbellford, as umpire in chief, and J. Gems, of Cobourg on bases, gave entire satisfaction to both teams.

Score by innings:
Hastings..... 003 001 00—4
Roseneath..... 021 200 00x—5

The second game will be played in Hastings on Wednesday, Oct. 9th, at 3 o'clock, and Dunnett, Roseneath's young southpaw, will likely be on the mound for his team, while Manager Wellman, of Hastings, will likely send Stevenson, right back in an endeavor to win.

BABE RUTH A REPORTER

This year he is Covering the Series From the Press Box.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—One of the best known writers in the press gallery is covering his first world's series from that point of vantage. Heretofore he has been where he could get his information at first hand. His name is Ruth. He is giving literature his undivided attention in this series. For the last three years he has had to divide his time between making history and recording it.

Ruth is very serious and conscientious about his work, arriving early and giving to everything that takes place on the field his strict attention He says that he would rather be out there looking up than in here looking out, but that losers can't be choosers.

ZACHARY GETS THE CREDIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—The official scorers announced to-day at the world series that Zachary should be credited with Washingtons' victory on Sunday instead of Marberry as first ruled.

SOCCER NOTES

On Saturday afternoon, the replay Phelan Charity Cup tie between the Thistle and Quaker Oats will be played at the Oval. Kick off at 3.30 prompt. Referee, Jack Clark. This game will be played to a finish.

Mr.. Sidney Whatley was appointed 1st vice-president in place of Mr. Fred Sutcliffe who has departed to Toronto. Mr. William Anderson was appointed second vice-president. Mr. Harold Burrows was elected to the Board of Directors; also, Mr. Tom Stewart, Mr. Jack Haw, Mr. F. Keller and Mr. Jack Peel.

All Thistle players are requested to turn out for practice on Wednesday evening at King Edward Park at 6 o'clock prompt.

Any players who was a signed professional in the old country cannot participate in the game here until he is fully reinstated as an amateur. He may play in a junior game here as a junior but nevertheless, he did not graduate from their ranks—it was the senior ranks from where he last came from.

All local soccer players should study the new rule in organized football: "A player is not entitled by word or action to show dissent from the referee's decision."—New Football Law.

Injuries and Stoppage of Play.

So far the new rule that enables a corner kick to score whether touched by a player or not, has not added to the goals total in local circles. Neither spectators nor players have yet mastered the rule that play must not be stopped because of an injury to a player, unless the injury is a serious one. The ball must be out of play before the player can receive attention, that is if the referee thinks the injury a slight one. The new rule, once it is properly understood, will speed up the game and also thwart the dodgers who formerly made a fine art of shamming. These players will have to invent something new, and as yet unforseen, to dodge the referee. Nothing short of concussion or a broken limb will now cause a stoppage in play. The new rule in operation seems to be a callous one, but some players are far too easily knocked out, writh, seemingly in mortal agony. "Swanking" injury has long been overdone, and it is all for the good of the game that it will not longer be countenanced.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE OF ROSENEATH MEETING

Members Offer Services As Canvassers For O.T.A. Plebiscite.

ROSENEATH, Oct. 6. — The meeting of the Women's Institute for October was held at the home of Mrs. Barton Thackeray on Thursday last with nineteen members and five visitors present.

The meeting opened by singing the Institute ode and after the minutes of previous meeting had been read and approved the secretary read a report of the concert and tea which was held in aid of the street lights. The main item of business was a motion to buy eight dozen knives, forks and spoons of Nevada silver to be used in future when serving meals.

There was much discussion on the coming plebiscite and several of the ladies offered themselves to make a canvass of the country, while all expressed themselves as being willing to do all they could to support the temperance question. A motion was made that the Institute pay the annual grant of twenty-five dollars to the Children's Shelter at Port Hope as formerly. This concluded the business part of the meeting.

There were two splendid readings given by Mrs. Alfred Braithwaite and Mrs. Geo. Ingham.

The names on the membership roll were called and each responded by giving a remedy for colds, burns or poisons. The president, Mrs. J. A. Brown, then gave a very fine paper on table setting and serving.

The next meeting on November 6th will be held at the home of Mrs. Orra and C. W. Varcoe.

Mrs. W. Pacey is visiting friends in Toronto.

PRINCE GOLFS ALL DAY AT VICTORIA

Left This Afternoon For Vancouver—No Time For Hunting.

VICTORIA, B.C., Oct. 7.—Rising before eight o'clock, the Prince of Wals started a two day holiday as an ordinary visitor to Victoria yesterday. At 10:30 he jumped into a taxicab and was whisked away to the Oak Bay Golf Club course and did not return to the hotel until last night.

He took luncheon at the golf club and then drove around the city and into the country for an hour or two before going to the Col. Wood links for more golf in the afternoon. There was no time for his favorite game of squash racquete.

The Prince and his party left Victoria for Vancouver early this afternoon. Although a special hunting license has been issued, unless other arrangements are made, there is no time for the royal visitor or any of his party to bag any game on Vancouver Island.

A delegation from the Seattle chamber of commerce with a commodious speed launch extended an invitation to the Prince to step aboard and take a flying trip to Seattle, but the invitation was gracefully declined.

HONORS FOR DAZZY IN NEBRASKA TOWN

HASTINGS, Neb., Oct. 7. — When "Dazzy" Vance, whose sensational pitching the current season has been responsible for the strong showing made by the Brooklyn Dodgers, returns to his old home town, after the smoke of battle clears away this fall, he will get a rousing reception.

Plans have already been completed for a complimentary dinner by the Lions Club, of which "Dazzy" has just become a member.

Vance went to the high school here and later was sold as a $3000 lemon to the St. Joseph club, of the Western League, by Edward Deines and Frank Castle of this city. "Dazzy" considers them his patron saints since the deal marked the beginning of his meteoric rise to pitching fame. As a token of his appreciation, "Dazzy" invited both men to attend the world series as his guests and offered to pay all the expenses of the trip.

PITCHER MADE HISTORY.

Ryan Waited For a Thrill In Making Home Run.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.— "Rosey Bill" Ryan is the first National League pitcher to hit a home run in a world's series game.

"I didn't close my eyes when I hit that home run off Russel in the fourth inning," said the pitcher yesterday. "I took a good, healthy swing at the ball and was the happiest man in this world when I saw it going into the upper tier."

Incidetnally it was the first home run made by Ryan since he has been pitching big league baseball. He waited for the big moment to produce it.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

STOP SOCCER PLAYERS JUMPING TO U. S.

New Law Proposed By S. F. A. McIntyre Offered $2,500 For Season.

The Scottish Football Association is preparing to put a crimp in the migration of players to the United States. At the next meeting President Tom White will move as follows: "Any player registered with a Scottish club who plays outside Great Britain and Northen Ireland will be held to have committed an infringement of law 55," which reads: "A professional whose engagement has terminated cannot play until he is registered again or reinstated as an amateur, unless in permitted amateur matches in the close season." The president's motion, it is certain, will pass, and professional players who accept offers from U. S. clubs, and leave the country illegally, will be dealt with on their return. A number of Scottish players have not kept faith with their clubs this season, and have gone to the United States after drawing close season wages, and the clubs are merely endeavoring to protect themselves from question able tactics. No serious objection is raised when players seek their fortune elsewhere. In Scotland they have players to spare. The conditions are entirely different in Canada; good players are at a premium.

Whenever a good player has been developed in Peterboro, you can depend upon some Toronto or Hamilton club after them so as to replace them who go across the border.

Jock McIntyre Moves.

Jocky Simpson had a chat with Jock McIntyre before his embarkation. He was in high spirits.

"I'm off to Canada," he said, "and I expect to cross to the United States soon after I arrive. I will probably play for Tom Muirhead's team, the Boston F. C., but I have a good offer from Bethlehem Steel Works, too.

"Im not sorry to leave this side. Conditions here are not too good.

"For the past nine years I have been able to make a fair wage. But the offer made to me by Morton at the close of last season was ridiculously low.

"The club may not be in a good financial position, of course. But I don't think any player should accept the terms offered to me.

"I went to work along with Alec McNab in a Greenock engineering establishment. Then Alec got the offer from Boston. He promised to speak to Muirhead on my behalf.

"Later I got a letter from America, in which I was offered 2500 dollars for one season's play.

"That was good enough for me. McNab says he likes the place and people. He has a good crib as a Soccer coach in an engineering establishment. I may click for something similar.

"At anyrate, the prospects seem bright. You can express my good wishes to all my old pals in the football world."

THE HEART OF EVENTS.

Peace reigns in the depths of the ocean,
Though the billows tempestuous ride;
And under all human emotion,
God's verities calmly abide.

The truth is unchanged by our thinking,
However our doubtings assail;
Though truth as it seems may be sinking,
The truth as it is cannot fail.

Divine purpose runs through all our action,
Though chaos exist to our sense;
And under all falsehood and faction
God rules in the heart of events!

GIANTS START SCORE IN THE THIRD INNING

STORY OF GAME.

NEW YORK, October 7. Canadian —Press. — The army of baseball writers engaged in following the world's series, have turned almost en masse from their leaning toward Senators and are now predicting a Giant victory, following the 6-4 triumph of McGraw's team yesterday.

Unless the Washington infield returns to drum-tight perfection of the first two games it is freely predicted that New York might accomplish its victory in straight contests, which would end the series here Wednesday and make a return to the Capital City unnecessary.

McGraw has nominated Virgil Barnes to lead his men in the fourth game to-day. Mogridge will start for Washington with Ogden in reserve, and if these two fail to stop the consistent advance of New York, Walter Johnson, the Senators' pitching ace will rally his mates in the last ditch stand, as dramatic probably as in the opening game.

Manager Harris announced that Peckingpaugh would probably be able to play to-day.

The line-up follows:

1st Innings—

Senators—Jackson threw out McNeely; Harris struck out on a third called strike; Frisch came in fast, and took Rice's high hopper and tagged him out.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Giants — Lindstrom was given base on balls. Mogridge seemed to have little command of ball. It was pitch out, but Lindstrom did not go down. Harris threw out Frisch, Lindstrom going to second. Lindstrom scored when Bluege took Young's grounder, and threw wildly past first base. Young halted at first. McNeely took in Kelly's long drive and Young went to second on the catch. Meusel walked. Harris took Wilson's weak splash and threw him out.

2nd Innings—

Senators — Goslin singled into centre; Kelly took Judge's high fly. Bluege beat out an infield hit by fast running. Goslin going to second. Lindstrom threw out Ruel, Goslin going to third, and Bluege to second. Miller was thrown out at first. Lindstrom to Kelly.

No runs, two hits, no errors.

Giants—Jackson sent up high fly to McNeely; Harris took Gowdy's hot smash, and got him easily at first. Barnes was given base on balls. Linstrom singled into right, Barnes going to second. Frisch fell for a slow ball and popped to Harris.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

3rd Innings—

Senators — Mogridge went out on strikes; McNeely singled to left; Harris singled into right field, McNeely going to third and Harris to second; Goslin hit home run into right field stands, scoring McNeely and Harris ahead of him. Judge went out, Kelly to Barnes.

Three runs, three hits, no errors.

Giants — Crowd cheered Goslin as he walked to field. Young went out on strikes. Kelly also struck out. Goslin went away back to fence and took Meusel's long drive.

4th Innings—

Senators — Bluege singled past Lindstrom; Ruel sacrificed; Barnes to Kelly. Meusel took Miller's fly. Mogridge struck out.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Two runs, three hits, no errors.

Giants — Terry batted for Barnes, Harris threw out Terry at the initial bag; Lindstrom bunted safely; Rice took Frisch's fly; Young forced Lindstrom; Harris to Bluege.

6th Innings—

Senators—Baldwin went into the box for the Giants; Bluege sent up a high fly to Frisch; Jackson made a nice play on Ruels grounder, and got his man at first. Miller flied to Wilson.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Giants—Kelly got a long hit into centre field for two bases. Bluege threw out Muesel. Kelly going to third. Kelly scored when Bluege threw out Wilson. Bluege also threw out Jackson.

LABOR MEETING WELL ATTENDED

MacDonald Scored Communism Which He Declared Had In It Nothing Practicable.

LONDON, Oct. 7 — (Canadian Press).—Addressing the 24th annual conference of the Labor Party at Queen's Hall to-day, Premier Ramsay Macdonald scored communism which he declared had in it nothing practicable.

"It is the product of Czarism and war brutality," he said, "and as such we will have nothing to do with it. Unless we are prepared to engage against this, we had better put up our shutteres." The Premier's speech had been heralded as likely to throw deal of light on present political situation in England.

"Before this conference is over we shall know what fates have in store for us," he said, "depend upon this, we shall surrender nothing and if there be an election responsibility is not ours.

When it is time for governments to dissolve, thousands of men and women gathered here, will return to their posts and sleep in their armour until the word is given that Labor Party, is to take field, not to defend itself, but to attack its enemies."

Dealing with proposed votes of censure the Premeir said the conservatives had framed straight forward motion for censure but that an amendment had been conceived in spirit of mediavel crookedness and torture.

ARRESTED CANADIAN.

Alleged To Be Owner Of British Rum Ship Fred B.

NEW YORK, October 7 (Canadian Press) — The arrest and extradition of a Canadian citizen, alleged to be the owner of the seized British rum ship Fred B. for trial in this country on a charge of conspiring to violate the laws of the United States, was requested by R. Q. Merrick, Divisional Prohibition Director.

The wealthy Canadian, whose extradition Mr. Merrick requests, is known to the Prohibition agents as the "Bootleg King," and is believed to be the backer of an alleged $10-000.000 smuggling ring.

He is now in Montreal.

MORTALITY DECREASED.

Mortality Rate In Canada During Past Ten Years Has Gone Down.

OTTAWA, October 7 (Canadian Press). — Contrary to impressions of five years ago, the mortality rate in Canada has decreased during the pas ten years, declared C. C. Ferguson, of Winnipeg, general manager of a prominent Canadian life assurance company in an address here last night.

"The low death-rate during the past four or five years has astonished insurance companies, and was quite unexpected," he said "Five years ago most companies were figuring on a higher rate due to war causes and effects of the influenza epidemic."

Mr. Ferguson was inclined to attribute the low death-rate to the great advance in medical science in recent years.

More bicycles were made and sold in America in the last year than ever before. They seem less because, lost in the swarm of autos, they do not attract attention.

Among boys ther's as great longing for a "bike" as when father was a lad. Youth prefers a means of locomotion propelled by youth's own power. The auto, requiring little effort, is for the older and lazier generation.

THE TRIAL OF SIDNEY JONES NEARS AN END

Crown Council McCarthy Finished His Address To Judge This Morning.

DEFENSE STARTED.

Trial Is Expected To Conclude Late This Afternoon.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—The trial of Sidney H. Jones, Home Bank auditor, on charges of making false statements of the affairs of the bank, will conclude this afternoon. D. L. McCarthy, Crown counsel, finished his address to Judge Coatsworth this morning, and R. H. Greer, defence counsel, got well started with his address. Mr. McCarthy said that the audit made by the accused of the bank's finances was twenty per cent. audit and that other eighty per cent. would only have taken a few minutes to have done. Mr. Greer argued that the charges as laid do not concern his client at all. There is no obligation, he stated, in the Bank Act to have Jones make a report to the Minister of Finance, and yet it was on his alleged report to the Minister that the charge was laid. He contended that Jones' obligation was to make the report to the shareholders, and that the Crown laid no charges on this report.

Mr. McCarthy declared that Jones had deliberately refrained from getting required information and had approved and concurred in the directors' report as sent to the Minister of Finance. He also declared that the report was not in accordance with the books of the bank and pointed out several items of loans, etc., where he contended the books showed a different situation than that reported in the annual statement.

Mr. Greer said that the directors alone were responsible for an annual statement and that they had gratuitously added to their report statement of the auditor without his consent or knowledge. Accused, he said, never knew the statement went to Ottawa nor had he given his permission for its use as a statement to Ottawa. If the charge was a false report to the shareholders the Crown might have made the case to which there would be another defence, but the charge was not that of making false reports to the shareholders, and therefore the Crown case failed. The next part of Mr. Greer's address was taken up with quoting dozens of authorities on the proper meaning of the term "wilful negligence," and he had not completed this phase of his argument when the court adjourned at noon.

RYAN CLOSELY GUARDED.

Has Now a Job in the Mail Bag Department at Portsmouth.

KINGSTON, October 7 (Special to The Examiner) — Red Ryan, regarded as one of the most dangerous criminals in Canada, and who figured in the sensational getaway of the five convicts at the Portsmouth Penitentiary over a year ago, now has a job in the mail bag department at the Penitentiary, and is mingling with other convicts after a long stay in confinement

The authorities are taking no great chances on Red, however, and he is being closely guarded.

SETTELL CASE OPENS.

Opening Of Case Will Take Place This Afternoon At Conference.

TORONTO, Oct. 7. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial treasurer announced to-day that letter to Sir Adam Beck, written by his former secretary, Clarence Settell who is now under arrest, charged with fraudently cashing a check for $29,000 purporting to be signed by Sir Adam Beck, chairman, and W. W. Pope, secretary of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission will be opened at conference this afternoon at which Premier Ferguson, members of government, including the Hydro Chief will be present.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"REJECTED WOMAN," COLORFUL STORY OF MODERN LIFE.

Here is a superb romance starting in a small Canadian village, achieving its climax amid the gaities of New York and unfolding its happy ending in the small town home of the heroine. With underlying seriousness of motive, with many truly emotional scenes, John Lynch, the author, and Albert Parker, the director, have nevertheless managed to invest this production with all of the gayety and beauty of modern life. "The Rejected Woman" is the latest feature of the Distinctive Pictures Corporation.

Alma Rubens takes the part of a beautiful, imaginative girl, Diane DuPrez, Nagel takes the role of John Leslie, one of those wayward sons of fabulously rich fathers. Meeting John in romantic circumstances in her native village, Diane follows him to New York, anticipating that there their romance will be renewed. But she discovers that John has almost forgotten her, and has plunged once more into the brilliant restaurant and night club life to which he is accustomed. There he play with gorgeously gowned society women, and dancing girls, and Diane realizes after one crushing humiliation in Sherry's restaurant that she too must have finery and culture if she is to have the love which is essential to her very being. She gets this finery and this culture and she wins and marries John—but at what a price. We must not reveal here the pitfall into which the girl steps or of how the author works out her salvation, but suffice to say that in this picture we have a real photo play.

RICE LAKE SCENIC AT ROYAL.

Among an interesting assortment of shorter features on last night's programme at the Royal a number of Peterborough citizens had an opportunity of seeing themselves in the movies. Chris Speaker and our own folks were caught by the camera at Rice Lake. This will be repeated to-night. Also the new Leather Pushers and Lige Conelly in "Rough and Ready," a laughable comedy.

"SQUIBS," BRITAIN'S QUEEN OF HAPPINESS, AT ROYAL THURS., FRI., SAT.

It is something to be proud of that the record for repeated encores for a film character has been achieved by a British film artist, Betty Balfour. The public has clamored for her "Squibs" so loudly and so often that no less than four full-sized adventures have been produced. Of course everybody remembers "Me and My Gal," and the first "Squibs," then "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweeps," and now "Squibs' Honeymoon," which will be at the Royal Thursday, Friday and Saturday. With "Squibs' Honeymoon," Betty finishes the adventures of the famous character, and in this picture Squibs makes her logical farewell to the public before going into a well-earned retirement on the threshold of strictly private bliss.

AT THE CAPITOL.

There was a big crowd at the Capitol Theatre last evening, to see Robert B. Mantell in "Under the Red Robe." Such an unusual opportunity as the one afforded patrons of the Grand and the Capitol rarely presents itself. At the Grand, Mr. Mantell played Cardinal Richelieu in person, last Friday evening. At the Capitol, yesterday and to-day he is seen on the screen in the role of the same great French statesman, in his first screen production.

A younger characterization is given the Cardinal on the silver sheet. Mantell plays him with a dark wig and imperial, in contrast to the white locks that accompanied his stage presentation. And his robing is different. The dignified impression of benevolent strength imparted to the spoken role of Richelieu gives way on the screen to an atmosphere of somewhat ruthless power. Mantell on the stage is a wonderful actor, but his film work is not at all out of the ordinary. The two-dimension limitations of the screen and the fact that all impressions depend on visualizations alone, without any chance to use one of the actor's greatest assets, his mobile voice, hamper him to a great extent. However, as a first picture, his presentation of Richelieu is admirable, and affords a wonderful opportunity to his stage following to study the different methods used in the spoken and the silent drama.

"Under the Red Robe," filmed from Stanley J. Wyeman's novel of the same name, is one of those vivid historical romances that teem with life and color and action. The plot centers about the efforts of the Duc d'Orleans, half-brother to the Thirteenth Louis of France, to capture the throne held by the weak monarch. Plot and counter-plot, intrigue and cabal and dissimulation, accompany the story, placed in an age when men were ruffling gallants, swaggering in lace ruffles and plumed hats, fighting for the turn of a lady's eyebrow.

Gil de Berault is the hero, a swashbuckler, surnamed the "Black Death," because of his skill as a swordsman, held in the service of the Cardinal and set upon the mission of bringing to Richelieu one of the traitors to the King, the Count de Cocheforet. Alma Rubens is the lovely heroine, Renee, the sister of Cocheforet, and enlisted with him in the cause of the Duc d'Orleans. In the pursuit of her brother, Gil falls in love with her, and many perilous adventures fall to his lot in his attempts to serve the Cardinal, and please his lady love. Fierce sword encounters, swift rides and daring deeds ensue, all set in the midst of scenes that have to do with the effete Court life and also the rural life of the France of the seventeeth century. Details are carried out minutely.

Mantell plays the role of Armand du Plessis, the Cardinal Duc de Richelieu, with his power and state, his retinue of servants and his pet white cats. A fine cast supports him, including his wife, Genevieve Hamper, playing a minor role, Ian McLaren as Louis Thirteenth and Mary McLaren as the queen, Anne of Austria. The introduction of the cast is achieved in effective fashion, their names, screen titles and pictures succeeding each other in turn as a preface to the production.

The picture, which is a lengthy one, is preceded by slides descriptive of the advantages of Fire Prevention Week, and a comedy that has to do mainly with the sufferings of a youth forced to impersonate the goat god Pan in an amateur theatrical production.

STAN LAUREL AT CAPITAL IN NEW COMEDY, TO-MORROW.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION TO ATTEND CAPITOL THURSDAY EVENING

All loge chairs at the Capital theatre have been reserved for the Teachers' Convention which will attend in a body on Thursday evening to see William J. Locke's story, "The Mountebank," or, as it is known on the screen, "The Side Show of Life." Ernest Torrence and Anna Q. Nilsson have the leading roles. Several additional educational reels are being added to the programme on that night, for the entertainment of the teachers.

LOCKE'S "THE MOUNTEBANK" SCREENED BY PARAMOUNT.

Film fans will be more than interested in the announcement that the Herbert Brenon Paramount production of "The Side Show of Life" is coming to the Capitol next Wednesday and Thursday.

The picture is an adaptation of William J. Locke's justly famous novel, "The Mountebank," and Ernest Torrence, featured with Anna Q. Nilsson in the production, has the principal role.

Having a reputation for truth we cannot truthfully say that when William L. Locke wrote his famous novel "The Mountebank," from which the screen play was adapted, he had Torrence in mind for the title role, but it's dollars to doughnuts that he could not have written a part more suited to Torrenc's talent and temperament if he had! The story of the clown who joins the army as a private during the war, rises to the rank of brigadier-general and finds himself at demobilization in love with a titled English woman, but after all, just a clown—can you just picture Torrence in such a role?

Every bit of the comedy and pathos that has made so many thousands of people laugh and cry over the book has been put on the screen with all the mastery of Herbert Brenon.

AT THE REGENT.

Gertrude Olmsted, the Edith Carr of Gene Stratton-Porter's personally supervised production of her book, "A Girl of the Limberlost," which has just been released and which is to be shown in this city within a few days, has the distinction of being one of the ten young men and women, chosen last spring by the "Wampas" as the coming stars.

The "Wampas" is the noted Los Angeles organization of studio publicity writers, than whom there is declared to be no greater or more capable group of "pickers of coming stars" in the picture world.

Prior to her engagement for a leading role in "A Girl of the Limberlost," Miss Olmsted has had many featured parts, the latest of these being as the leading woman of "Cameo Kirby" in which she scored a distinctive hit. In the part of Edith Carr, in Mrs. Porter's story she has created a distinctly natural and human character of the snobbish and pampered daughter of a wealthy family—one of that sort of persons, each member of the audience can count among friends or acquaintances.

"A Girl of the Limberlost," which is showing as the feature of the programme at the Regent Theatre, is declared by picture reviewers as being one of the outstanding photodramatic hits of the year. Made under the direction of James Leo Meehan, this story of a girl's struggle for an education in spite of the opposition from an embittered mother, has an appeal both to young and old.

SURPRISE PARTY HELD LAST NIGHT

Employees Of Lock Company Present Miss Hobbins With Token.

Last night about 8.30 a number of the employees of the Peterborough Lock Co. gathered at the home of Mrs. M. Brady to present Miss Carmelite Hobbins with several handsome pieces of "old colony silver" and a pair of oxidized silver salt and peppers, the gift of the employees. Miss Hobbins was taken very much by surprise when she arrived about 8.45 to find a number of her fellow employees and friends gathered in the parlour. Some time was spent in music and singing, then Miss Hobbins was invited to the dining room where a balloon full of confetti was arraigned for the occasion. Miss V. Sullivan read an address and at the proper time Mr. D. Campanaro presented her with the gift, and after the presentation Mr. Joseph Hobbins showered her with confetti. Miss Hobbins made a suitable reply and assured them one and all that she would never forget them.

The address was as follows:

Dear Miss Hobbins,— Allow us, the employees of the Peterborough Lock Co., on the eve of your anticipated marriage, to express to you our regret at losing so good a friend. But what is our loss is another's gain. We feel that we could not let this occasion pass without showing some outward sign of our love and appreciation for the many excellent qualities that you possess to such a marked degree. Therefore we ask you to accept this as a small token of our love, and our sincerest wish is that as the years go by, that in using them they may bring back many happy memories of associations together. In conclusion let us one and all assure you that it is our dearest wish that your married life may be one long and happy one.

Signed on behalf of the employees of the Peterborough Lock Co.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and after lunch was served the party dispersed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

MAYOR TURNER HAS OFFENDED HAMILTON

Mayor Jutten Resents Reference To Slackness In Tax Collector's Office.

HAMILTON, Oct. 7—Mayor Jutten and members of the Council have resented the criticism levelled at Hamilton by civic heads of Peterboro'. The Mayor of Peterboro' was credited with saying that Hamilton's disclosures were due to having tax rolls for two years on the go at the same time. This was an erroneous presumption, Mayor Jutten said, as tax rolls for four and five years back are always active here.

Mayor Turner made his reference to the Hamilton debate when discussing the proposed changes in the Peterboro Tax Collector's Office. His Worship remarked on the difficulty in orderly accounting under such circumstances and expressed the opinion that trouble such as resulted in Hamilton, Halifax, Belleville and Lindsay is the direct outcome of allowing the tax collector to handle two or more tax rolls at once.

DR. HOWARD TAYLOR.

Interesting Address At St. Paul's Church On Monday Evening.

"A Captive Among Brigands" was the subject chosen by Dr. Howard Taylor, of the Inland China Mission, for his lecture at St. Paul's Church last evening before a gathering of interested listeners.

The well-known speaker, who has lectured to heathens in 15 different provinces of China, opened his lecture with a short prayer for different people in the Orient and for the end of the great war which is now raging near Shanghai.

The speaker said that if you were to take every city, town and village in this Dominion and multiply its population by 50 you would get the actual population of China. This will give you some idea of the large masses of heathens that the missionaries have to minister to. It is their faith in God that carries them on and were it not for such strong faith in God the Missionary Societies in China to-day would be a complete failure, as time and time again their prayers and faith in God's strength has carried them through perils that nothing else would. To-day, the speaker said that there were about 500,000 Protestant Christians in China, while ten years from to-day there will be 1,000,000 Christians in this eastern land, that not a great many years ago had never been trod by a white man. Dr. Hudson Taylor, father of the speaker, was the first man to attempt to form a mission in central China, and through faith in God he made it a huge success. His father then prepared eighteen men to go into the nine interior provinces of China that had never seen a white man. It was a risky piece of business for these eighteen men, but they have had great success in their quest to civilize and Christianize many of the once heathen people believing in and worshipping idols, made of stone and trimmed with gold and other precious metals. Dr. Taylor told of one palace where the people worshipped an idol that stood forty feet high. He said that the roof of this palace was made of pure gold and that he crawled up on the next building and took a picture of this roof, which would be worth millions in this country, but was like stone to the heathens.

He told of many other interesting and exciting incidents happening in this far east land, one of which was when he and his wife, who is also a great worker in missionary lines, were captured by about thirty bandits, and of being taken to a deserted village, where he and his wife were kept for a considerable length of time. His wife was liberated by the king of the bandits, but he was kept there for about six weeks in which he preached many sermons to the once fierce tribe of bandits who would kill as a pastime, but when he left he had converted a great number of these outlaws. His stories of hardships in this land were very interesting throughout. He was assisted with the service by Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's Church and Rev. J. Douglas Paterson of All Saints' Church, who acted as chairman of the meeting.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.
None of us have a monopoly of knowledge, spiritual or otherwise; but we can speak of that which we do know, and testify to that which we have experienced. Those of us who have been led out of error are in a position to combat similar error. Sunday I listened to a discourse by a man having the prefix "Rev." to his name. (The reason why man takes to himself what belongs to God only I think is quite apparent). In his talk, he endeavored to make his hearers believe that when a man came to Jesus for salvation from sin, that he made his outward life right, but the heart was not cleansed. This is surely an absurdity, when we consider that the heart is the fountain. If the fountain is impure the streams issuing from that fountain will also surely be impure and vice versa. We are not dealing with this "Rev." but only with the error preached by him. Speaking with all due respect, I would say if Jesus did not make a man's heart clean, when he surrendered to and trusted in him, then he is not worthy of our trust. But he is worthy of our trust. And the man that surrenders to him and does what he wants him to do proves this so. M. T. BUTCHER.

Crew Of Rum Running Schooner Manned Pumps For a Week.

HALIFAX, Oct. 7. — (Canadian Press).—In an exhausted condition after manning pumps of their vessel continuously for a week, in order to keep her afloat, the crew of a rum running schooner, Catherine Mary, piloted their damaged vessel into Halifax Harbor, this morning. THREE BOYS PLEAD GUILTY OF THEFTS

Crimes Make Them Liable To Life Imprisonment Belmont Man Up.

Three young men, 16 and 17 years of age, were charged with five offences involving breaking and entering houses and buildings, and pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning. They were remanded one week for sentence.

The charges are:

September 26, by night, breaking and entering the dwelling of Thomas Turcott, 494 Cross Street, and stealing $50.

March 16, 1924, by night, breaking and entering the dwelling of Sydney Gibbs, 787 Water Street, and stealing $10.

September 16, 1923, by night, breaking and entering the dwelling of Mr. Edwards, 506 McDonnel Street, and stealing $42.

December 9, 1923, at night, breaking and entering the office of Canadian Woollens, Ltd., McDonnel Street, and stealing $100.

Between September 27 and 28, 1924, at night, breaking and entering the dwelling of N. H. Sutton, 543 Park Street, and stealing a rifle, three golf sticks and a number of golf balls.

Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton remarked that the youthful thieves had made themselves liable to life imprisonment about five times each, and in the interests of the boys themselves, asked an adjournment for one week to give interested parties an opportunity to look into the whole case.

It was remarked that the crime of breaking into a dwelling-house by night is one of the most serious for which punishment is provided in the statute books.

$5,000 Bail Named.

J. C. Davidson, Belmont Township, was charged with stealing iron, belting, pulleys and other material to the value of $250 from Cordova Mines, Ltd. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., declared he had an affidavit showing that the value of the stolen property is $5,000 as junk and $10,000 to the company. J. F. Strickland appeared for the defendant.

After a discussion, in which the Crown Attorney asked for bail at $10,000, Magistrate O. A. Langley remanded the prisoner for a week on bail of $5,000, with two sureties of

LIBERALS HOLD NEW BRUNSWICK SEAT IN HOUSE

W. B. Snowball Returned By 500 Majority In Northumberland By-election.

GRAHAM'S COMMENT.

Minister Regards Result As Great Liberal Victory Against Sectionalism.

NEWCASTLE, N.B., Oct. 8. — (By Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—W. B. Snowball, Liberal, was elected over C. P. Hickey, Conservative, by over 500 majority in the by-election held here Tuesday to fill the vacancy in the Dominion House, caused by the death of the late Hon. John Morrissey.

The election was the culmination of a strenuous campaign in which the outstanding leaders of both parties participated.

The Liberals were represented by the premier, Right Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, Hon. E. Lapointe, Hon. Charles Murphy, Hon. A. B. Copp, and Hon. P. J. Veniot and the Conservatives by Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Senator Gideon Robertson, J. B. M. Baxter, M.P., and A. J. Doucett, M.P.

Sectional Cries Failed This Time, Says Graham

OTTAWA, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press.)— "The people of Canada, particularly the Liberal party, will welcome to public life a man of the outstanding ability of Mr. Snowball," said Hon. George P. Graham, minister of railways, and acting-Prime Minister, in the absence of Premier King in the west, in commenting on the result of the Northumberland by-election last night.

"The result," he said, "is a great victory for those who believe in a broad Canadianism and a credit to the intelligence of the people of Northumberland who refused to be carried away by the sectional cries which have been more successful in former by-elections in the maritime provinces.

"Canada with her immense stretch, of territory from Atlantic to Pacific with a comparatively sparse population has so many diverse interests that it is no easy task at any time to successfully guide her affairs with that unity so essential to the well-being of any nation. Post-war conditions and the unsettled feleing which permeates all countries makes the task of the Canadian government more difficult than under ordinary conditions. Appeals which can only result in setting one part of Canada against the other are very mischievious and it is to be hoped that the election in Northumberland will put an end to these cries which never were and never can be productive of any good. The government is doing everything in its power to conduct its business and its legislation to bring about better conditions in the maritime provinces and in all of Canada. They welcome Mr. Snowball as a splendid addition to the representation of the provinces by the Atlantic."

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR VISITS PEMBROKE

Holds Up Vision of Citizenship to Children and Grants Holiday.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Oct. 8.—Despite a drizzling rain, hundreds here yesterday welcomed Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt, who with Col. Alex. Fraser and Mayor J. L. Murray of Renfrew, arrived by motor here in the afternoon. Patrols of Boy Scouts formed a guard of honor from the sidewalk to the platform from which the Lieut.-Governor of Ontario addressed a mass meeting of school children.

Mayor L. S. Barrand extended a formal welcome.

In his address to the school children of the town Mr. Cockshutt said in part: "What I want to bring home to you is the fact that you here before me are the men and women of to-morrow, and it is necessary for you to realize that the most important thing we have to do to-day is to preserve our natural resources, build up a character of truth and trustfulness that you may grow to be true citizens and worthy of this great Canada of ours, whose forests we must protect by re-forestation so we can continue to carry on in a wealthy country."

The declaration of a school holiday on Wednesday brought hearty cheers from the school children.

Inspection of cadets, scouts and girl guides was then made, after which the Lieut.-Governor held an informal reception before leaving.

LIFE.

Is what you make it. Neglect often makes it dull. Especially when you fail to heed the warning from 'heavy' aching eyes. "Nervous debility" often arises from poor vision, your efficiency is reduced—things do not seem bright. Eye strain does this. See W. H. Lacey, Optometrist, 410 George street. Phone 1160.

To Our Patrons—

The Capitol takes particular pride in announcing the presentation, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of one of the most romantic dramas ever offered on the screen—

"Captain Blood"

by RAFAEL SABATINI, author of "THE SEA HAWK" and "SCARAMOUCHE." "CAPTAIN BLOOD" is the story of an escaped English convict who turned pirate, becoming the scourge of the seas, later, winning his pardon by gallantry against the French in the Napoleonic wars. Vivid sea fights, shown in the picture, are among the most remarkable scenes ever produced. J. WARREN KERRIGAN, hero of "THE COVERED WAGON," has the leading role. This production will be offered at regular admission prices and will undoubtedly be found to be one of the most entertaining pictures ever shown in Peterboro.

JOHN TROTT IS COMMITTED FOR TRUMAN MURDER

Two Italian Mine Workers Related Prisoner's Boast Of Killing Policeman.

TRIAL AT WELLAND.

Trott Met Witnesses at South Porcupine—Wanted Them To Sell Liquor.

WELLAND, Ont., Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—John Trott was committed for trial here Tuesday by Magistrate J. H. Campbell, of St. Catharines, on a charge of murdering Constable Josephy Truman at Thorold on December 17th, 1922. The prisoner showed considerable nervousness when evidence was given by Joe Caponia and John Strangis, two Italian mine workers of South Porcupine, who testified that Trott had tried to have them engage in the bootlegging business there last July, and that he admitted to them he shot a policeman at Thorold. The men's testimony was corroborative.

Caponia detailed the following conversation when accosted by Trott—

"What are you fellows doing up there?"—"Working in the mines."

Known By Police.

"Can you fellows handle any booze up there?"—"I have never tried it before, and I don't think so. The police know me pretty well, having been working around here so long," was Caponia's reply.

"Well, if you fellows cannot do nothing that I may be able to do something." — "What could you do?"

"Send a couple of bullets if nothing else, same as I did to the policeman at Thorold. He was watching me pretty close there, and one dark night I shot him when there was snow on the ground."

"Did any one see you?" Caponia had asked.

"No, I ran quickly away."

Strangis also testified that Trott admitted to him that he had used a German revolver.

Bought Revolver.

James Fera, Italian theatrical man, testified to having purchased a revolver from Trott in the summer of 1923 for $15.

Former Provincial Officer Stockbridge, stationed at Thorold at the time of the murder, told of getting the steel-nosed bullets that were used upon Truman.

Other witnesses were Night Watchman Morley, the only person to see the shooting. Dr. McMillan, who attended the victim, and Alex. Anderson, who had seen Trott the night before the murder, and had been accompanied by Trott to the latter's house to look at some furniture which Trott said he desired to sell.

Morley did not identify Trott as the man who did the shooting as he had not been sufficiently close when the shots were fired. Caponia and Strangis had no hesitancy in identifying him as the man who admitted the shooting to them.

IRISH WELCOME GERMAN SHIP

HAMBURG, Oct. 8.—When the liner Westphalia recently called at Queenstown, Ireland, to land some passengers the German ship was given an enthusiastic welcome, which was totally unexpected. People at the pier cheered and a delegation headed by the mayor went aboard, extended best wishes of the community and emphasized the friendly relations between the two countries.

Reichstag's End Thought Certain In Berlin Crisis

BERLIN, October 8. — The Cabinet fight in Germany is moving rapidly towards dissolution of the Reichstag, and a new election battle.

The election is seen as the only possible solution of the practical deadlock in inter-party negotiations for the reorganization of the government precipitated by the demand of Stresemann's party, the Nationalists, that they be taken into the Cabinet.

While ostensibly the action of the Stresemann party is based on a promise that they would get Cabinet posts in return for votes to pass the Dawes plan laws, the real issue is the distribution of the burdens under the Dawes plan among the German population.

There is a general feeling in Liberal political circles that Dr. Stresemann is seeking to make himself Chancellor again.

LIQUOR PIRACY TRIAL STAGED IN MONTREAL

Arrest Of Witness Applied For On Charge Of Conspiracy.

MONTREAL, October 8 (Canadian Press). — Application for the arrest of Fred Hansen, of New York City, and a native of Norway, testifying on Tuesday in behalf of Captain Samuel Forde, New England shipmaster, now standing trial for piracy on the high seas, featured the second session of the piracy trial.

Complainants in the case applied for a warrant to arrest Hansen on the ground that as second engineer of the steamer Lutzen, which was pirated off rum-row a year ago, he had conspired with Forde and others to seize the ship and cargo.

The application was contested by defendants on the ground that this was intimidation and calculated to prevent other members of Forde's crew from coming to Montreal to give evidence.

Counsel for the complainants declared that should such members of the crew come here efforts would also be made to have them arrested.

Judge Monet postponed decision until to-day.

TRIPLE LIFE BY MISSING BROKER

Maintained Two Establishments in Newark and Wife In Brooklyn.

TWO MILLION GONE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. — When George R. Christian, missing partner in Day & Houghton, brokers, disappeared with over $2,000,000, he left more than a mere trial of sorrowing partners and creditors, according to the police.

Investigation now reveals:

That Christian left his wife to whom he had been married eighteen years.

That he deserted an establishment in New Jersey presided over by some woman other than his wife.

That there have been children in this New Jersey home who are said to have known Christian as their father.

That he had an expensive 'sweetie' who may be with him at the present time.

Got Trio In Same City.

The intricate mind of the man who rose from poverty to a partnership in one of Wall Street's oldest firms scorned a mere double existence, according to the police.

Christian enjoyed creating difficult problems in the office, so that he could solve them. They say the same holds true in connection with his domestic and private affairs, even his affairs of the heart.

For example:

When Christian asked his wife to put up at a certain Newark hotel, he did it in spite of the fact that it would bring her closer to the side of his life hidden from her. His sweetheart and the woman, with several children, both lived in Newark.

Whether he gathered all with whom he was involved together that he might be able to bid them each farewell without losing time, remains to be seen.

Thousands For Jewels.

One of Christian's old cronies, who knew him as a "gay old dog," said that the woman who had borne Christian children knew he was married, or learned it after her affairs was under way. At any rate, he said, the affair was of many years' standing.

The woman for whom Christian is known to have made large purchases of jewels, it was learned, was a far more costly "luxury" than at first thought. Identification of Christian by one jeweller seems to have refreshed the memory of others.

A certain downtown jeweller now remembers that Christian purchased from him a lavalliere for $3,500. Still another remembers that the missing broker bought a pair of diamond earrings for $2,000.

Mrs. Christian, the wife, is penniless, according to her own statement. Her neighbors in the modest Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, home did not recall that she had ever worn jewels.

A report from the Connecticut town where she is now living has it that Mrs. Christian is outraged by the recent discoveries of her husband's interest in other women.

She could, and did forgive his defalcation. In the face of his disappearance she declared that she still loved him.

But the recent developments have caused a re-action which has left her feeling very unfriendly to the man by whom she stood. The police are now hopeful that she will become a greater assistance in apprehending the missing broker than she has been up to now.

RICHEST BABY DENIED GOOD CRY HER WOOLY JACKET KNIT BY QUEEN

LONDON, October 8. — "Patricia Edwina, stop that crying! Stop pulling at your woolly jacket! Stop kicking your legs out from under the comforter!"

And the richest baby in the world, out for an airing in Hyde Park, obeys her nursemaid.

The woollies she has on came, not from a store, but from the royal knitting needles of Cousin Queen Mary.

Baby is the first-born of Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin and pal of the Prince of Wales, and of Edwina Ashley, heiress of the Cassell millions.

Lord Louis Mountbatten is son of the Marquis of Milford Haven and heir to the wealth of that family. Just how many tens of millions the infant may inherit can only be guessed at.

She was born on 15th February, this year, and christened on 22nd April at the Chapel Royal, St. James' Palace. The Prince of Wales was her principal godfather and Lady Patricia Ramsay, "Princess Pat," her principal godmother.

Patricia Edwina Victoria some day will inherit the fortune of Sir Ernest Cassell, famous Jewish friend of King Edward VII., philanthropist, and one of the wealthiest men England ever had. Cassell was born in Cologne, Germany. He came to England to make his way and started as a clerk in Liverpool at $4.75 a week.

He built and operated railroads in Mexico and Sweden, floated loans for China and Argentina, and put over the great Assouan Dam in Egypt. At his death his wealth was estimated at more than $50,000,000.

Sir Edward was the grandfather of Edwina Ashley, Lady Mountbatten, mother of our richest baby. Before his death his greatest joy was in the tall, blonde, daring, athletic girl. She spent most of her time with him at his historic mansion, Brook House.

The house, some day, will decend to the baby. Baby, in fact, rules a large portion of the house at present, especially since her mama and papa are vacationing in America.

Baby's names are as distinguished as her surroundings. Patricia is after Princess Pat, Edwina after her mother, and Victoria after Princess Victoria, mother of Lord Mountbatten. But what does Patricia Edwina Victoria, the world's richest baby, care about that?

FALL OF SHANGHAI THREATENED TODAY

SHANGHAI, Oct. 8.—The Chekiang Province armies to-day were threatened with the loss of the city of Shanghai for the second time within a month, and were rushing reinforcements southward to check the latest aggressions of their Kiangsu enemies.

The war is costing China $20,000,000 a month and will necessitate heavy borrowing. The foreign banks are not inclined to raise funds for this purpose, thereby throwing the burden on the native banks and upon provincial levies.

Wen Shih Shistaun, formerly Commissioner of Foreign Affairs at Hanking, who came here Saturday night, said that he had been appointed Commissioner of Customs and concurrently Commissioner of Foreign Affairs here to function on behalf of the Peking Government.

This gives to Shanghai two complete sets of Chinese officials, one trying to function outside of the International Settlement and loyal to Generals Lu Yung-hsiang and Ho Feng-lin, and the other inside the Settlement trying to function on behalf of Peking. The latter do not leave the Settlement for fear of arrest and execution by the Chekiang interests.

Commissioner Wen has virtually told the foreign Consuls here that he expects protection and that he does not want interference. Wen also told them that Peking expects the Powers to help in driving the Chekiang generals out of this area if the Powers want to protect the foreign area from fighting.

The Shanghai Consular Corps will meet to-day, and will take action on the situation.

LABOR MEN'S COURT DRESS CRITICIZED

LONDON, October 8 (Canadian Pres Cable). — Will Thorne, Labour M.P., yesterday afternoon at the Labour Party conference here, dealt drastically with various resolutions submitted to the conference by branches of the organisation.

Applause and counter-applause greeted his announcement that six resolutions against ministers of the Labour Government wearing Court dress at certain functions would be merged and discussed by the meeting as one big question.

An announcement was made that the delegates who had offered resolutions on the question of Court dress should meet and agree as to the form the one resolution should take, when one delegate ironically asked if ordinary clothes would do for this meeting of the Labour Party.

Will Thorne indignantly suggested dropping resolutions with reference to the proposed exclusion of Home Secretary Arthur Henderson and Colonial Secretary J. H. Thomas from the Labour Cabinet. He declared: "All the members of the Cabinet are pals and they are going to stick together."

BIG ENROLLMENT AT COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(United Press).—More than 2,000 students, a record, are enrolled in the graduate faculties of political science and philosophy and pure science at Columbia University this fall. There are approximately 3,000 undergraduates enrolled at Columbia.

STANDING OF COMMONS PARTIES IS UNCHANGED

Liberals Have 116 Members In Total Of 234.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8. — The result in Northumberland leaves party standing in the House unchanged. The parties now stand, (excluding the Speaker):

Liberals	116
Progressives	62
Conservatives	50
Labor	2
Independents	2
Total	234

The two vacant seats are Yale, B.C. and West Hastings, Ontario. Both returned Conservatives at the last election. Should they again return Conservatives, the Liberals would be in a minority of two, were all parties on the Opposition side of the House to vote together. The 62 Progressives are inclusive of the so-called "Ginger Group," which broke away from the party caucus last session.

GOULD SUIT TO COST MILLIONS

Most Expensive Private Litigation Ever Known In Any Country.

$10,000 EVERY DAY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The hourly cost of the accounting suit in the $82,000,000 estate of Jay Gould is $2,500, or $10,000 for each four-hour day of the proceedings before Referee James A. O'Gorman, it was estimated Monday by William Wallace, counsel for the estate of George J. Gould. It is the most expensive private litigation ever known in any country in the world, Mr. Wallace said. Although it is impossible to estimate its total cost, Mr. Wallace said it would eventually run into the millions.

The Court has already set $2,000,000 aside from the estate of George J. Gould to defray his share of the trial expense, and Mr. Wallace said he believed that the $10,000 a day estimate understated the actual expense. This figure, he explained, covers the fees of all of the counsel, the allowance for Referee O'Gorman

POLICE ENQUIRY HEARS FRICTION IN DEPARTMENT

Detective Lajoie Alleges Superior Officers Hampered His Hunt For Murderer.

HOSTILE TO HIM.

Montreal Police Were Tipped Off That Bank Car Was To Be Held Up.

MONTREAL, October 8. — The allegations that his superior officer had constantly hampered his efforts to capture the murderer of George Jobin, was made in the course of his testimony before Mr. Justice Coderre by Detective George Lajoie yesterday, at the resumed hearing of the investigation into the affairs of the Montreal police department. Capt. Mercier, of the detective bureau, was the official named by Lajoie in his testimony. Captain Mercier had intervened to throw cold water on Lajoie's investigations, the latter intimated. His story indicated considerable friction in the detective department, Lajoie alleging that both Capts Mercier and Forget were hostile to him.

Other evidence touched on the hold-up up the Bank of Hochelaga collection car last April and the statement of two detectives, the Belanger brothers, nephews of Chief of Police Pierre Belanger, that a garage owner named Falcon had "tipped-off" the police that a hold-up of the collection car was contemplated.

Following this information detectives had followed the car, but when the robbery did not materialize they had ceased giving protection under the belief that the information was incorrect.

Exchanges between counsel, brought from J. P. Lanctot, counsel for the investigation petitioners, the allegation that Captain Mercier had given to Alleyn Tashereau, K. C., counsel for Adelard Delorme, at the first trial, which would discredit the testimony of Detective Lajoie, who had been working on the case.

Efforts to elicit details of the friction between Lajoie and Mercier with regard to Father Delorme case were ruled out by the court since Delorme has yet to stand trial—his third—for the murder of his half brother.

Government Control a Failure

DR. E. I. HART, OF MONTREAL, who will speak at the public MASS MEETING in the GRAND OPERA HOUSE TO-MORROW NIGHT, about Government Control in the province of Quebec, knows whereof he speaks. Be sure and hear him. In a recent public statement he said:

CONDITIONS BAD IN MONTREAL

"On the night of September 20th, 1923, a friend and I visited some 15 taverns in different parts of Montreal. Taverns are licensed to sell beer only, but of any strength and by the bottle or glass, the customers drinking at little tables, often in compartments that accommodate four persons. In some of these places we found 100 men, 85 men, 75, 60, 45, etc. More than 80 per cent. were young men ranging from 18 to 30 years Fully 25 per cent. of those we saw were in a maudlin, foolish condition. Many were just able to walk out of the tavern—some had to be helped.

"The tavern keepers whom we consulted; assured us business was good and improving. One man said he would be obliged to double the seating capacity of his place which now seats 100.

"In one tavern alone, in the ten minutes that we were there, about 150 men came and went.

LIQUOR IN THE HOME

"Those who know conditions in Quebec cannot exaggerate them. DRINKING IS GREATLY ON THE INCREASE AMONG ALL CLASSES. The number of homes that store liquor, or purchase it, is multiplying. Women patrons are becoming very numerous."

AND THIS IS THE LIQUOR CONTROL SYSTEM SOME FOLKS ARE URGING ONTARIO TO ADOPT!

12,048 PEOPLE "DEAD DRUNK".

It is estimated that in Montreal alone, there are some 40 Government Stores, and over 500 licensed places, such as groceries, taverns, restaurants, hotels, cafes, clubs etc.

According to A. Geoffrion who presides over the Recorder's Court in Montreal, in the last two years 12,048 persons have been arrested and brought into that court for "LYING DRUNK IN A PUBLIC STREET OR PUBLIC PLACE" of the city. These 12,048 persons arrested in two years, were not just maundering drunk, nor singing drunk, nor shouting drunk, nor fighting drunk, not staggering drunk, but helplessly, dead drunk, "lying drunk in a public street or public place."

It was moved and seconded that this matter be left with the mayor to see what arrangements could be made.

This was granted.

Mr. Ed. Narrow wanted the Council to furnish two planks, 8 feet long, to repair the platform of the weigh scales.

No action was taken.

FRIENDS SETTELL HARDLY NEW HIM

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—In response to written request of Sir Adam Beck, Chairman of The Provincial Hydro Electric Commission, and Minister without portfolio in the Ferguson administration, the Ontario Government will make complete formal investigation of "Insinuations of wrong doing", contained in mysterious 20-page letter written to Sir Adam by his former secretary, E. C. Settell. The form of investigation, whether by Royal Commission or othewise, will be determined in full cabinet council of the Government at Queen's Park this morning.

The letter that Settell said he spent many evenings in writing and which was enclosed for remailing purposes in money packages sent to Montreal, was opened in Premier's Office yesterday, with Premier Ferguson, Acting Attorney General Price, and Sir Adam Beck in attendance. Its contents formed subject of deliberations of these three government members during the whole of the latter part of the afternoon at Parliament Buildings. In early part of evening between Hon. Mr. Price and Premier Ferguson at Premier's residence, and then again between Mr. Price, Mr. Ferguson, Sir Adam Beck, Chief Hydro Engineer, F. A. Gaby, and Hydro Solicitor, Hon. I. B. Lucas, at Parliament Buildings, until late at night.

Settell's letter to Sir Adam, which is to be the basis of the Government investigation, was not made public last night.

"I am a heart-broken man," declared Clarence Settell to-day, as he paced his cell nervously, constantly running his hands through his hair.

Friends of Settell would scacely know him as he appeared to-day when interviewed by a reporter in the presence of his guard and Governor Lalonde, from behind a steel grill work. Unshaven, with a five-day growth of beard, he has lost all his former joviality, and is restless and broken in spirit.

Settell was very much concerned over the twenty page letter he sent to Sir Adam, which it was reported here would be read by Sir Adam in Toronto yesterday. The inference the reporter took from the interview was that Settell was sorry he had written to Sir Adam, outlining the things that are contained in the letter He also wondered if Sir Adam would come and see him, and suggested he would like to see the Hydro chairman.

Is Promised a Shave

Close watch is being kept over Settell by Governor Lalonde, who promised Settell he could be shaved to-day. "I would like to get out on bail; this is the toughest place any person could be put in," Settell stated.

He has received several private telegrams through the governor, also letter from a Toronto woman, addressed "My Darling Clary". It was not signed.

An interesting angle to Settell's detention is that he is booked at the jail under the charge of "forgery and uttering," although at the police court clerk's office the charge is false pretences and fraud. Crown Attorney Ballard told the reporter he had received no instructions from Toronto as yet to lay any further charges.

The reporter asked Settell about the genuineness of the letter of recommendation, found among his effects, and purporting to be signed by Sir Adam Beck. The letter read as follows:

A High "Recommend."

"To whom it may concern.

"I accepted with a great deal of personal regret your resignation from the staff after service, extending over a period of twenty years.

"Your advance during that time has been due not alone to your absolute integrity, which has been tested many times, but also to your unfailing readiness to discharge every duty entrusted to you, not alone with prompt despatch, but with a brilliancy that I have no hesitation in saying I had hoped would have placed you in the front rank of the young men of this country. I am sure that not only myself but the entire staff will feel your departure keenly, and in order to give recognition to your outstanding services to the Commission a resolution has been unanimously adopted by the board authorizing a payment to you of two years' salary as an appreciation of your faithful services.

"With every good wish for your future success, I am,

"Yours sincerely,

"A. BECK,

"Chairman."

This letter was written on the stationery of the Ontario Hydro Commission.

Signature Genuine, Letter Not.

"Is the signature genuine?" asked the reported. "Yes, but the letter is not," replied Settell. "I got Sir Adam to sign a sheet of paper one day in a hurry as he was leaving the office. It was a blank and I filled in the letter."

Yesterday Messrs. Hugill and Hanna, solicitors from the head office of the Hydro Commission in Toronto, called at the jail and had a twenty-minute conference with Settell. They declined to state what their visit was about and Settell told friends the case was a "personal one."

"I have nothing to say," stated Mr. Hanna when seen by a reporter. Mr. Hugill and Mr. Hanna called just as J. D. Sullivan, Settell's solicitor, was talking to Settell.

Settell is unable to sleep without medical stimulant prescribed by Dr. Greenway.

"Have you any messages for your friends in Toronto?" the reporter asked him. "No, just tell them not to give me up, there is something good left in me yet. Give the Osler ball team my best wishes. I hope they beat Galt to-day."

Armed with a sealed letter written by E. C. Settell, alleged cheque falsifier, J. L. Sullivan, he prisoner's counsel, yesterday afternoon took train for Toronto, where he will deliver the letter in person to Acting Attorney-General Price.

Th letter contains a heart-broken appeal from the prisoner for reconsideration of his request for bail.

It points out that none of the money secured is now missing, and that the prisoner even has a favourable balance. He owns a house in Toronto valued at approximately $8,000, of which more than half is clear of encumbrance.

The prisoner's aged mother has offered to put up every cent for bail, she can raise about $25,000, but the local Crown Attorney, so far, has refused to reconsider his "No Bail Mandate."

The wife and one other woman have sent messages asking Settell if he desired them to come to Hamilton. In each case he has replied that he prefers to be alone in his trouble.

Local police have secured a photographic copy of the cheque cashed by Settell, and this they are bringing down to Toronto. It will be presented to W. W. Pope, and if necessary, to Sir Adam Beck.

The future course of the case will depend largely on whether or not these Hydro officials declare the signatures authentic.

Interest locally centres about the documents found in Clarence Settell's possession. Foremost among them is a 22-page typewritten letter to Sir Adam Beck. Whether it had been the intention of Settell to forward this in due course, or whether it had been meant to be found on him if arrested, is a problem the local police will not hazard answering. Exclusive information is contained in the following announcement of the contents of the letter:

It is addressed to Sir Adam, and though all its many pages, attempts to show that Settell in his opinion, was creditor to the ydro Commission of an amount equalling $29,925 for "expenses of entertainment." This amount of money, claimed Settell had been spent by him for the purposes of furthering the interests of the Hydro in entertaining. He compiled his figures in a statement in which he charges the Commission $15 per week during the years of his employment. For good measure he added compound interest throughout.

This letter is now in the hands of Police Chief Coulter for the use of the crown.

Proof that Settell was working on a well laid plan, one which he had been considering for some time, is claimed by another letter found in his possession.

It cancels the sailing already booked by Settell, or "Dell," September 6.

LINDSAY, October 8. — In view of the thouble certain municipalities are experiencing in connection with outstanding tax rolls, it might be stated that Lindsay got away from th's trouble some years ago, and as a result everything works smoothly in this department of the civic government.

It was during Mayor Bert Mclean's regime that orders went forth to the effect that at no time would more than one roll be allowed in the collector's hands.

This has been strictly adhered to, and has resulted each year in a satisfactory cleanup of the taxes, every cent that it was possible to collect having been turned in.

The tax roll for 1923 must be in the hands of the Council next Monday night.

RECORD ACTIVITY IN GRAIN HAULING

Business Locally Over Both Lines Was Never So Heavy.

LINDSAY, October 8. — Never in the history of grain hauling operations on the C.N.R., so far as this division is concerned, was such activity displayed as is the case at present.

High-powered engines, with long trains of cars, are running to and from northern terminal (Midland) to Belleville daily, including Sunday, and the prospects are that these conditions will prevail until about the end of the year.

On heavy days about 300 cars of grain leave Midland, and about 140 are hauled out of Depot Harbour.

It was announced in railway circles to-day that about 500 empty grain cars had been moved from Port Arthur to Depot Harbour in order to increase the haulage to the East.

Immense shipments of grain are also passing over the C.P.R. from Port McNicoll through Lindsay and Peterborough to Montreal.

Saskatoon Board of Trade Protests To Premier King.

SASKATOON, Oct. 7.— A petition from the Saskatoon Board of Trade, the municipality and the city council was presented to Premier King this afternoon protesting against the construction of unnecessary branch lines, which it alleges, are being built by the Canadian Pacific Railway entirely for the purpose of cutting into rich territory pioneered and developed by the Canadian National. The new branch of the Canadian Pacific from Rosetown south-easterly is particularly referred to as being built only for the purpose of tapping one of the richest territories of the National lines.

The petition pleads with the Premier to appoint a prairie director on the board of the National Railways.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1924.

OLD HOME WEEK.

A committee has been appointed by the City Council to report upon the advisability of holding an old home week in Peterborough.

The Examiner has frequently expressed itself in favour of such an event, believing that the bringing home of the city's old boys and girls would be a good thing all round, and that Peterborough needs a week's celebration as a novelty and an escape from the usual routine.

However, it is doubtful whether an attempt should be made to stage the affair next year.

As several of the Aldermen pointed out, several towns in the district have held such celebrations this year, and that fact would take some of the edge off the local old home week.

Again, it has been suggested that as 1927 is the one hundredth anniversary of the naming of Peterborough that the old home week be made part of a big centenary celebration.

This would be on a larger scale than the usual old boys' reunions and would embrace a long lists of events and spectacular features, some of which are already being tentatively planned.

However, the committee will doubtless consider these facts along with other phases of the situation, and at all events the appointment of a committee is welcomed as a sign that the city fathers are interesting themselves in this matter.

Peterborough has been very sedate in the matter of community celebrations, and a departure from the every-day round would be appreciated by the majority of citizens.

THE PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

There seems to be a link of telepathy between Premier Ferguson and the Examiner.

On the day when he finally announced the form of the questions to be voted on in connection with the O. T. A. plebiscite the Examiner had an article calling upon him to do so.

Yesterday in an editorial prepared the night before the Examiner pointed out the desirability of the Premier explaining in greater detail what he meant by Government control, and, of course, yesterday a letter from Mr. Ferguson was made public giving what had been asked for.

However, the main point is that the Premier has enlightened the public as to the intentions of his Government should the Ontario Temperance Act be rejected.

He promises rigid restrictions, no return to the bar, the prohibition of any form of selling liquor by the glass, no importation into the Province through any other channel than the Government itself, no unlimited and promiscuous sale of liquor.

Further, he declares, that should the choice be in favour of Government control "the Government will exert its full power just as earnestly and honestly to see that the business is carried on under such limitations and rigid restrictions as will eliminate to the greatest degree the evil which blow from the traffic in liquor."

This statement from the Premier, supplementing his promise to strengthen and vigorously enforce the O. T. A. if it be sustained, makes the issue of October 23rd clear.

MOTOR LICENSES.

The local City Council has added its voice to the chorus of complaints from all parts of the Province at the proposal that motor licenses be issued in Toronto instead of under the present system.

The centralization of the issuing of motor licenses may, as is claimed, result in some saving to the Provincial Government; that is, it is cheaper to have all licenses issued in Toronto than to have them distributed from various centres as is done now.

But the saving would be small compared to the expense and inconvenience that would be given the army of motor car owners living outside of Toronto if they had to secure their licenses in the Provincial capital.

The present system is satisfactory, the Examiner feels confident, to every motorist whose home is not in Toronto.

Municipal Councils, Chambers of Commerce, Motor League branches, automotive dealers, everywhere throughout Ontario, have gone on record as strenuously opposed to a departure from the method now in force, and any attempt by the Government to force a change upon the Province will be bitterly resented.

Hon. Mr. Henry would be well advised to quietly drop the proposal to centralize the motor license business.

The people most concerned in the matter don't want a change, and they are not a bit backward in telling the Government so.

BASEBALL AND HONESTY.

Because a minor member of the New York Giants, the leading team in the United States National League, has confessed to trying to bribe a player on an opposing team, a hue and cry goes up that baseball is crooked, says the Ottawa Journal. It is a perfect illustration of one of the worst faults of many people: the fault of arguing from the particular to the general, of assuming that because one man in a profession has been found dishonest the profession as a whole is unworthy.

A more sensible view to take would be that the swift punishment meted out to the player in question is an evidence of the honesty of baseball. The young man who offered an opponent $500 to lay down on his friends was, undoubtedly, dishonoring true sport; but, as crimes go, he was guilty of no heinous offence; yet he is promptly banished from baseball, banished for life from his chief means of a livelihood—a much stiffer sentence than is usually imposed upon transgressors in other spheres of crime. That, surely, is the best possible certificate one could have to determination of those who control baseball to keep baseball clean.

The truth is that the records of baseball in the United States all tend to emphasize its honesty. It is well known that the proceeds of world series matches go to players and participating clubs. If the game were as dishonest as many now claim, then surely there would be attempts to prolong the series—each additional game would bring tens of thousands of dollars to the respective clubs—but the very opposite has been the case. There has been instances where less than five games decided the championship.

THE DIFFERENCE.

It is so easy to get explanations these days, will someone who knows tell us and the rest of the ignorant public why a bootlegger who serves his few customers is held in such contempt while a Premier who "controls" the whole supply to a populous Province should be held as Honourable?—Port Hope Guide.

Just as a matter of logic and without any consideration for the merits of the two policies to be voted on, the obvious answer to the Guide's question may be given.

The bootlegger is "held in contempt" because he is a law-breaker, whereas if the Ontario Temperance Act is dropped the sale of liquor by the Government will be authorized by the people.

Selling liquor is not a crime unless the law makes it so.

The bootlegger is a criminal because he is breaking the law of the Province—not because he sells liquor, but because by selling liquor he is violating a statute.

That is simple enough, surely.

If there were no traffic laws, for example, driving a car on the wrong side of a road would not be an offence.

It is wrong merely because the law says so.

So with a host of other laws.

There is a vast difference between the legal sale of liquor and the illicit sale of the same product by men without any lawful standing.

That is the slant that furnishes the answer to the Guide's query.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

In the year 1900, the capital reported as invested in the pulp and paper industries of Canada was, roughly, twenty million dollars.

In the same year, the wages paid in the pulp and paper industries totalled $2,500,000.

The greatest development in Canadian industry so far this century has been in the manufacture of pulp and paper. So, let us look at the figures for 1920, the latest official report of the Forest Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

In 1920 the capital invested in Canadian pulp and paper industries was $350,000,000.

In the same year, the wages paid in these industries totalled $45,000,000.

Note the curiously stable relative growth of capital and wages in twenty years in this great and representative Canadian industry.

In 1900, capital $20,000,000; in 1920, capital $350,000,000, or seventeen and a half times as great.

In 1900, wages $2,500,000; in 1920, wages $45,000,000, or eighteen times as much.

Is capital the enemy of labor?

Let us look at another phase of the matter—

Let us suppose that upon the nominal capital invested in the year 1900 in our pulp and paper industries, namely a capital of twenty million dollars, a dividend was paid approximately 7 per cent. This would be more than the truth. The nominal capital did not pay that. The capital, of course, had some "water" in it, so most of the actual cash investors probably got a fair return for their money even though the nominal capital did not pay 7 per cent.; but let us be liberal and assume that the whole nominal $20,000,000 did earn and pay 7 per cent. that year—which it didn't. Well, 7 per cent. on $20,000,000 is $1,400,000. The same year the wages paid, as already said, totalled $2,500,000, or nearly twice as much. So that even allowing an unduly liberal figure for the dividend on capital, Labor got nearly twice as much out of the pulp and paper industry.

The same proportion obtained in the year 1920. The capital was $350,000,000. If we allow 7 per cent. dividend on that (which, again, was more than was paid) the figure would be $24,500,000. The wages paid were, as previously said, $45,000,000—again nearly twice as much.

Is capital the enemy of labor?

* * *

The capital of the pulp and paper industries of Canada consists of mortgage bonds, preferred stock and common stock. A good deal of common stock is what is known in financial parlance as "water." It is stock which has been issued free, sometimes to the promoters and organizers of companies, but more largely as bonus stock given to the persons who invest in preferred stock. Often but for this it would have been difficult to sell preferred stock, or to get the industry going at all. And in the pulp and paper industries of Canada, as in nearly all large modern industries, common stock has often been very slow in proving itself to be worth anything in the way of dividends. The popular idea is largely that such issues of common stock are an injury to the public, inasmuch as the aim of all such companies is to get to a point where they can pay good dividends on the common stock as well as the prior dividends on preferred stock—alias, to come to pay to some extent, dividends upon nothing—and that thus the companies aim to exact more from the consumer and the wage-earner than is a fair return upon capital invested. But, on the other hand, is it not fair to reflect. 1. That but for this method of promoting companies, capital might not be got at all; 2. That all industrial enterprise is a risk, and that those who put their money into it are always liable to lose it all, and therefore should have a chance to make a good profit if the gamble goes their way; 3. That in the case of many such enterprises (and this is true of dozens of Canadian pulp and paper companies) not only has common stock often long failed to pay a dividend, but even preferred stock itself; and 4. That at best, dividends on common stock are usually slow in coming, and small when they come?—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Goslin's home run in the World's Series game yesterday indicates that "the goose hangs high."

Ontario is being told how to prevent fires just now, and on October 23rd will endeavour to find out the best way of preventing fire-water.

Charles Settell, who nearly got away with about $30,000 under false pretences, wonders where his friends are. Many another man who got into trouble asked himself that very same question.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 8. — Packers' buyers are not wanting as many butchers's cattle this week, having stocked up with a good supply at last week's low price. One choice steer 1,270 pounds, sold at $6.50, and others, somewhat coarse, brought $5.50 to $5.75 a cwt. One load of 1,500 pound oxy Western steers sold at $5.20 a cwt.

The run of lambs is much lighter than usual at this time of the year, and this accounted for sales on Monday as high as 12.1-4 cents a pound. Yesterday's top was 12 cents, and large bunches of fair quality ewes sold at 11 1-2 cents a pound.

Yesterday's sheep quality was not any too good, and none sold yesterday morning over 6 cents. Real good handy weight sheep are 8 cents a pound, and breeding ewes about the same price.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 8 (Canadian Press). — The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain here yesterday showed a good improvement and a fair amount of business was worked with the United Kingdom in Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian Western barley for October and December shipment.

There was a better inquiry from exporters for supplies on the cash grain market and some large supplies of Canadian Western No. 4 Barley changed hands at 73-4 cents to 8 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, c.i.f. Montreal, and other sales were made at the October price, c.i.f., bay ports.

Ontario grades of malting barley were easier, No. 3 extra grade quoted at $1.06, and No. 3 grade at $1.05 per bushel, ex-track.

Ontario oats were also weaker at decline of 1 cents per bushel with No. 2 white quoted at 66 to 67 cents, and No. 3 grade at 63 cents per bushel, ex-track.

The export trade in spring wheat flour was reported quiet owing to the fact that foreign buyers have not responded to the prices asked. The prices for winter wheat flour were advanced another 20 cents per barrel, and the volume of trade was moderate sized.

A firm feeling continued to prevail in the market for millfeed at the recent advance in prices noted.

There were no new developments in baled hay.

A good business was reported in eggs for domestic consumption and prices were well maintained. The foreign demand for butter was quiet.

A good demand for cheese was made by British importers, and the prices were firm.

Good supplies of old crop beans were on hand, and they were quickly disposed of at prices ranging from $2.95 to $3.10 per bushel for one-pound pickers.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

MONTREAL, October 8 (Canadian Press). — On the local curb market yesterday there were 1,000 packages of creamery butter, and 1,000 boxes of Eastern cheese offered. The lots of No. 1 pasteurised creamery butter sold at 35 1-2 cents per pound, and No. 1 creamery at 34 1-2 cents per pound, while the cheese sold at 17 cents per pound, delivered here.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 8 (Canadian Press). — With corn prices shooting upward and rye down, the grain markets went through more varied changes yesterday than have been witnessed here in a long while. Wet weather and sudden dearth of offerings scared recent sellers of corn, and that cereal jumped wildly, closing nervous 2 1-2 to 2 7-8 cents net higher, December 113 1-8 to 113 1-4.

Rye at one time was 6 cents off as a result of lessened European demand.

In wheat the finish was unsettled 1-2 cent lower to an equal advance. December 149 5-8 to 149 7-8 and May 154 1-4 to 154 3-8, with oats varying from 1-2 cent decline to 3-4 cent gain, and provisions all the way from 15 cents lower to a rise of 17 cents.

RUSSIA WINNING

Making Progress Against Fight on Malaria.

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—The International Malaria commission of the League of Nations, which has been visiting Russia to investigate the malaria epidemic, has completed its work and approved generally the efforts of the Russians to combat the diseases.

One of the commissioners said recently that epidemic seems to have passed in most of the affected areas, but there are a number of localities where it still prevails due to the shortage of quinine.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(United Press).—Industrial accidents to workers under 21 years totalled 7,478 in one year in three states, according to figures of the Department of Labor. Thirty-eight resulted in death and 920 in partial disablement for life. The figures are for Wisconsin, Massachusetts and New Jersey and are believed to represent an average for other states in comparison with their populations.

Crimean Veteran Praises "Fruit-a-tives"

MAJOR GEO. WALKER

Major George Walker, now a familiar figure in Chatham, Ontario, is one of the men who went through the terrible Indian Mutiny. As he says: "I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, serving under Lord Roberts. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I was in terrible shape until I began to use 'Fruit-a-tives.' They relieved me both of the Rheumatism and the Constipation. Today, I enjoy perfect health—no more Rheumatism or Constipation."

And in another letter, written December 1st, 1923 (eleven years after), Major Walker says: "'Fruit-a-tives' are keeping me in the best of health and I shall never be without them."

"Fruit-a-tives" are the famous Fruit Treatment—intensified fruit juices combined with tonics—that make you well and keep you well. 25c and 50c—at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

"Aux Courses" should be the name of the new coat frock, for it is seen so often at the French races.

A SUCCESSFUL French model that is seen wherever smart women are gathered together is cut on excessively neat tailored lines. It has the collar and single-breasted closing of a coat, the small armhole, close sleeve and narrow shoulder of the newest straight silhouette. It is made most often in a reddish-brown invisible plaid such as would be used for a man's light-weight suit, a fine material but rather light in weight. It is worn with a small hat, needless to say, the new perfectly plain pump, nude stockings matching nude gloves. The Parisienne puts a zinnia or a large dark-red carnation on her lapel.

BY HAROLD MATSON

WISCASSET, Me., Oct. 7.—Found: the happiest man!

He is the Eskimo, living in the ice, living by harpoon and kyack. He eats seal meat, walrus meat, he eats the eggs of sea birds and he eats dog. He clothes himself with skins. His home is a hole in the ice. He has no flivver. He has no steam heat. He has no corner drug store. No movies. No booze. But he is happy.

"He is so happy," says Dr. Donald B. MacMillan, arctic explorer just returned from a 14-months scientific research visit in the far north, "that I wonder if our talk about our civilization isn't buncombe. The more I know the Eskimo the more I think that if anybody is civilized on this earth it is this man of the ice."

Dr. MacMillan has lived with the Eskimo. He first met him when he was a member of the Peary expedition; and he has since known him on his own expeditions. The Eskimeaux know MacMilan. Each time he comes back to their country they greet him as an old friend, and they help him maneuver his staunch little schooner, the Bowdoin, through the icebergs.

"They have no bank accounts. They accumulate no property. What belongs to one belongs to another. Theirs is the true co-operative spirit. Seal meat, whale meat, dog meat, home that are crude holes in the ice—they are living standards not above those of the stone age. Truly, the Eskimo is living in a stone age, but whether he knows it or not he possesses great happiness, a happiness far above our own.

Needs Are Simple

The explorer explains his own theory for their superior happiness, and it would seem that MacMillan attributes most of our troubles to our possessions; what we own we fight to get and fight to protect.

"Their needs are simple so they get what they need. That is why they are happy. They know that if they have to fight for their food they will fight the elements, and that every man among them joins; there is none among them who could corral all the seals, get a corner on the whales and thus seek to better himself through the suffering of others.

"The life of the Eskimo is sincere and simple. He has no intricate code of conventions, not pretenses, no ambitions that can be realized only through the beating down of his fellow men."

Dr. MacMillan asserts that one gets a different perspective on life's values in the north. 'Civilization," he says, "loses its importance." He describes the Eskimo race as one large and happy family, willing to work and satisfied with their lot.

Of course, Dr. MacMillan was happy to put in again at Monhegan Island off the Maine coast, where he met his relatives and friends. Back from the hardships of the north he and his crew might have been elated with having returned safely to "civilization."

Going Back!

But Dr. MacMillan is going back! And he says it would be easy to live always with the Eskimo. That is how sure he is that the man of the north lives happily. He is not alone on the Bowdoin in that confidence. Dr. Richard Goddard, magnetician, says it makes him blush to think that the white man calls himself civilized.

"The more I saw of the Eskimo the less I thought of our ways of living," Dr. Goddard says. "They cant' fight,' Danes told us about the Eskimo. Well, I found out why they can't fight. They never need to. I never heard an argument between two Eskimeux—and I never saw an Eskimo cop, nor an Eskimo strike, nor an Eskimo traffic jam; they don't murder each other and they don't hang each other. Which is the civilization?"

Hardships of the north? Yes, but the Bowdoin will point arcticward again next June, bound for "happyland."

Brocaded tissue cloth and fur combine to make this very elaborate evening gown that is gorgeous enough for the most exotic taste. The artistic manipulation of the side drapery and the panel that extends below the hem line relieve the severity without in any way complicating the classic lines.

BIG PRESBYTERIAN MEETING ON 13TH

Continuance of Presbyterian Church in Canada Will Be Considered.

Reports reaching the local committee of the Presbyterian Church association from points surrounding Peterborough indicate that the meeting to be held in St. Andrew's Church on October 13th, to consider the continuance of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is likely to be largely attended. Similar meetings that have been held at Prescott, Carleton Place and other points in the Province have been attended by people from distances as great as one hundred miles.

Rev. J. M. Glassford of Winchester, who is to be one of the speakers, reports that organization work in the eastern part of the Province is proving most encouraging. Rev. Mr. Horn of Toronto, who was in the city recently, and who is in charge of organization work in Western Ontario, stated that conferences have been arranged for practically all parts of the Province, and that he is confident that a large percentage of the Presbyterian congregations of the Province, possibly as high as 75 per cent., will vote in favor of continuing the Presbyterian Church. In addition to Rev. Mr. Glassford, the other main speaker will be Rev. J. Wilson, D.D., of Toronto.

Invitations have been sent to all the Presbyterian congregations in the Peterborough district to be represented at the meeting in order that they may learn the exact status of the Presbyterian Church and what steps they will have to take in order that they may vote out. Great efforts have been made on the part of many ministers in all parts of the Province, including the Peterborough district, who in some cases have been supported by their sessions, to prevent congregations from discussing this matter. This opposition has been shown by their refusing the use of churches for the holding of meetings to discuss it, their declining to make announcements concerning meetings and, in some cases, by an active canvass against those who have been endeavoring to continue the Presbyterian Church in its present form. It was because of this situation that Parliament has made it obligatory upon sessions to arrange for a vote wherever a certain percentage of the members of a congregation ask for the right to express themselves.

Although the first vote cannot be held until December 10, already a considerable number of congregations have been arranging for the holding of a vote at the earliest possible date. There appears to be rivalry between some congregations as to which will be the first to be recognized as the members of the Presbyterian Church of Canada.

GRAIN THIEVES

This is the Latest on Kansas Farm.

WICHITA, Kansas, Oct. 8.—(United Press).—This year—a year of bumper crops in Kansas, prosperity and general good tidings farmers are faced with a comparatively new problem.

The horse thief has changed his spots and now goes out with a truck and a scoop shovel and steals grain.

Farmers in some sections of the state are mounting guard nightly over their granaries and grain piled out under the open sky. Several thieves have been caught.

Although operating under the old name, "anti-horse thief associations" that existed years ago have reorganized and are crusading against the grain thieves.

FIRE MENACES PROSPERITY IN FARM RECOVERY

WHOSE BARN NEXT?

Loss By Fire Is Saddled On the Goods the Farmer Buys at High Price.

Did you farmers read the story a few days ago of the man who intended to turn his heated crops in the barn on Monday morning at 6 o'clock, but after the fire, at 9 o'clock on Sunday, had none to turn?

Why let your barn be the next?

It is just 53 years on Thursday since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern that started the devastating Chicago fire on October 9, 1871. Since then, cows have been regularly kicking over lanterns left near their stalls; crops have been set afire by the concentration of the sun's rays windows; barns and stables have been burned with their contents of livestock and fodder through the careless dropping of matches and cigarette stubs. Right around Peterborough in the past few weeks, there have been twenty barn fires, all bearing at the end of the story, "the entire season's crop was lost." Yes, and with the crop went all the hopes and plans of the farmer and the farmer's wife and their children. Not merely so many dollars' worth of grain and hay, but a year's hard work; weeks of labor, from four o'clock in the morning until late at night; months of early rising for the farmer's wife that she might prepare meals for the outdoor workers.

Since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked the lantern in 1871, the average money loss in Canada and United States has been $500,000,000 a year, and the loss of life 15,000 a year. People have slowly learned during these fifty years the dangers of fire, but cows have not advanced in intelligence or care. Don't let your cow have the advantage.

Fire Prevention Week

Much was heard at the recent investigation at Peterborough into the difficulties of farm life of the disparity in cost between what the farmer sells and what he buys. Here is one of the leaks that is responsible, and a leak that can be stopped. Our waste of $5 per capita per annum means that every man, woman and child pays $5 a year for fire waste. That means that the man with the average family—his wife and three children (a family of five)—pays $25 a year fire tax. Now, if, on some blue Monday in every year, a representative of the Government were to come around and ask us each for our check for $25 to pay our share of the national carelessness, then we should realize what we pay. But we do not realize that we pay it, because that tax is indirect. The big manufacturers and the big merchants know that this fire expense is a tax. They equip their premises with automatic sprinklers. They put in protective apparatus. They get the lowest insurance rate they can because it helps them to compete; but the farmer does not know how this fire waste is paid. Take wool, for example. Wool in the warehouse is insured—that is a tax. It is insured in transportation, and there it pays a fire tax. It is insured in the textile factory where it is worked up into cloth. It is insured in the clothing store, insured in the tailor shop, in the department store; and all the way along this fire tax is added to the cost, and when you buy a coat, you pay it. Every stock of goods that is insured carries a tax, and it is passed along to the ultimate consumer. The masses do not know that they pay it. They do not realize that when they buy a hat, or a pair of shoes, or a suit of clothes, or anything which goes through the regular channels of industry—production, distribution and exchange—they pay a tax. Not realizing it, they are indifferent to fire. They think the fire loss does not affect them.

Put It In Practice

Take a trip around your farm and eliminate all the fire hazards. Being a hero or a heroine during a fire is fine, but it is better to have conditions on your farm that will prevent the fire and make the fruits of your work safe for yourself, your wife and your children.

Don't let your home or your barn be the next.

THE FIRST IRONCLAD

The Warrior on the Sale List.

The cruiser Warrior, which was the very first ironclad built for the British Navy, has been placed on the sale list. A movement is afoot to raise the funds necessary to acquire the ship and preserve her as an historical relic. But there is little likelihood of this effort succeeding.

It is true that the Warrior is one of the most interesting vessels ever built. Her appearance marked the greatest revolution in shipbuilding that had happened for hundreds of years. From the dim and distant period when the first bold navigator pushed out to sea in a hollowed-out log until the Warrior was designed all the world's shipping had been built of wood.

The ironclad was the greatest experiment in marine architecture that had ever been made. Its success justified Mother Shipton's prophecy that "iron should float on the water"—a forecast of progress which our forefathers found it hard to believe could ever come true.

It did, nevertheless. The Warrior was the "parent" not only of the super-Dreadnought, but of the great steel-built Atlantic liners such as the Maurentia and the Olympic.

He was answered by an old rover whom fear had rendered greatly daring "We are trapped here as Dragut was trapped at Jerba."

"Thou liest," he answered. "Dragut was not trapped, for Dragut found a way out. And against Dragut there was the whole navy of Genoa, whilst against us there is but one single galleon. By the Koran, if she shows tight, have we no teeth? Will it be the first galleon whose decks we have over-run? But if ye prefer a coward's counsel, ye sons of shame, consider that once we take the open sea our discovery will be assured, and La rocque hath told you that she carried twenty guns. I tell you that if we are to be attacked by her, best be attacked at close quarters, and I tell you that if we lie close and snug in here it is long odds that we shall never be attacked at all. That she has no inkling of our presence is proven since she has cast anchor round the headland And consider that if we fly from a danger that doth not exist, and in our flight are so fortunate as not to render real that danger and to court it, we abandon a rich argosy that shall bring profit to us all.

"But I waste my breath in argument," he ended abruptly. "You have heard the commands of your lord, Asad-ed-Din, and that should be argument enought. No more of this, then."

Without so much as waiting to see them disperse from the rail and return to their lounging attitudes about the forecastle, he turned to Asad.

"It might have been well to hang the dog who spoke of Dragut and Jerba," he said. "But it was never in my nature to be harsh with those who follow me."

Asad from amazement had passed quickly to admiration and a sort of contrition, into which presently ere crept a poisonous tinge of jealousy to see Sakr-el-Bahr prevail where he himself alone must utterly have failed This jealousy spread all-pervadingly like an oil stain. If he had come to bear ill-will to Sakr-el-Bahr before that was turned of a sudden into hatred for one in whom he now beheld a usurper of the power and control that should reside in the Basha alone.

Therefore the words of commendation which had been rising to his lips froze there now that Sakr-el-Bahr and he stood face to face. In silence he considered his lieutenant through narrowing evil eyes, whose message none but a fool could have misunderstood.

Sakr-el-Bahr was not a fool, and he did not misunderstand it for a moment He felt a tightening at the heart, and ill-will sprang to life within him, responding to the call of that ill-will.

The conciliatory words he had in mind to speak he now suppressed. To that venomous glance he opposed his ever-ready mockery. He turned to Biskaine.

"Withdraw," he curtly bade him, "and take that stout sea-warrior with thee." And he indicated Marzak.

Biskaine turned to the Basha.

"It is thy wish, my lord?" he asked.

"My lord," said Sakr-el-Bahr, when they were alone, "yesterday I made thee a proposal for the healing of this breach between us, and it was refused But now, had I been the traitor and mutineer thou hast dubbed me, I could have taken full advantage of the humor of my corsairs. Had I done that, it need no longer have been mine to propose or to sue. Instead, it would have been mine to dictate. Since I have given thee such crowning proof of my loyalty, it is my hope and trust that I may be restored to the place I had lost in thy confidence, and that, this being so, thou will accede now to that proposal of mine concerning the Frankish woman yonder."

It was unfortunate, perhaps, that she should have been standing there unveiled, upon the poop, within range of Asad's glance; for the sight of her it may have been that overcame his momentary hesitation and stifled the caution which prompted him to accede.

"It is not for thee, Sakr-el-Bahr," he answered at length, "to make me proposals. To dare it proves thee far removed indeed from the loyalty thy lips profess. Thou knowest my will concerning her. Continue a barrier in my path at thy peril."

His voice shook with anger.

"Not so loud," said Sakr-el-Bahr his eyes gleaming with a response of anger. "For, should my men overhear these threats of thine I will not answer for what may follow. I oppose thee at my peril, sayest thou? Be it so, then. It is war between us, Asad, since thou hast chosen it. Remember hereafter, when the consequences come to overwhelm thee, that the choice was thine."

"Thou mutinous dog!" blazed Asad.

Sakr-el-Bahr turned on his heel.

"Pursue the path of an old man's folly," he said over his shoulder, "and see whither it will lead thee."

Upon that he strode away up the gangway to the poop, leaving the Basha alone with his anger and some slight fear evoked by that last bold menace. But, nothwithstanding that he menaced boldly, the heart of Sakr-el-Bahr was surcharged with anxiety He had conceived a plan, but between the conception and its execution he realized that much ill might lie.

"Mistress," he addressed Rosamund "you are not wise to show yourself so openly."

To his amazement, she met him with a hostile glance.

"Not wise?" said she, her countenance scornful. "You mean that I may see more than was intended for me. What game do you play here, sir, that you tell me one thing and show me by your actions that you desire another?"

At once he perceived how she had misread the scene she had witnessed.

"I'll but remind you," he said very gravely, "that once before you did me a wrong by over-hasty judgment."

"But then——" she began.

"I do but ask you to save your judgment for the end. If I live I shall deliver you. Meanwhile, I beg you keep your cabin."

She looked at him, a prayer for explanation trembling on her lips. But, before the calm command of his tone and glance, she withdrew beyond the curtain.

CHAPTBR XXVIII

THE MESSENGER

For the rest of the day she kept the cabin, chafing with anxiety to know what was toward, and the more racked by it because Sakr-el-Bahr refrained through all those hours from coming to her. At last, toward evening, unable longer to contain herself, she went forth again, and, as it chanced, she did so at an untimely moment.

The sun had set, and the evening prayer was being recited aboard the galeasse, her crew all prostrate. Perceiving this, she drew back again instinctively, and remained screened by the curtain until the prayer was ended. Then, putting it aside, but without stepping past the Nubians, who were on guard, she saw that on her left Asad-ed-Din, with Marzak, Biskaine and one or two other officers, was again occupying the divan under the awning. Her eyes sought Sakr-el-Bahr, and presently they beheld him coming up the gangway with his long, swinging stride, in the wake of the boatswain's mates, who were doling out the meagre evening meal to the slaves.

Suddenly he halted by Lionel who occupied a seat at the head of his oar, immediately next to the gangway. He addressed him harshly in the lingua franca, which Lionel did not understand, and his words rang clearly and were heard—as he intended that they should be—by all upon the poop.

"What are you saying?" he asked in English.

Sakr-el-Bahr bent over him, and his face, as all could see, was evil and mocking. No doubt he spoke to him in English also, but no more than a murmur reached the straining ears of Rosamund, though, from his countenance, she had no doubt of the purport of his words. And yet she was far indeed from a correct surmise. The mockery in his countenance was but a mask.

"Take no heed of my looks," he was saying. "I desire them up yonder to think that I abuse you. Look as a man would who were being abused. Cringe or snarl, but listen. Do you remember once when, as lads, we swam together from Penarrow to Trefusis Point?"

"What do you mean?" quoth Lionel, and the natural sullenness of his mien was all that Sakr-el-Bahr could have desired.

"I am wondering whether you could still swim as far. If so, you might find a more appetizing supper awaiting you at the end—aboard Sir John Killigrew's ship. You had not heard? The Silver Heron is at anchor in the bay yonder beyond that headland. If I afford you the means, could you swim to her, do you think?"

Lionel stared at him in profoundest amazement.

"Do you mock me?" he asked at length.

"Why should I mock you on such a matter?"

"Is it not to mock me to suggest a way for my deliverance?"

OPENING DEBATE.

Feature of Debate Was Attitude of Viscount Grey.

LONDON, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press).—The feature of the opening of the debate in the House of Lords yesterday on the second reading of the Irish Boundary Bill, which was moved by Lord Arnold, Under-Secretary for the Colonies, was the unexpected attitude of Viscount Grey, of Fallodon, till recently Liberal leader in the Lords. He said there was an honorable and definite understanding with Ulster when the Home Rule Bill of 1920 was passed, with the consent of Ulster, that the arrangement should not be altered without her consent.

"If we carried out the definite engagement with the Free State embodied in the 1922 Act in the sense that the Free State seemed to understand it, we should be breaking an honorable understanding with Ulster," said Lord Grey.

PLANT HARDY TREES ADVICE OF EXPERT

It is hard to quarrel with a home owner who desires to plant trees and shrubs which will come quickly to maturity. If he lately has come from apartment life there may remain an unconscious attitude of uncertainty as to the permanance of his dwelling place even though he now owns his home.

It takes a few years to get that feeling out of the system and to come to realization that "we ain't going to move no more." It is much to be hoped that, in the meanwhile, shade trees have not been selected on the basis of quick growth. There is considerable appeal to the argument of the man who defends the planting of poplars on the ground that "he wants something which will grow up while he is alive." But the years have a way of passing quickly and the argument does not look so good after twenty years, when the poplars have to be cut down. Had elms or oaks been planted they would at this age just be reaching their full beauty and the planter for the rest of his life could be proud of having planted them.

Elms and Oaks Ideal.

Elm and oak trees are ideal for the home grounds, not only because of their beauty and long life, but because their shade is not so dense as to kill plants and grass beneath them. The maple, on the other hand, casts a dense shade and the parkways and lawns on a street lined with maples always will show bare spots.

Oaks are considered to be slow growing trees, but they will grow as rapidly as the elms. The burr oak, which grows with a wide spreading head and rugged branches, is the finest for the yard and the pin oak for parkways. Red oaks do best in light dry soil. Oaks are not difficult to transplant if one buys nursery grown trees of the smaller sizes and prunes them back severely at planting time. If this is neglected the oak is quite likely to die even after it puts out leaves.

Black Walnuts Give Good Shade.

Black walnuts are fine shade trees and grow quite rapidly. They produce nuts whose merit is recognized by all good cooks and their wood is the most expensive of native woods. The gingko biloba, or maiden hair tree, which has a leaf shaped like that of the maiden hair fern, and which grows in a perfect cone, is much used for parkway plantings in eastern cities and does well in our climate. It is especially immune from insect and disease attacks.

NEW ERA IN MEDICINE.

Public Knowledge Of Medical Science Is Broadening Out.

TORONTO, Oct. 8 — (Canadian Press).—A new era in medicine—an era which is witnessing the broadening of public knowledge of medical science, which is leading to an ever increasing appetite on the part of mankind for news about the body, its diseases, their cures, is breaking upon the world, Dr. Harley Smith, declared last night in his presidential address of the Academy of medicine. "The man on the street," he said, "wants more intimate and detailed information about the progress of science. Press, both daily and periodical, is supplying this need. We could not if we would, we dare not try to check this tide of eager quest."

Now there is a way to clean all of these crevices. To remove 90% of these dangers. Cleans inside, too.

New-type brush

Today dentists, physicians, authorities everywhere recommend a scientifically-designed brush. It reaches and cleans all teeth, and all danger-bearing crevices. It is called the Dr. West's Tooth Brush. Not like old-type brushes—yet costs no more.

Get it at any drug or department store. Use it for a week. If not delighted, get your money back. You take no chance—making this test. So do it today. For better health—for better appearance!

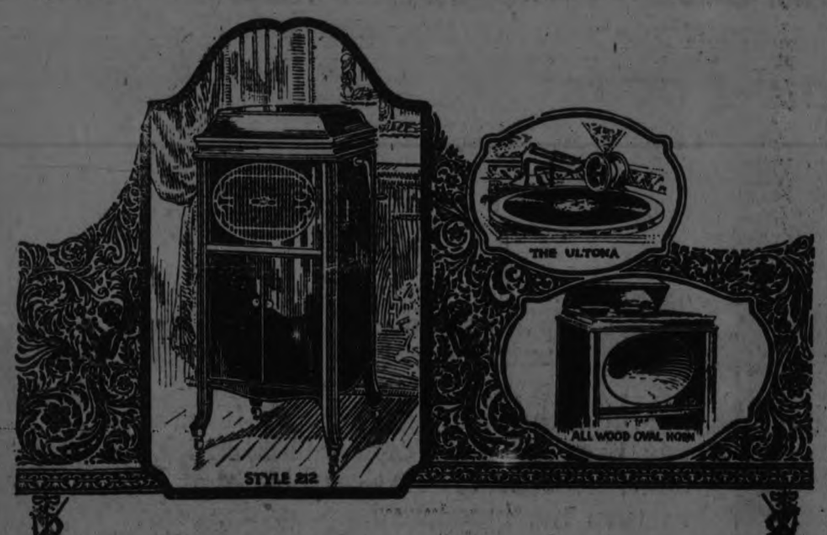
VENTILATION SELLS GOODS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(United Press).—Retail merchants whose clerks are sleepy and therefore inefficient should open the windows and let in fresh air, the Department of Commerce suggests as a result of a study of merchandising conditions. "Drowsy and inefficient clerks are the usual result of poorly ventilated buildings," the Department warns. "Lack of fresh air also has its effect on the customer."



Brunswick Superiority is a demonstrated fact

WHEN we say that the Brunswick is superior to any other phonograph we state a plain fact that you can prove for yourself by your listening. You will notice a full, rich, naturalness of tones that is entirely satisfying.

Then you can be shown exactly how such a result is produced by means of the exclusive Brunswick method of reproduction. Your ear and your mind both receive the fullest confirmation of Brunswick superiority.

There is a Brunswick dealer near you who will be glad to demonstrate for you at any time.

October 23rd will determine much of the destiny of Ontario.

Let it be determined aright.

A victory for Government Control seems assured. But we cannot afford to take chances. Each citizen of Ontario who desires the life of his Province to be characterised by temperance and toleration has a duty.

That duty is to support the Moderation League in every possible way.

A campaign of the magnitude of that in which the League is presently engaged is expensive. If you are with us clip off and mail the attached coupon. Any money you send will be spent in your own district.

Answer the call. NOW.

"The Secret of Real Unity"

When Presbyterian and Methodist ministers from all the maritime conferences gathered at Mount Allison University for four days of Biblical study the lecture couses were preceded by a communion service, which elicits an interesting comment and description from the St. John Telegraph-Journal:

"The union of the religious leaders of the two denominations in the observance of this central rite of their common Christianity developed a spiritual atmosphere of uncomon influence, an impressive reminder of where the secret of real unity was to be found. The administration of the sacrament was conducted by four Methodist and four Presbyterian clergymen."

"Go to your druggist and get a package of my Asthmador and, should it fail to give instant relief, the druggist will cheerfully refund your money without any question whatever." The Doctor says further: "No matter how violent the attack, how obstinate the case, or what else has failed, my Asthmador or Asthmador Cigarettes will give instant relief, usually in 10 seconds, but always within 15 minutes. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials abundantly prove what my remedy has done, and I know it will do the same for others. MAY EXTRADITE RAILWAY HEADS

GRAVE CHARGES.

MOSCOW, Oct. 8—(United Press)—The United Press learns authoritatively that the Russian Government will demand the extradition of members of the former management of the Chinese Eastern Railway who were arrested at Habin, Manchuria, so they can be tried in a Russian court.

The gravest charges preferred against the recent directorate are aimed at Ostrouomoff, manager; Gandatti, territorial superintendent; Michaeloff, high official and ex-Minister of Finance in Admiral Kolchak's "White" Government. The latter is accused of accepting bribes from the Japanese and the administration of the South Manchurian Railway. All the directors have for years been involved in intrigues aimed at Russia.

In reply to enquiries made in competent quarters as to what attitude the Soviet Government would assume should the United States press the claim of $5,000,000 spent on the Eastern Railway elicited the reply that the Russian Government was not concerned since the question could be decided only by the joint Russo-Chinese management of the railway. The informant added that the United States had not consulted the real owners of the railway.

OBTAINS A DIVORCE.

Man Gives His Wife a Chance To Find Real Soul Mate.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press).—To enable his wife to marry another man, for whom she confessed a "perfect passionate love," and with whom she was said in evidence to have been living in Evanston for more than a year, Dr. Alfred Lawrence Hall-Quest, director of University of Pittsburgh extension work and noted lecturer has obtained divorce.

Every precaution was taken to guard the name of the man, cultured love letters telling of her infatuation for him having been copied into record with his name deleted.

In her letters the wife pleaded for her freedom, so that the "social laws might sanction her life with the other man for whom she said she was ready to give up everything else." After the signing of the decree by Judge H. A. Lewis, every effort was made to shield Hall-Quest from publicity.

Dr. Hall-Quest, aged 44, was educated at Princeton, and recently, while Professor at Columbia University, took the degree of doctor of philosophy. He taught at the University of Illinois and the University of Cincinnati, and wrote a number of scientific works.

GOVERNMENT FATE DECIDED TO-NIGHT

Crowds Await Outcome Of Labor Party Failure To Prosecute Communist.

(By Lloyd Allen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Oct. 8. — Britain expects to know by midnight whether its first Labor Government has gone down to defeat through its failure to prosecute a Communist editor, accused of sedition, or has survived to face another crisis early in November, when it seeks a certificate of the Anglo-Russian treaty.

As the House of Commons met this afternoon, the Conservatives prepared to introduce a motion censuring the Government for dropping proceedings against the editor. The Liberals will sponsor an amendment providing for Parliamentary investigation.

Party whips were scurrying about London throughout the morning rounding up their forces, but many members were absent travelling on the Continent, while others showed no interest in the situation.

Crowds began early to gather in the neighborhood of Parliament, and the demand for admission to the galleries were unprecedented. The debate is expected to close about 11 p.m., and two divisions are almost assured—first, on the Liberal amendment, the second on the Tory motion.

Some political observers declare the Liberals are likely to withdraw their amendment following discussion by the Attorney-General of the Conservative motion. It is also forecasted, that the Laborites will abstain from voting on the amendment leaving the Conservatives to defeat, while the Liberals and Laborites will later combine to defeat the straight motion of censure. Political leaders conferred throughout the early afternoon, and last minute changes of tactics were rumored on every hand.

The House of Lords met to resume its debate on the second reading of the Irish Bill.

FERGUSON MAKES HIS VIEW KNOWN

Replies To Letter Sent By Rev. T. Albert Moore of Plebiscite Committee.

Premier Ferguson made public the following letter forwarded by him to Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, Chairman of the Ontario Plebiscite Committee, in reply to one despatched by that gentleman to Hon. W. F. Nickle:

"My Dear Mr. Moore:

"As the Attorney-General, Hon. Mr. Nickle, is out of town, your letter of Sept. 27 has come to me for reply.

"You ask two important questions:

"First, 'Should the Ontario Temperance Act be not continued on Oct. 23, and a Government Control Act be demanded, what effect would that have on the section of the Canada Temperance Act now in force, which prohibits importation?"

"Second, 'What about the "Sandy Act," should the O. T. A. be repealed?"

Importation Monopoly Seems Sure.

"I have had the law officers of the Crown give careful consideration to both questions, and they decide that, in so far as importation by others than the Government itself is concerned, the vote on the 23rd will in no way affect either the section of the Ontario Temperance Act referred to or the so-called 'Sandy Act.' It would appear clear that, in case of the establishment of a system of Government control, the Province would have the sole right to import, unless the Legislature took the necessary steps to repeal its former action in both cases and permit importation by others.

"Should the people sustain the Ontario Temperance Act on Oct. 23rd this question of repeal will not arise.

"Should the vote pronounce in favor of the Government taking hold of the liquor problem and directly handling the sale of liquor, I assure you that the Government will not be prepared to advise the Legislature to take any action that would permit importation by or through any channel other than the Government itself.

No Return To Bar.

"Further more, should it be the expressed desire of the people of Ontario to discontinue the dispensing of liquor as at present by medical prescription, and to undertake the handling of all sales of liquor through Government depots, the Government will in no event interpret that to mean unlimited and promiscuous sale. No private agencies or individuals will be permitted to sell spirituous or malt liquors. There will be no return to the bar or sale by glass in any form.

"I assure you that this Government will honestly and zealously strive to give full effect to the people's wish, whatever that may be, as expressed at the polls.

"I have said to you in a former letter that should the public decide that the principle of the Ontario Temperance Act be continued, we will bend every energy to carry into full effect their wishes.

Rigid Restriction Promised.

"Let me add this further assurance, that, should the choice be in favor of Government control, the Government will exert its full power just as earnestly and honestly to see that the business is carried on under such limitations and rigid restrictions as will eliminate to the greatest degree the evils which flow from the traffic in liquor. We will, in a word, 'control' the business as far as it is humanly possible. As I have already stated, no sale other than by Government agencies will be permitted or condoned. My personal view is that those who engage in illicit traffic, commonly called "bootlegging," should be sent to jail without the option of a fine.

"I know you appreciate how impossible it is in a letter to give in detail legislation and regulation necessary to carry out whichever view the electors may express, but I wish all Ontario to be convinced that the Government will accept the responsibility placed upon it with a determination that a genuine effort will be made to suppress lawbreaking and crime, and to maintain the highest possible moral conditions among our people.

"Yur very sincerely,
"G. H. Ferguson."

CRAIG MAY RESIGN.

If Decision On Boundary Was Not Acceptable To Ulster Craig Will Quit.

BELFAST, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press).—Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, at the opening of Parliament yesterday, said that the British Parliament passed the Irish Bill, and the boundary was finally fixed so that it would be acceptable to Ulster, "well and good." On the other hand, he declared, no matter who was named as the third member of the Boundary Commission, if the decision was not acceptable to Ulster, he would not hesitate a moment if there was no other honorable way out, to resign and place himself at the disposal of the people, no longer as Premier, but as chosen leader to defendant's territory which they might consider had been unfairly transferred from Ulster, Great Britain and the flag of the Empire.

Take a little Bon Ami on a damp cloth, and give your aluminium kitchen-ware a few brisk rubs. You'll find that dirt and tarnish vanish like magic!

The soft Bon Ami powder gently absorbs all grime—brings back the original lustre without making the slightest scratch on the smooth surface. That's why it's so good also for scouring the inside as well as the outside of kettles or saucepans. Scars, even tiny ones, catch and hold the food, causing it to scorch—making the utensil harder to clean next time. But with Bon Ami you never need worry about scratching.

There's nothing like Bon Ami for cleaning and polishing dozens of other things throughout the house! And it won't redden or roughen your hands!

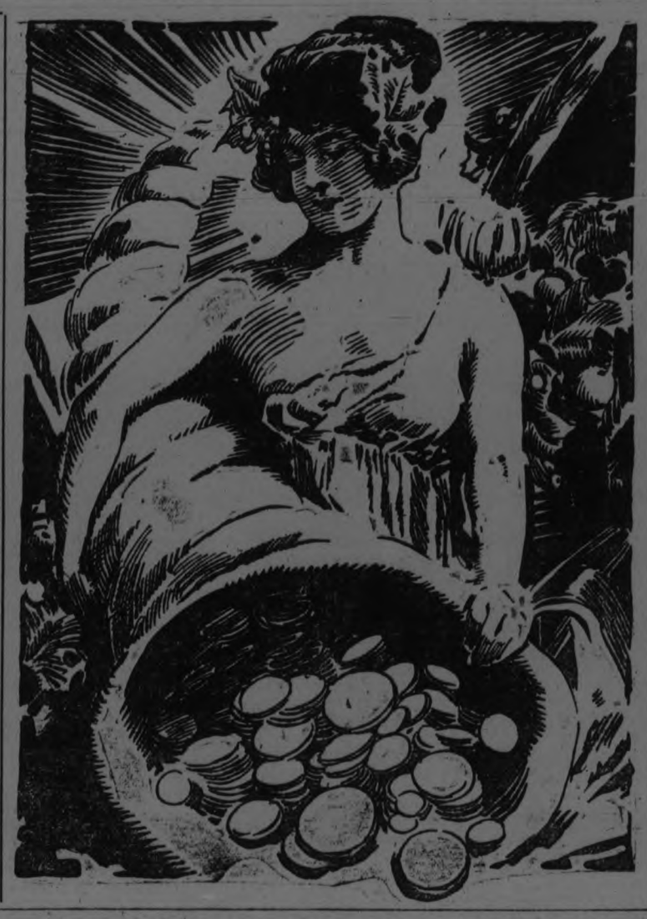
Agricultural Success Today Means Industrial Advancement Tomorrow

IT must be held favorable that the long dispute in Europe over reparations and war settlements is nearing the end. Money is plentiful and interest rates are low. Transportation facilities are adequate. Inventories are being reduced. Conditions economic warrant and forecast that both agriculture and industry are good enough to promise a considerable period of what is commonly termed Prosperity.

Every artery of our Canadian economic life is now pulsating with the renewed throbs of Prosperity. The pins and needles of the first forward movement since the War are being felt on farm and in factory. A sane grasping of the first opportunities put Canadians on their feet for years to come.

The prosperity we have been waiting for, praying for, preparing for, has arrived. Greet it and grasp it for yourself and spread its benediction among those you have the power to help to prosperity.



THE pendulum of Prosperity again swings our way. We're about to bask once more in the sun of plentitude. Above the horizon we see the harbingers of good crops well paid for; unemployment rapidly decreasing; the resumption of business activity; savings balances have reached the highest marks the banks have carried for years.

The rare combination of good crops and good prices greet the farmers. Labor is being actively employed by mills, and foundries. Railroads are junking prewar equipment with big replacement orders. The orders for building equipment have reached the highest mark since the war.

LET'S all do our share in greasing the wheels to keep Prosperity in motion—work faithfully; employ help liberally; buy freely; save intelligently—talk and act and perpetuate Prosperity.

CORN AFFECTED ONLY SLIGHTLY BY NIGHT FROST

Millbrook Harvest Nearly All In—Ripening Was Uneven

SECOND CROP GOOD.

Potatoes Are Large, But Only a Few in a Hill—Some Waste.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 7.—Practically all the grain is now harvested in this vicinity with the exception of an occasional field of buckwheat, cut but not yet drawn in. Some fields ripened much earlier than others because of the earlier date of planting, but a good crop has resulted whether seeding was done late or early.

Corn, in some cases, was slightly affected by the two or three nights recently when the frost line was reached. The average height is nine feet. The second crop of alfalfa is satisfactory in practically every case. Mr. Winslow realized a yield of six bushels to the acre from his seed alfalfa. The second crop, for feed purposes, is not cut as yet on all farms, owing to the necessity of getting peas threshed, the rains having delayed some farmers in this important work. Some who were late in threshing, lost a considerable portion of their crop because of the pods bursting with the wet, the peas dropping on the ground when the grain was turned in the effort to have it dry after the heavy showers.

Potatoes Are Good.

Potatoes were being taken up both in village gardens and on the farms during the last week. The crop is good in the majority of cases, though there is complaint of few in a hill. However, the size may make up for the lack in number of tubers, but here, again, comes a disadvantage, as the housewife knows that an extra large potato, when cut open, shows a bad bad centre that means a considerable waste.

Carrots are among the garden vegetables which are particularly satisfactory this season, both as to size and flavor. Probably few people are aware that the carrot is a native of Great Britain, growing by the wayside, and brought to its present state as a favorite and palatable vegetable through careful cultivation.

Avoid Draft.

The rainy season being close at hand has led the poultry branch of the Department of Agriculture to issue a warning against allowing the fowl to live in damp quarters, as colds start as easily among these important helpers in swelling the farm income as among human beings. While practically all types of poultry can stand cold, they are far from doing well in damp enclosures. Plenty of open space, and an abundance of fresh air, are essential, but drafts must be avoided.

Market Prices.

Local market prices this week include the following:—Tomatoes, 25 cents a peck; dairy butter buying at 32 cents, selling at 35; creamery butter selling at 40 cents; eggs buying at 32, selling at 35 cents a dozen; potatoes, of which a larger quantity are offering than the local stores care to handle, selling at 18 cents a peck, 65 cents a bag—likely to go lower.

Cauliflowers selling at 15, 20, and 25 cents according to size, firmness and whiteness; cabbage, 10 and 5 cents according to size.

Grapes sold readily on Fair Day at 60 cents a basket; peaches are six-quart baskets for $1.10, larger size $1.25, and 11-quart baskets $1.75; pears, 50 cents a basket; plums, which are plentiful, are 5 cents a quart, 60 cents per basket.

Muskmelons sell at from 20 to 25 cents each, according to size and quality.

Celery is now two bunches for 25 cents, and onions are 5 cents a pound.

Eighteen Year Old Hen Faithful To Her Flock

MILLBROOK, Oct. 7.—In a recent issue of your paper I noticed an article concerning a hen, 12 years old, being faithful to the end.

In 1907, I bought a purebred buff rock hen from Mr. Wm. Armstrong, residing at that time on Zion Line. She was then one year old. She raised ducks every year and died last year, and laid till the last. She was 18 years old last June, and was faithful till the end, and always stayed with the ducks. If anyone can tell me where I can get buff rock hens I will be glad, for there is nothing too good for them.

LOANS TO FARMS AT 6 PER CENT ON SOUND BASIS

Agriculture Development Board Performs Service To Farmers.

VERY SMALL LOSS.

Bankers Declared Plan Impossible, But Value Is Vindicated.

"Any fellow that has some political pull can go and get a loan from the Agricultural Development Board: at least, that is what they say I hear the Government is loaded up with the worst loans on the market"—Statement by Assistant G M of chartered bank.

"All the loans that we refuse go to the Ontario Government Agricultural Development Board: they take care of them."—Statement of Manager of a Toronto Loan Company.

"The worst loans on the market,' some 2,000 loans made in two and one-half years, in volume about $7,000,000, have resulted in one farm foreclosure in 1923, seven in 1924, under 10 foreclosures since the Government scheme started in 1922; and at present some $50,000 represents the total amount overdue on principal and interest in connection with seven million of dollars loaned. And the net loss to the Agricultural Development Board taken to date is probably not over $1,000. By "loss" is meart the difference between the amounts loaned on properties and the sum they brought in through foreclosure sale, plus the item of paying up all overdue charges.

Three-quarters of One Per Cent.

The amount now showing for overdue principal and interest in connection with the long term (20 years) farm loans would represent some three-quarters of one per cent on the amount of capital loaned by the Board to Ontario farmers.

The above figures are those given by one of the members of the Agricultural Development Board, which was formed in 1922 in conjunction with the Ontario Government Savings Office to accept savings deposits from the people, and to loan out sums to Ontario farmers on first mortgage collateral. The thunders of the Canadian Bankers' Association were employed to point out that the Government bank scheme was uneconomical, and the tail of the venture, employing Government funds to loan to farmers, was uneconomical, unsound, and quite dangerous.

Perhaps the bankers are changing their opinion on the entire venture. At least, one general manager writes that he regards as very useful and beneficial the department which loans money to farmers for twenty years at 6 per cent interest, but he does not like the idea of the Government procuring deposits from the public in order to find the money. This is a natural G.M. attitude, because the Government Savings Office pays four per cent on savings, as against three per cent paid by the banks. It is, however, quite questionable whether any of the fears entertained by the bankers, on the whole, were well based.

If the Ontario Government Savings Office is attracting a lot of funds from foreigners who would bank with no one but the Government, then the chartered banks lose nothing there, but rather gain, because the funds placed on deposit in the Government offices are quickly placed in general circulation; so that the sum of working capital is increased by the extent of deposits of 'hoarders' who will trust no bank but a government institution.

The policy of the Board is to not allow interest and principal to accumulate unduly. A legitimate reason for inability to pay is given the same consideration as it would be with any loan or trust company. The Board believes it is doing a useful work in supplying agriculture with working capital, at a low rate of interest. In its experience it has found applications for loans in sections where money is otherwise hard to get, and where, if obtained, the interest rate will be seven per cent to seven and a half per cent, with legal and brokerage charges running up around $100.

Why is the amount loaned out to date not a larger sum? Probably because the Board has been in business only two years and does no advertising. Its valuators or inspectors are, for the most part, farmers. It is said there has been no case of personal dishonesty encountered with such inspectors. In one or two instances Government valuators have misjudged properties, and caused some loss. Certain valuators, who were not competent, have been replaced.

Speaking generally, it would appear as if the decision of the Government to equip a bureau to loan money to agriculture, instead of being a novel and drastic move, is a somewhat belated step in the direction of activities practised elsewhere. England makes such loans. So does the United States So do the banks and the governments of Europe.

COLOR CONTEST PRIZE WINNERS DID GOOD WORK

SPLENDID PICTURES

Owing to pressure of business last week and the great number of pictures entered in the competitions, it was found impossible to announce the winners of competition number two last Wednesday. These results, and the results of competition 3, in which a dog was to be colored, are announced below.

The dog picture drew the biggest list yet, and the entries were of a high order. In order to judge them, it was necessary to take minor details into consideration, and the first prize in the elder class was decided on the coloring of the trees in the background, which had the red and yellow autumn tints. The farthest away competitor in this picture was Vivian Hall, age 13, of Morris, Minnesota, U.S.A. Vivian's picture was very good, but she forgot to shade the doorway of the dog's kennel, and the other entries were so good that little points like that had to be taken into consideration.

Many entries are already in for the picture of the girl (No. 4), and are of a very high standard. This competition is still open, and pictures may be sent in any day up to Saturday.

This week's picture is of a horse, and should give everyone in country and city a good chance to compete. Everyone is doing so well that care should be taken to color the barn and tree as well as the horse. The colored horse should be in The Examiner office before Saturday, October 18.

There are still three or four pictures to come, each with the same list of prizes that has been offered every week for a month. Crayons or water colors may be used, and there are no conditions except that the age of the person who colors the drawing must be stated and certified by a parent or guardian.

M'GRAW'S PITCHERS WERE SAUCE FOR WASHINGTON'S GOOSE WHO HIT PERFECTLY IN SENATORS' VICTORY

Goslin Accounted For Five of the Senators' Seven Runs—Hit Home Run.

SERIES TIED UP AND MAY GO SEVEN GAMES

Polo Ground's Attendance Record Smashed—Crowd Cheered the American Leaguers.

SCORE WAS 7 TO 4.

Marberry Did His Stunt As Relief Pitcher—Harris Starred In Field.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. — The "Goose" hangs high in Washington to-night, for Leon Goslin, slugging pride of the Senators and favorite of their fans, clubbed the New York Giants into defeat to-day almost single-handed and put the American League champions back in the thick of one of baseball's greatest championship battles.

Another record breaking crowd, exceeding 50,000 all told stormed the Polo Grounds and cheered the Senators as they pulled themselves together in spite of a make-shift infield caused by the loss of Peckinpaugh, battered three Giant pitchers and captured the fourth game of the 1924 worlds' series by a score of 7 to 4, the most decisive verdict of any game so far.

The series now stands at two-all and the fifth game, which is likely to witness a repetition of the opening struggle between Walter Johnson, the Senators' wonderful right-hand veteran, and Art Nehf, brilliant Giant southpaw will be played tomorrow at the Polo Grounds. The battleground will shift back to Washington on Thursday for a sixth game is now assured with a likelihood the series will go the limit of seven games.

Goslin's Four Hits

Five of the Senators' runs to-day alone enough to clinch the game, were accounted for by "Goose" Goslin, who hammered out four hits in as many times at bat, including his second homer of the series which scored two runs ahead of him in the third inning and gave Washington a lead which it never relinquished.

While the slow southpaw curves of George Mogridge and the relief pitching of Fred "Firpo" Marberry again successful in his favorite role, kept the Giants in check, the Senators bunched their attack in three innings and Goslin was the dominating figure each time.

The offerings of Virgil Barnes who retired after being bombarded for five innings and Wayland Dean who finished the game after Howard Baldwin had gotten through two innings unscathed, proved particularly relishing "sauce" for Goslin. In addition to his homer, a terrific drive that sailed on a line far into the right field stands, the "Goose" brought Harris across in the fifth after a wild pitch had let in McNeely, and started a rally in the eighth with his fourth hit, scoring ahead of Joe Judge on Oscar Bluege's third safe blow of the game. The "goose's" spectacular slugging made him not only the hero of the day but the idol of the crowd, which after his circuit clout gave him an ovation scarcely less vociferous than that of his own followers after his first homer a potent factor in Washington's triumph on Sunday.

Crowd with Nationals

The crowd, as yesterday, was "with" the fighting Senators and their youthful pilot, Stanley Harris, who also was a scintillating figure at bat and afield to-day. The Giants came in for their share of cheering, particularly when in a fashion which has become typical to the series, they rallied in the closing innings, but the crowd's noisiest sympathies was with Washington and Goslin.

There was another din of cheering for the "Goose' when he came out to the field after his home run and displayed his versatility by making a circus catch of a long drive off Wilson's bat.

Meanwhile the Giants were baffled by the southpaw shoots of Mogridge former New York moundsman, who silenced the heaviest New York artillery with a puzzling change of pace and a tantalizing slow ball. For seven innings, the McGrawmen gathered but three hits off Mogridge and two runs, one of which was due to an error and the other to a two base blow by Kelly but in the eighth the southpaw developed a sudden streak of wildness and, despite a five run lead, was hastily withdrawn by Harris after the first two men to face him had walked.

Marberry to Rescue

Into this critical situation strode "Firpo" Marberry, hero in relief role in he second game but "bust" yesterday when he started for the Senators and was hammered from the hill. Marberry, who apparently is only at his best when performing a rescue act, met and turned back a determined Giant rally in both the eighth and ninth innings.

"Hack" Wilson, the first to face Marberry in the eighth, clouted a two bagger that scored Young, while in the ninth, Gowdy's single, a freak wild throw by Rice which caromed of first base for a two base error and Lindstrom's third hit produced another run. Lindstrom, advancing on a pass to Frisch got to third when Young forced the Giant captain, but Marberry tightened and struck out George Kelly on three pitched balls.

This finish was dramatically similar to that of the second game when Marberry relieving Zachary, came to the mound in the ninth with the bases full, two out, the score tied, and struck out Travis Jackson on three pitched balls. The big twirler now has saved the Senators in two crucial moments but he gets no cred it in the official reckoning for either. The credit he was first given for winning the second game was taken away from him yesterday by the official scoring board and given to Zachary while to-day Mogridge departed with a lead which the Senators held intact to the finish.

Washington's devastating attack, in which thirteen solid blows were combed from the offerings of McGraw's three moundsmen, made up for flaws in the defense of the Senators due chiefly in the loss of Peckinpaugh still in side lines as a result of a "Charley Horse", or pulled tendon, and the consequent breaking up of their brilliant infield combination. Two of the team's three errors paved the way for Giant runs.

Harris in Spotlight

"Bucky" Harris, baseball's latest "miracle manager", shared with Goslin and Marberry the day's spotlight. Pulling his men together after yesterday's disastrous setback, the young leader scintillated on the defense, besides scoring two runs and figuring largely in the attack which also saw Oscar Bluege and Earl McNeely regain their batting eyes for the first time in the series. Singles by McNeely and Harris were the opening shots in two of Washington's barrages, while Bluege's smash brought across two tallies in the eighth.

Harris ranged over a wide stretch of territory afield, handling ten chances faultlessly and making two remarkable stops in the seventh that rivalled some of the performances yesterday of Frisch who had no opportunities to repeat his miraculous work this afternoon.

On the first of these plays Harris nipped Gowdy after bagging his hot shot over second base, while a few moments later he raced back behind first to get Frisch's ground-clinger and nail his man at first.

The Giants, on the other hand, failed at any time to wheel their attacking machinery into formidable position. Collecting only six hits altogether off Mogridge and Marberry they registered no more than one in any inning before the ninth when "Firpo" checked their best scoring opportunity.

To-day's record crowd represented a paid attendance of 49,243 and receipts of $191,677. This eclipsed the previous high figures of 47,608 and $186,572 for the Polo Grounds, set in yesterday's game.

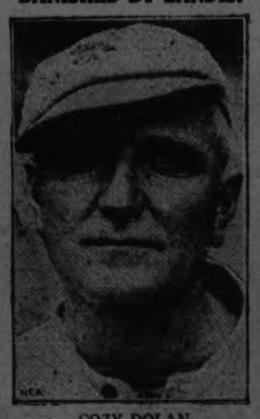
BANISHED BY LANDIS.



COZY DOLAN.
Coach of the New York Giants, cast out of Organized Baseball, for instigating Jimmy O'Connell to offer a bribe to Outfielder Sand of the Philadelphia National.

YOUNG BILLY CRAIG, MASCOT OF GIANTS, BELIEVES IN JIMMY O'CONNELL THOUGH WORLD MAY CONDEMN

"Jimmy" Can Always Bank On Me No Matter What Happens."

HIS IDOL CRASHED.

And Cozy Dolan, Who First Befriended the Boy, Also An Outcast.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.— There is one whose faith in Jimmy O'Connell and "Cozy" Dolan is unshaken.

The whole world may point condemning fingers at the two Giant players, outlawed from the diamond on a bribe charge, but there is a 13-year-old kid, with a cap pulled well down over his eyes and with freckles marking a trail over his nose, upon whose loyalty to the finish you can bet your shirt

For Billy, like all boy hero-worshippers, had built him a shrine and upon it were certain idols. In the eyes of tens of thousands these idols fell with a crash, but a very heart-sick Billy tries to pick up the pieces and fashion them together as he knew them.

Day after day the kid made a beeline straight from school to the green fence that walls the famous Polo Grounds.

Then one afternoon "Cozy" winked at the kid, flipped a finger under the kid's hat and said: "Wanta get in?"

It was only a matter of days until Billy became mascot to the Giants. That was four years ago.

And it was Jimmy O'Connell, the kindly, friendly young outfielder from the coast, who took Bily under his wing, and made a real pal of the kid mascot. It wasn't so many years ago that Jimmy was a "sandlot kid" himself, out in San Francisco

So you can understand why Billy Craig was a very heavy-hearted lad at a time when, as mascot of the National League leaders, he should have been the happiest kid in America.

But a fellow "has to be a man" under such circumstances and Billy had to pretend to be untouched by the double blow. If you're going to be a big leaguer some day, you've got to go right along no matter what happens.

"Gosh, I feel rotten about that. But I'll stick to Jimmy. He's my pal. Didn't he take me on the trip through the south with the team—him and Snyder. He's the best friend I had on the team. And Cozy's the fellow that first got me in. Can you beat it?"

Swatting a big catcher's glove for emphasis, Billy walked across the diamond, his head hanging and his eyes more than a little sad.

"I saw Jim in the clubhouse. Gosh, he looked sad! Sure, I told him to buck up. I don't know what to think. It don't make any difference what happens he's my friend and I'm his."

But all the bravado in the world and all the gestures of loyalty could not hide the disappointment and the hurt that Billiy's tone and look revealed.

"It don't seem natural that Jimmy isn't going along."

Billy didn't dare trust himself to look up at the Giants' clubhouse, which was but a dozen feet ahead.

All around were the suitcases, the bats, gloves and blankets ready for the Washington trip. Out on the field the last practice was under way And Jimmy was in blue street suit, with a light cap pulled over his eyes, now looking out the window and now looking disconsolately at the pile of baggage.

If ever a fellow needed a friend—"Nope, it's pretty tough," Billy continued. "It's pretty hard to believe that there isn't a mistake somewhere But Jimmy can always bank on me, no matter what happens.

"Sure, I've got to see the series through. The team comes first, always.

JIMMY O'CONNELL'S LOYAL FRIEND

Billy Craig—Happy in the friendship of Jimmy O'Connell, now a disgraced ball player.

SENATORS' HOPES OF VICTORY SOAR AGAIN

"Still Have Even Chance," Said Harris After Tuesday's Game.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—In the Washington clubhouse after yesterday's victory over the Giants, the Senators bubbled over like college football players after a great victory. "Goose" Goslin and "Firpo" Marberry were the particular heroes.

The spirit of depression which hovered over the group after the Giants had riddled their pitchers in the second defeat on Monday was completely driven out by the boiling optimism. With Walter Johnson, ready and anxious to pitch to-day, the American League champions feel that their fortunes have taken a decided upward swing.

"We still have that even chance," was all Manager Harris would say. "Seven games are easily possible before this thing is decided."

The Giants were generous in praise in the hitting of Goslin and the fielding of Manager Harris, but are undoubtedly confident that they will win the series in the next two games. Nehf and Bentley are ready to work to-day.

DENILIQUIN, Australia, Oct. 8. —(United Press).—A record price in the world's sheep industry was set when the Austin-Wanganella Co. sold a five-year-old stud ram for $25,000. It was bought by a breeder of a nearby city. It is interesting to note that a son of the same animal recently sold for $15,000.

MLLE. LENGLEN SEES END OF HER REIGN

PARIS, Oct. 8. — Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen fears she will have to learn tennis all over again. When the mighty Suzanne returned from her enforced vacation at Pourville, near Dieppe, where she retired after her breakdown at Wimbledon, she found that her drive had lost its speed and her placements their accuracy.

Playing two sets at St. Cloud, just previous to her departure for Nice, she found the courts too small and the net too high. Her vaunted placements, the terror of her adversaries, either went over the side lines or struck the net. After being one set down to Mme. Vaussard—a player to whom Suzanne could generally give fifteen and a beating —the former champion of the world threw up her racquet in disgust and announced that she would practice in secret at the Nice Club and would not play in public again until December.

"Three months without taking a racquet in hand have just about done for me," she said. "I don't want to make such a miserable showing before a gallery again. The next time you see me on the courts, I'll either be the old Suzanne or you won't see me at all."

Suzanne also has grown quite stout and will need hard work to get down to playing weight.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Oct. 8. — Stanley (Bucky) Harris was a native of Port Jervis, and he was presented with a diamond pin at yesterday's game by Alderman Charles March of this city, captain of the local baseball team. The people of the city subscribed to a fund for the pin.

and the cost of stenography and printing.

The suit was instituted in July, 1916, and its end is not yet even in sight. It is the only legal proceedings known in the history of jurisprudence, Mr. Wallace said, in which depositions have been taken continuously from two persons for approximately six years, one of them—George J. Gould—dying before his testimony was completed. The examination of George and Edwin, before trial, began in April, 1917. The lawyers have finished with Edwin, but still were seeking information from his brother when he died, May 16, 1923.

Warns Against Wasting Time.

Mr. Wallace's estimate of the expense came Monday in connection with his request to Walter B. Walker, of counsel for Frank J. Gould, to avoid repetition in reading into the record documentary evidence already before the court. He said that Mr. Walker had consumed $5,000 worth of time in this fashion and Referee O'Gorman warned all counsel to exercise particular care in this direction.

Judge Alton B. Parker, counsel for Edwin Gould, attempted to offer in evidence all of his client's testimony given in examination before trial. Judge Samuel Seabury, of counsel for Frank, said that it took twelve volumes to print the testimony and that it was too much to encumber the records with. The Referee ruled that it be excluded in its entirety. Such portions as are considered pertinent will hereafter be introduced.

Street Railway Men Want Automobilists To Be Sentenced.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 8.—(United Press.)—Jail sentences for reckless driving of automobiles were strongly advocated before the American Electric Railway Association today by H. A. Rowe of New York. Rowe declared that automobile accidents are increasing rapidly and that only the most strenuous measures would cut down the appalling annual death toll.

"We should constantly urge higher standards of driving ability, the licensing of all drivers only after fair examinations as to physical, mental and technical qualifications," he said. "The criminally reckless and the intoxicated driver should be absolutely excluded from driving. He who is repeatedly defiant of traffic regulations should have his license revoked and car impounded, or such heavy fines or imprisonment inflicted as to be a real burden and constant reminder.

Rowe also advocated the abandonment of red lights on the rear of automobiles, and the substitution of some other color.

"Today a driver observing a red light regards it only as an indication he must turn to the left," he said. "Red should mean but one thing—stop!"

NEW CREDIT PLAN

FAYETVILLE, Ark., Oct 8.—(United Press).— The American banker must save the American farmer by refusing to lend him money unless he helps himself, according to Loid Rainwater, President of the Arkansas Bankers Association.

In a paper read to a group of Arkansas bankers and business men attending a special program at the College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas here, Rainwater proposed the banker's pledge:

"I will not, in the future lend a farmer a dollar unless he agrees and does raise his food and feed; I will encourage and help him in dairying (three to five cows, or one to three acres of strawberries or tomatoes, radishes, cabbage or fruit. In other words, I will stand ready to help those that help themselves—and withhold credit from slothful."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner:

In the issue of Sept. 22nd and 23rd are two articles on Prohibition written by a Mr. J. H. Burnham in which he assails the methods employed as being barbarous and cruel. He would prefer to have the community made sober by accepting voluntarily the higher life of religion, culture, self restraint, honor, virtue thus making it ideal so would I but as all have not arrived at the place where they accept the good and reject that which is evil it is the duty of those who are more enligitened to help those who are less fortunate by placing those things which will hurt them beyond their reach, this is what prohibition will do. The custom of drinking intoxicants is very ancient as this form of poison has always been easily obtained from decaying friut, vegetables, grain, etc., the unnatural appetite once formed hereditary in many cases causing those so unfortunate to be unable to help themselves. Prohibition comes to the help of our less fortunate fellow beings and removes the thing which is injuring him. When he becomes thoroughly sober and the longing for intoxicants is removed the normal condition being restored the desire for the ideal asserts itself and he accepts voluntarily and gladly those conditions which in the beginning seemed oppressive. Hoping these few lines will help all those who have high ideals to work and vote for Prohibition.

EGERTON CHAPMAN,
R.R. 2, Chilliwack, B.C.

To Editor of Examiner:

As a citizen here before and after Prohibition one can't help thinking that we must be living now under better conditions than the old even if there are bootleggers and other law breakers he O.T.A. far outweighs their efforts according to reports from the west it would not be safe to make a change here as to the Evil effect of strong drink every right-thinking person will admit that it is more damaging in the long run than anything else, in the interest of a growing generation keep it out of the cellars so we can be called worthy members of the church es, there are too many wild drivers as it is then adding to their number by a so-called Government Control.

CHESS-CHECKER CLUB ORGANIZED

H. B. Cowan Elected As President of New Organization—Opening Games.

The first general meeting of the Peterboro Chess and Checker Club, was held in the Y.M.C.A. Building on Monday evening. Lively interest was shown in the simultaneous displays given by the Rev. W. S. Edgar and Mr. Maurice Fox. At the checker boards Mr. Edgar gave an excellent demonstration, and of the 16 games played he won 12, drew 1, and lost 3. It is interesting and encouraging to note that two of the players who won their games are Lindsay men, who made a special trip to Peterboro for the occasion. These men are Messrs. Innis and McEwan. The other winner was Captain Tom Best, the very well-known Y.M.C.A. official. Mr. Fox, who succeeded in securing second position in the recent Dominion Chess Tournament, demonstrated his fine ability by winning in a very short time all of the 11 games played against him. Messrs. E. Rigby, Senior, and E. J. Julian, contested the best games. A large number interested spectators were present.

After the simultaneous exhibition a meeting was called of those persons keen about forming a club. The following officers were elected:

President, H. B. Cowan; vice-presidents, Rev. W. S. Edgar and Maurice Fox; hon. secretary, S. W. Stock.

A committee of four to deal with the carrying out of a lively winter programme will be selected at the next meeting.

After the election of officers an executive meeting was held. It was decided pro tem., that the club meet regularly on Saturday afternoons and Monday evenings. The Y.M.C.A. has very kindly allowed the club the use of the main floor at the above stated times. It is especially requested that everyone interested in the good old games be present next Monday evening. An effort will then be made to get everyone acquainted with each other, and it is expected that, although the main part of the evening will be taken up with games further developments in the organization and winter program will be discussed. It was thought advisable that, for the first few meetings casual play should take place between the members in order that the relative strengths of the players be approximately determined. Thereafter, and most probably commencing November, a handicap tournament will be arranged as one of the functions, others being a series of lectures by the Rev. W. S. Edgar and Mr. M. Fox, further simultaneous displays, etc.

WHY WESLEY INSISTED ON MINISTERS' SHIFTS

LONDON, October 8. — One of Charles Wesley's reasons for instituting the "three year shift" system for his preachers, which has come in for criticism at the Wesleyan conference at Nottingham, was avowedly his own experience of the difficulty of preaching to the same congregation for any length of time.

After a while, he said, a preacher cannot find matter for preaching every morning and evening, "nor will the people come to hear him; whereas if he never stays more than a fortnight in one place he will find plenty of matter and the people will hear him gladly. I know that if I were to preach one whole year in one place I should preach both myself and my congregation to sleep."

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE SIDE SHOW OF LIFE" LOCKE TALE.

Adapted from "The Mountebank," Torrence Featured.

"The Side Show of Life," a Herbert Brenon Paramount production, at the Capitol Theatre to-day and Thursday, is an adaptation by Willis Goldbeck and Julie Herne of the novel, "The Mountebank," by William J. Locke. Ernest Torrence and Anna Q. Nilsson are featured.

The story opens introducing us to the clown Andrew Lackaday, known as Petit Patou, and his dog Primpin, mainstays of a small French travelling circus. The dog is killed, and Andrew takes a pretty young girl into his act. War is declared. Lackaday enlists, leaving the girl in care of a friend, and promising to return as soon as possible.

He is quickly promoted for bravery, and through his young adjutant meets a charming titled lady, and [illegible] in love with her, but remembers the girl back home who is waiting for him, depending upon him. He goes back. Lady Auriol (Miss Nilsson) fololws and sees him as a circus clown. She sees the girl Elodie, and believes she understands.

Which girl does Lackaday marry? Does he remain a clown or go back to a life of social ease (he's a cultured English gentleman you know)? These are the questions the picture is answering daily at the Capitol.

"The Side Show of Life" closes its run on Thursday night. Better take it in before it goes, because it isn't at all likely that you will see another such picture for quite some time to come.

OSHAWA CURLERS HAVE A NEW RINK

Building, Which Contains Latest Fixtures, Is 160 Feet By 110 Feet.

OSHAWA, Oct. 8. — The building committee of the new quarters for the Oshawa curling club, composed of W. A. Luke, chairman; T. H. McMurtry, secretary; Charles M. Anderson; Arthur G. Lambert, Dr. T. E. Kaiser, and W. E. Clarke, announced to-day that the new arena on Bond street East, would be ready to hand over to the Oshawa Curlers, Limited, as the holding company, which undertook the financing of the same, this week-end.

The structure is of wood and steel with a stucco finish, 160 feet in length and 110 feet in width, and contains the latest equipment for the comfort of home and visiting curlers. Just inside the main entrance will be the club rooms and secretary's office. The club room will contain a huge fire place, six large windows, with a southern exposure, and will be furnished with up-to-date fixtures, and a glass enclosure facing the ice, which will permit members and friends a clear view of the roarin' games the coming winter.

Underneath the club rooms is a large dining room, kitchen, furnace room, locker rooms, lavatories, etc., all of which will be heated by steam.

The curling surface will comprise eight sheets of ice, exceptionally well lighted with two rows of windows down each side, one on the ground level, and the other higher up, while for night curling the best system of electric lighting is to be installed.

The local curling fraternity had the motive in view in starting operations for a new building of keeping up with the town's growth into cityhood, and as the club of the "baby city of Ontario," are now in a position to entertain visiting curlers in a manner befitting a city club, and at the same time have accommodation to enlist a large number of those who have wished to become members in the past, but owing to the small quarters have been following the game from the sides.

With the new rink, with eight sheets of ice, situated one block north of Division street, then 100 yards down Bond, or directly behind the King street East public school, and the old rink on King street west, with five sheets of ice, the local club will have thirteen sheets of the best playing ice surface for next winter's annual bonspiel. During the other days of the coming winter the old rink will be used for public skating

FOUR MEET DEATH.

Four Tragic Deaths Recorded In Montreal Last Evening.

MONTREAL, Oct. 8. — Four Montrealers met tragic death last night.

The victims were George Stanley, 27, of Longueil, whose body was found suspended from the roof of his mothers' shed; Henry St. Jean, Bordeaux street, who was electrocuted while repairing a wire at the top of a telegraph pole on Stanley street; Leopold LeBeau, Jeanne D'Arch St., who was instantly killed when a truck he was driving collided with a train at Elmhurst avenue crossing; and Louis Forget, Pan street, fatally injured, when knocked down by a car at the corner of Faisonneuve and Lafontaine streets.

WEDDING BELLS.

LEONARD—MURPHY.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place on Tuesday morning at the church of the Immaculate Conception, when Nellie, daughter of the late Patrick Murphy, and Mrs. Murphy, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to George Leonard, son of the late Daniel Leonard and Mrs. Leonard, by Right Rev. Monsignor McColl.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. Stephen Murphy, looked charming in a grey travelling suit with a small black hat, and fox fur, and carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Margaret Murphy, who was attired in black velvet with hat to match, and fox fur, and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses. Mr. James McCoy supported the groom.

OBITUARY.

STEWART YELLAND.

Funeral services for the late Stewart Maxwell Yelland, who died on Saturday last, were held on Monday afternoon at 2.30 at the family residence, 539 George Street.

The esteem in which little Stewart was held by those who knew him, and the widespread sympathy felt for his parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Yelland, were abundantly evidenced by the large number present and by the wealth of floral tributes which surrounded the casket. His brightness and sweetness of disposition had made him many friends, and even in the six brief years of his life he won for himself a place in the affections of many which his untimely death has revealed all the more clearly. Most deeply mourning his loss are left his parents and a younger brother, Reginald.

The simple services at the house and graveside were conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young, of George Street Church, assisted by Rev. H. M. Manning. Bearers were four uncles of the deceased: Mr. F. J. Beck of Dunville, Mr. W. J. Beck of Hamilton, Mr. B. D. Furry of Hamilton, and Mr. W. E. C. Yelland of this city. Burial took place in Little Lake Cemetery.

JANE ADAMS.

There passed away this morning at 7 o'clock at the residence of 308 Stewart street, a life-long resident of this city in the person of Jane Rae, widow of the late Robert Adams.

She was born in this city, where she resided practically all her life and attended the St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, 308 Stewart street, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment. The Rev. J. W. Gordon, of St. Andrew's church, will officiate.

P. M. V. CHOIR PRACTICE.

The initial practice of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir was held at headquarters last night — about 45 members taking their places under the leadership of Mr. M. B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O.

There was keen enthusiasm on all sides, and the first instalment of the season's music was given a fair rehearsal, each part showing the class of music the choir intend taking up this year. The general opinion was "a bigger and higher class concert than in any previous year."

After the rehearsal and a small period of business, the president, Mr. C. S. Thompson, called upon Mr. Fred Sutcliffe to hear eulogiums from several members of the choir, and Past President Skitch, on behalf of the choristers, presented Fred with a silver Eversharp pencil, with the best wishes and the regrets of the choir on his departure for Toronto. Fred for the past four years has been the chairman of the Publicity Committee, and worked faithfully and well in the interests of the association, and the several speakers told him so in no uncertain manner. The recipient returned thanks and best wishes for the season's activities.

The members then gathered together, and had a social time with coffee, cake and ice-cream, a pleasant opener for the season of 1924-1925.

THREE COLLISIONS ON GEORGE STREET

Six Automobiles Suffered In Noon-Hour Accidents.

Three automobile accidents on George Street within a short period kept the police busy this afternoon. In all cases only the cars were damaged.

The first crash occurred at the corner of Simcoe Street at 12.15, when cars driven by Henry W. Ristow, 48 Lisburn Street, and M. J. Roach, 3 Engleburn Avenue, came together. Mr. Ristow was driving north on George Street and Mr. Roach east on Simcoe. The former's car suffered damage to the left front wheel, radiator and axle, while the latter's car is the worse by a damaged right running board and doors.

J. Clancy, 312 Aylmer Street, was driving south on George Street at 2 o'clock, when Ed. Haight, Campbellford, drove his car east on McDonnel Street and collided. The damage to Mr. Clancy's rear fender will be repaired by Mr. Haight, who must pay for the damage to his own engine, axle and fender.

While Constable Leonard Matthews was investigating this accident, Harry Seabrook, 310 Maitland Ave., appeared to report a third collision at the corner of London and George Streets, where his car was struck by the fire truck. His running board and door were damaged.

LABOR GOVERNMENT DEFEATED ON QUESTION OF COMMUNIST'S TRIAL PARLIAMENT WILL BE DISSOLVED

Premier MacDonald Meets King George Today With Request for Dissolution—Sir John Simons' Motion Carried on Vote of 364 to 198

RESULT MEANS EARLY ELECTIONS WHEN GOVERNMENT PASSES BOUNDARY BILL

Government Defeated on Motion to Investigate Withdrawal of Prosecution of Acting Editor of The Workers' Weekly on Sedition Charge.

LABOR PARTY WELCOMES ELECTIONS

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Great Britain's first Labor government virtually came to an end at 11 o'clock last night when by a combination of Conservative and Liberal votes the House of Commons carried a motion demanding that a select committee of the house investigate the action of the Attorney General Sir Patrick Hastings in withdrawing prosecution in the case of the Communist James R. Campbell acting editor of the Workers' Weekly, charged with inciting His Majesty's forces to sedition.

The government declined to accept the motion, and treated it as a vote of censure, which, if adopted by the house, would involve an appeal to the country against parliament's verdict. The debate was sharp and exciting and after it was closured the opposition wanted to drop Sir Robert S. Horne's motion of censure and vote on Sir John A Simon's amendment calling for an investigation. On the government's refusal to accept this course, the house divided on the question as to which it should vote on. By a vote of 359 to 198 it decided to vote on the Simon amendment. This was equivalent to the defeat of the censure motion, and the Simon amendment became the substantive motion and was carried 364 to 198.

Announcement of the figures was received with loud cheering and counter-cheering. The prime minister Ramsay MacDonald immediately arose and said :—"In view of what has happened, Mr. Speaker, "I move that the house do now adjourn.

This was agreed to unanimously.

Saw King To-Day

Premier MacDonald to-day requested King George to dissolve Parliament, thus necessitating a general election, the Prime Minister made known his decision to his Cabinet, when he returned to Downing Street, after a 45 minutes conference with the King in Buckingham Palace his announcement was expected following the Labor Governments defeat in the House of Commons, last night, when a Liberal proposal that a commission be appointed to investigate the dropping of the proceedings against a Communist editor, who had been charged with sedition, the vote was 364 to 198, the Conservatives solidly backing the proposal Election day will probably be set for November 8, as there is little likelihood that the King will refuse to grant a dissolution. The Labor Cabinet, the first to hold office in England, is not expected to resign until the nation has stated its judgment at the polls and then only if the vote is against the party.

When the House of Commons reconvenes at 3 p.m. it is believed MacDonald will have gained the King's asent to this effect.

The adverse vote last night was the thirteenth defeat incurred by the Laborities in their nine months in office. Political observers generally believe the Conservatives will make gains in the election, the Laborites hold their own and the Liberals lose.

The Present Line-up

It is almost certain that the Conservatives will remain the strongest party numerically and it is likely that Ex-Premier Baldwin will be returned to the head of the next cabinet.

Realizing the overthrow of Premier MacDonald in the impending British elections may profoundly affect the course of peace in Europe, The French Government is watching every development with interest.

It is pointed out that in the event of the Conservatives or Liberals coming to power, it is unlikely that England will sign the League of Nations protocol recently fashioned at Geneva, thereby ruining the opportunity to settle the security and disarmament question by the League.

A Conservative victory, it is believed here, might also affect the execution of the Dawes' plan.

Exciting Scenes

Throughout the final scenes the excitement rose to the highest pitch; jibes and retorts were flung across the house and some of the members indulged in singing. Up to the end there were rumors of manoeuvres to avoid defeating the government but if, as appeared not improbable from the tone of some of the speeches, there was some disposition on the part of the opposition to reconsider their tactics, they had seemingly committed themselves too far to recede.

There is little doubt that the Labor party and the government welcome an appeal to the country thus, as they contend, thrust upon them and are convinced that they will return to the house of commons a much stronger party, even though they may not command a majority in the house over all other parties. They believe they have a good cause to present to the electors in what they argued is the trivality of the question upon which they have been defeated and on their record especially in the realm of foreign affairs and finance.

May be Coalition

There is no reason to suppose that the King will oppose granting dissolution of parliament. The Liberals, it is pointed out, can hardly expect, in view of all recent political history that they will improve their party prospects by an appeal to the country and as far as the Conservatives are concerned their idea probably is that even if they should fail to attain an absolute majority in parliament there may arise up to form a new coalition from Conservatives and Liberals to keep Labor out.

Elected in January

The Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald came into power in Great Britain in January of the present year when the Conservative ministry of Stanley Baldwin, which had been at the helm only a few months, was dismissed by the House of Commons with a vote of lack of confidence because of its espousal of protection.

The defeat of the Baldwin administration was the culmination of a Laborite reply to the King's speech from the throne. The amendment declared that it was the duty of the public "respectfully to submit to Your Majesty that Your Majesty's present advisors have not the confidence of the house. "The amendment was introduced by John R. Clynes at present Lord Privy Seal, then deputy leader of the parliamentary Labor party. It was adopted by a vote of 328 to 250 after Mr. MacDonald had moved closure on the debate

On January 22, Mr. MacDonald went to Buckingham Palace at the request of the King and accepted the task of forming the new government of which he became the head. Thus Great Britain came under the domination of a Laborite government which included members of the nobility in its make-up.

At the time of MacDonald's assumption of power at the request of King George it was realized that at any tie by coalition of the Liberals and the Conservatives could overthrow him on a question of high import, for in the general elections of December, 1923, the Conservatives had 259 and the Liberals 159 seats, while the Laborities had only 191.

SIR PATRICK HASTINGS AN UNPOPULAR OFFICER

British Attorney - General Chief Cause of Labor Government's Muddle.

LONDON, Oct. 8. — (Canadian Press Cable.)— Sir Patrick Hastings, attorney-general, whose handling of the prosecution against John Ross Campbell, editor of the Workers' Weekly, charged with sedition, is largely responsible for the present muddle in which the labor government finds itself is one of those eminent lawyers, by no means few, who completely fail to shine in parliament.

Frankly, Sir Patrick has been as unpopular a law officer as any in recent years, although to-day when he rose to answer some questions in the house of commons which were not connected with the present crisis, he was given a cordial reception by his own side.

Sir Patrick Hastings, after leaving the Charter House school, where he was educated, led a somewhat mysterious life. When the South African war was on he enlisted in the "Devil's Own" regiment. Later he hacked out a hazardous existence on Fleet street, and it is even rumored that for some time he was on the stage. He himself has confessed that he has known what it is to walk the London streets with hardly any boots on his feet and that he has gone for two days on one meal. However, since being called to the bar 20 years ago he has never looked back and has been unusually successful.

IRISH BOUNDARY BILL READ IN UPPER HOUSE

Passed Second Reading Unchanged by Vote of 71 to 38.

LONDON, Oct. 9. — (Canadian Press).—The House of Lords last night passed the second reading of the Irish Boundary Bill without amendment, but by a vote of 71 to 38 carried Lord Salisbury's declaratory motion that the House "takes note" of the opinions expressed in Parliament and elsewhere that Article XIII. of the treaty contemplated nothing more than a readjustment of the boundaries.

This amendment is not to the bill itself and has no effect. In fact, some of the Conservative peers, including even Lord Carson, opposed it on the ground of the inadvisability of forcing an appeal to the country on the Irish bill, which might happen if the Lords insisted upon any amendments.

THANKS BOOTLEGGERS

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—A cross-fire of comment followed in the wake of Clarence Darrow's anti-Prohibition announcement in which he "thanked God for bootleggers" at a political banquet here last night.

Darrow's utterances came on the heels of an address by Mayor Dever when he explained that he had closed up Chicago's wet spots "because he believed in enforcing laws."

And then came Darrow, who said "I can't get a drink without going to bootleggers, and I frequently want a drink. So I thank God for bootlegging. I don't know what the Mayors' experience has been, but I've always had good luck with mine."

Darrow scourged those who pick out a foolish law and hide behind it, and lauded those who refuse to aid meddlesome reformers.

THE WEATHER

There was a heavy frost last night, much the heaviest of the present season. The thermometer was down to 20, or 12 degrees of frost. This frost will have a tendency to paint our forests with the variegated hues that give our woods such a gorgeous display of colour in the autumn. It has been said that nowhere else, excepting the Eastern States and eastern section of Canada, are such displays of colour to be seen. If you have eyes to see, and eyes that appreciate the beauties of nature, you cannot help but admire the wonders of nature's paint-brush as applied to our trees.—W.P.

TRIAL OF SMITH BANK DIRECTOR NOW UNDER WAY

BEGAN WEDNESDAY

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—The trial of Clarence F. Smith, first of the Home Bank directors to be tried before Judge Coatsworth in the county criminal court, on charges under the Canadian Bank Act started yesterday, after the trial of Sidney H. Jones, bank auditor had been completed. The charges are that he did make, concur in and approve false statements of the affairs of the bank. Gordon Waldron, K.C., and H. H. Davis, of Toronto and H. J. Trihey, K.C., of Montreal, are counsel for Smith. MacGregor Young, K.C., who is associated with D. L. McCarthy as crown prosecutors, outlined briefly the case of the crown contending that Smith as a director was aware of the condition of the bank and had approved the reports sent to the department of finance at Ottawa which were the crown claimed were false.

Inspector's Evidence.

The chief witness to-day was E. A. Kemp, who was chief inspector of the Home Bank. He stated that he had received his instructions to inspect banks from the general manager and that he had never inspected the Toronto branch or the Western Canada branches which were inspected from the Winnipeg office. Witness said he knew of the Frost and Western Canada Pulp and Paper loans only by hearsay and knew nothing about them official. Witness under instructions had made a special inspection of the C. A. Barnard accounts in the Montreal branch. He found that certain cheques from the Davie Ship Building Company had been dishonored. He also found that there was a large overdraft in the Barnard account because of certain cheques.

"Deposited by Barnard?"

"Yes, I believe so."

Witness had made a special trip to inquire about this account, and had reported the matter. He had seen Barnard and thought that he had given a statement of what security he would give. Witness had simply reported the facts of the situation and made no recommendation because the general manager had not asked for any.

Had No Suspicion.

"Did this not raise a suspicion in your mind about the accuracy of these accounts?" he was asked.

By April, 1923, witness said the British Dominions Company's overdraft in Montreal amounted to over a million. The securities and account were transferred to the head office and witness knew nothing more of them.

Witness said he had never inspected securities at the head office and his understanding was that the auditor did it. An inspection of the foreign department in 1923 showed a loss of $130,000. He had no knowledge of Mr. Daly's transactions with the bank. He could find nothing about the big accounts because they were all kept in the Toronto branch which he had never inspected. He knew that Mr. Daly had many irons in the fire but didn't know what they were. Inspection of the Toronto branch was not started before the bank closed its doors he said.

Thomas Gibbs who was assistant to the chief accountant identified the signature of the accused on the directors' attendance book. B. J. Roberts, secretary of the department of finance at Ottawa, identified the annual report for the year 1923 of the Home Bank, as it was received in Ottawa. The examination of Mr. Gibbs will be continued to-morrow.

BELFAST, Ireland, October 9 (Canadian Press).— Sir Lynden Livingstone Macassey, who arrived here yesterday, is said to have informed a prominetn member of the Ulster Parliament that he had been asked by the British Government to act as the third member of the Irish Boundary Commission.

Sir Lynden is a son of L. L. Macassey, the Belfast engineer.

MOTHER-IN-LAW SLUR WILL BE COMBATTED

ORANGE, N.J., Oct. 9.—A group of Essex County mothers-in-law have organized for social relaxation and to let the world know there is nothing in the mother-in-law joke. Their constitution says:

"We seek to kill the mother-in-law joke with kindness, to show that we are human and social beings who enjoy a bridge game and afternoon teas as well as do the young married matron and her flapper sister."

The name of the organization was not announced. Mrs. Joseph Pernitze of Woodland is president, Mrs. William Nelson of Newark vice-president and Mrs. William Schultz of Orange secretary. The headquarters of the club is at 88 William Street, Orange.

"The greatest object of the club," said Mrs. Schultz, "is to remove from mothers-in-law the handicap placed upon by the joke that has gone too far. When a young man marries he naturally expects his mother-in-law will not be a normal person. Why? Doesn't the joke say so and hasn't he been reading and hearing about it all his life? Well, we are going to remove that handicap."

EUROPE SHOULD BE FEDERATED

Germany Fears Countries Of Continent Will Be Destroyed By Russia.

MODELED ON U.S.A.

BERLIN, Oct. 9—A sharp intellectual clash developed at the International Peace conference yesterday between Count Coudenhove-Kalergi, son of the former ambassador to Tokio, and Professor Walther Shuckeing, Reichstag member, Hague Court Judge and member of the German Versailles peace delegation.

The altercation came over the desirability for a pan-European Federation similar to the pan-American Union Count Coudenhove-Kalergi expressed the opinion that the league of nations should be centralized and vitalized by creating within it five groups —pan-European, pan-American, British Empire, Russian Federation and Eastern Asia. He pointed out that the present league is incomplete because the United States and Russia are missing. America, he said, holds aloof because she is disgusted with the lack of unity in Europe. He declared that the European states must federate, as otherwise they will either be annihilated or destroyed by Russia, England, he said, excluded the pan-European scheme because her interests lie chiefly overseas with her dominions and colonies. But pan-European—he added, must obtain the most cordial relations with Great Britain.

Professor Schuecking argued that the pan-European programme is antiquated. To divide the nations into regional groups, he contended, would mean retrogresion from the league of nations ideal.

"Already 85 per cent, of the educated people of America favor the league of nations," he declared. "Soon the broad masses of the American people also will be permeated with the belief in it. Russia while killing off native capitalists only to call in foreign ones, also is heading more and more towards the west. Pan-Europe would prove a stumbling block to realizing the league of nations ideal."

TORONTO EXPLOSIONS.

Street Car Service Tied Up In Large Section Of the City.

TORONTO, Oct. 9. — (Canadian Press).—Two explosions at Strachan Ave Hydro terminal at 1040 last night plunged half the city into darkness and stalled street cars on all outlying runs. For a time street lights over practically the whole city were off but lights in downtown district were returned in a few minutes. At the peak of after theatre rush transportation service was crippled and with exception of Queen east scarcely a car was able to reach end of its run until long after midnight. Service was restored this morning.

Sixty per cent of the cars bought last year, says Curtis C. Cooper, automobile credit man, were purfraction of one per cent of the buyers are more than 60 days behind in behind in their payments.

WINDSOR DEMANDS LOWER GAS RATES

Council Will Appeal Recent Award By Board of Revision.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 9.—Mayor Mitchell said yesterday the entire council was behind him in his determination to force Windsor Gas Company to furnish natural gas at 30 cents per 1000 per cubic feet instead of 55 and 85 cents, the rate now charged.

In spite of the recent award given the gas company by the Board of Revision, Mayor Mitchell maintained the "perpetual" franchise which the city holds with the gas company invalidates any rate exceeding 30 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

"The franchise which the City of Windsor holds with the gas company is a perpetual one and calls for the rate to remain at 30 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. I intend to appeal the case to the courts," Mayor Mitchell declared.

In explaining the "perpetual" part of the franchise Mayor Mitchell said that no definite number of years had been mentioned in the contract. At present Windsor gas consumers are paying 85 cents as summer rates for 1,000 cubic feet and 55 cents winter rate.

DECORATIVE FROCK.

Here is a decorative frock made of velvet brocade in a very tender shade of blue banded with black fox fur. The wide flowing sleeves are graceful indeed and the cut of the skirt which allows the front to be very full is unique. These brocaded velvets come not only in one-toned materials but in very rich mottled and printed effects and with a different color in the figure than on the plain surface.

MOTOR BOAT BURNS ONE MAN DROWNED

Two Others at Windsor Saved By Using Life Preservers

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 9.—George Drouillard, 36, of Cadillac Road, Ford, was believed drowned yesterday when a motor boat in which he and two others were crossing river from Walkerville burned near the head of Belle Isle. His companions escaped by donning life preservers.

Norman Goulet, 22 of 66 Dacotah street, Walkerville, staggered into the police station with the first word of the mishap. He said he, Drouillard and Charles McCarthy, 28 of 409 Hall Avenue, Windsor, were crossing when their boat caught fire. Shortly after Goulet reappeared, McCarthy managed to swim ashore at Walkerville. Nothing has been heard from Drouillard, however.

CAR OVERTURNED.

Young Farmer Fatally Injured—Others Were Shaken Up.

KINCARDINE, Oct. 9.— When the car he was driving overturned on the highway between here and Tiverton yesterday morning, Nelson Hodgkinson, a young farmer living in Kinloss township, received injuries which resulted in his death, last night in Kincardine hospital, and Mary McDougall, of Kincardine, who was riding with him, lies in the same hospital in a serious condition, although hope is held out for her recovery. The girl's sister, Nellie McDougall, and Kenneth McDonald, also of Kinloss township, who were other passengers in the car, escaped injury, although they were badly shaken up.

SETTELL'S WIFE VISITED HIM IN HAMILTON JAIL

Was Told Prisoner Did Not Care To See Her When She Was Announced.

UNABLE TO SLEEP.

Settell Had Recently Been Given New Duties—Irregularities Reported To Beck.

HAMILTON, Oct. 9.—"My husband is an honorable man—he is going to face it out," Mrs. Ada Fogg Settell said yesterday after an hour's interview with E. C. Settell, in the jail here. "It was just a family chat," she declared. R. H. Greer, K.C., arrived late in the afternoon from Toronto, and went into conference with the accused man.

When told that his wife was coming, Settell said that he did not care to see her. As Mrs. Settell entered the jail, she held up a sheet of paper to hide from the photographers.

Tuesday night Settell suffered from another heart attack, and Dr. Morgan, the jail physician, had to be called. He administered some medicine, and he managed to sleep a short while during the night.

"How are you feeling?" he was asked.

"Terrible," was the reply. "I can't sleep or eat."

He asked anxiously of friends in Toronto.

"Tell them I'll pull through," he said. "I'll make a come-back—probably I can get away somewhere when it is all cleared up, and start over again in some other city. But things are certainly in a terrible mess right now."

Settell briefly discussed the letter which he sent to his sister in Montreal, together with a number of other letters. "I just said I was going away rather hurriedly and unexpectedly and wanted a change and a rest from everything up here," he said. "I wished her good luck and asked her to mail the letters enclosed in the large envelope in Montreal."

Was Given New Duties.

Investigations which have been made into the last few months' activities of Settell, while with the Hydro, indicate that he was not enjoying plain sailing. It is understood that Sir Adam, following certain irregularities reported to him as long as six weeks or two months ago, asked Mr. Gaby, the chief engineer, and Secretary W. W. Pope of the Commission to find some other employment for Settell, and that since that time another employee in the head office of the Hydro has been taking care of the chairman's correspondence.

Stamps Misused.

Among the matters which may be investigated by the proposed commission are irregularities that are alleged to have occurred in relation to the Hydro office's stamp account. It is said that considerable

Plebiscite Bulletin

Oct. 9, 1924 PETERBOROUGH No. 17

Hon. Mr. Ferguson's Announcement

PREMIER FERGUSON has stated that if Government Control(?) of the sale of liquor is attempted in Ontario, the liquor will be sold in sealed packages, and that it cannot be consumed on the premises.

This means that it will be carried into the homes, and consumed there.

It will be taken to clubs, hundreds of which will spring up all over, and become the cause of carousals that will shock the community, as has been the case in other Government control provinces.

It will be carried away and emptied into hip flasks that will help to extend drinking far and wide.

THE HIP FLASK IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Writing about conditions in British Columbia the staff representative of the Toronto Star, says:

"The flask, or the mickey, as it is called in British Columbia, is very popular in Vancouver and Victoria.

"It was amazing to me to see the number of drug stores whose windows were full of mickeys—½ pint flasks, warranted not to leak, and selling for about 35 cents.

"It adds much to the zest of life for a lot of young fellows to demonstrate by their devotion to mickey that no government control law can control them. I am told this type seek the admiration of friends by inviting them to take a pull.

"Major Burde, M.C., the member of the Legislature for Alberta, who is a drinking man himself, said some months ago: 'I can take you to a dance hall in Vancouver where any nig't you can find 300 young people, and among them boys of 16 and 17, who do not consider themselves as having 'class' unless they can produce a mickey from their hips.'"

OCTOBER MEETING HELD AT RECTORY

Pontypool Minister Provides Topic for Discussion

MILLBROOK, Oct. 9. — Rev. Canon and Mrs. W. C. Allen invited the Ministerial Association to hold the October meeting at the Rectory on Monday, the wives of the resident clergymen being asked to join the gathering for a social hour at the conclusion of the business session.

Rev. H. Wilkinson, of Pontypool, was the speaker for the day, his subject, "Jesus' Teaching Concerning Wealth and the Use of Money," being ably presented and provoking a lively discussion at its close.

Rev. R. M. Paterson, of Fraserville, president of the association, occupied the chair, others present being: Rev. R. T. Richards of Cavan, Rev. M. G. B. Williams, Rev. W. C. Allen, Rev. F. H. Howard and Rev. G. S. Gervan.

Rev. J. and Mrs. Wilks, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Gervan, Mrs. E. Westmacott, Mrs. L. H. Winslow, Miss R. Macnamara with the hostess Mrs. (Canon) Allen, completed the party when refreshments were served and a delightful social time was enjoyed. Vocal solos by Mrs. (Rev.) G. S. Gervan, and piano solos by Mrs. Allen and her daughter, Mrs. Winslow, were much appreciated by the guests.

The unanimous thanks of the gathering were extended to Canon and Mrs. Allen for their hospitality before a very pleasant occasion was finally brought to a close.

A meeting of the Temperance Committee for East Durham was held in Grace Presbyterian Church on Monday evening, about twenty representatives from the riding being present.

The president, F. W. Galbraith, of Port Hope, was chairman, and Rev. R. T. Richards, of Cavan, was appointed agent for the district and arrangements for public gatherings, etc., were largely left in his hands.

Five hundred names have been added to the voters' list throughout the riding by the supporters of the O. T. A., the Moderation League adding three hundred and seventy-eight. Forty-nine names were added in Millbrook. The district is now thoroughly organized, literature is being distributed, and plans made for carrying the campaign on with vigor until the twenty-third, when the vote will be taken.

Rev. Mr. Ross, of Janefville, led in the opening prayer at Monday's gathering, and a number who were present from outside points took part in the discussion of details in connection with making the campaign as successful as possible.

The raising of finances is an important item, and allocation of the amounts each part of the riding may justly be held responsible for was made before the meeting was dismissed. The money will be raised by personal canvass, and by an offering to be taken at each public meeting. Financial agents were appointed for the various towns and townships, and these, with their committees, will be at work in the immediate future.

The Young People's League was well attended on Monday evening, the chair being taken by F. N. Alcorn, first vice-president, Miss Margaret Howard reading the Scripture lesson during the opening devotional period.

A reading, "An American's Prayer," was given by George Elson, and a most appropriate article on the obligation of Christians to use their ballots in favor of retaining the Ontario Temperance Act was read by Miss Marie Kenyon.

The first chapter of the new study book, the subject of which was, "God," was taken up by Mr. Alcorn, the materialistic and theological conceptions of the Deity being clearly set forth and their contrasting points noted.

Mrs. G. W. Sayles, second vice-president, is arranging the programme for next Monday night's meeting, and explained that a contest will be held in November which will not only awaken interest but increase missionary knowledge as well.

The material to be used in the contest will be read each League meeting for the next four weeks, and it will be necessary for those taking part, and all may do so, to be present and memorize the information given. Sides will be chosen and the evening take the nature of an old-time spelling match.

Mrs. P. Stinson, the third vice-president, will entertain the Leaguers at her home the Monday evening preceding the annual fowl supper, when the church parlors will be otherwise in use, and it would be impossible to hold the Young People's service at the usual meeting-place.

Mr. Reg. Willis was appointed delegate to the annual district convention which will be held in George Street Church, Peterboro, on Friday of this week, afternoon and evening sessions, beginning at 2.30 and 7.30 p.m., respectively. The supper will take the form of a banquet in the Reid Street Hall, when League problems will be discussed. In the evening a temperance rally, with a strong speaker from the central office, Toronto, will present the claims in favor of retaining the O.T.A.

Fallis Line Church was well filled both afternoon and evening, on Sunday, when the annual anniversary occasion was observed, Rev. R. T. Richards, B.A., B.D., of Cavanville, preaching practical and inspiring sermons at each service.

Autumn leaves and flowers banked the altar and made appropriate decorations for the sacred edifice, giving a needed touch of brightness and warmth of color to the surroundings, while exemplifying the text, "Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness."

Music was furnished by members of the choir from the Millbrook circuit, Miss Estella Hetherington presiding at the organ. Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Miss May Byam, Messrs. V. Lambert, J. L. Byam and F. N. Alcorn supplied the special musical numbers for the services.

Evening worship at the Millbrook appointment was withdrawn to allow as many as possible to joint with the Fallis Line congregation in their special anniversary services.

Among those from the village who motored over in the afternoon were: Rev. F. W. and Mrs. Howard, Rev. Joseph Wilks, Mrs. H. Rea, Mrs. W. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. V. Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Mr. and Mrs. P. Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. McKnight, Mr. and Mrs. W. Tremaine, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley, Mrs. George Fallis, Misses M. Byam, E. Hetherington, F. N. Alcorn, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Aiken.

S.S. No. 7, "Matchetts," Miss Electa Preston, teacher, won the silver cup for efficiency in all School Fair work, in connection with the North Cavan district this year. The cup last year was won by S.S. No. 4, "Beechwood," Miss Findlay, teacher, and the competition between the schools was keen for the honor again this season. Beechwood came second, among the seven schools belonging to the North Cavan constituency.

The cup is donated to the school winning the highest average number of points per pupil in all School Fair work, and after being won for three years, not necessarily in succession, becomes the permanent property of the school.

Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker and family, of Orono, were in town on Friday for the Fall Fair, and were guests of Mrs. H. Rea and Miss A. Hampton and Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Burnham.

Inspector Mills, of Toronto, paid his official visit to the Continuation School here on Monday of this week. It will be necessary to engage a third teacher almost immediately that all requirements in connection with the work being done in the Continuation School may be duly complied with.

Miss Mabel Lord, of Beaverton, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lord, over the week-end, coming on Friday to attend the Fair.

Colonel D. Sutton, of Cobourg, was in town on Friday for the Fair.

Died—In Millbrook, on Monday, October 6th, 1924, Mary Whalen, relict of the late William Piercey. The funeral took place on Wednesday, from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. J. Pitt, King Street. Service was conducted at the house at 2 p.m. Interment took place in St. Paul's Cemetery.

OMEMEE SCHOOL HAS FIELD DAY

Girls' Basketball Game Headed the List of Events.

PARADE TO GROUNDS

OMEMEE, Oct. 8. — Omemee High School was favored with ideal weather conditions for their annual Field Day which was held on Friday afternoon. Promptly at 1.15 o'clock, the girls basket-ball was ents lined up in double file and march Immediately after the game, the stud ens lined up in double file and march ed in forms, the third form leading, to the Athletic Field.

Upon entering the grounds, one was attracted by a booth prettily decorated with the school colours of blue and gold, on which was displayed for sale many dainty baskets containing a variety of home made candy. Ice cream could also be procured here. Needless to say, on this warm October day, the supply was insufficient for the demand and many who did not purchase at an early hour, were disappointed when the booth was vacated owing to the supply being exhausted.

Prettily decorated programmes, made by a number of artists in the school, containing a list of events which followed, were generously donated to all who visited the booth.

At an early hour, many parents and interested citizens gathered, and not a dull moment followed, until the long list of events was ended. There were 27 in all and one could not help but admire the eager spirit, with which so many of the pupils entered into the various sports.

The Girls' Baseball game followed with Helen Johnson and Mabel Row an as captains, and five innings were played.

Last of all, the afternoons' programme was the Boys' Baseball which aroused the enthusiam of the many fans who remained to witness the final event. So closely contested was the game that in order to break the tie it was necessary to play 10 innings, The captains were Arthur Stephenson and Harley Overholt. Possibly, the most anticipated event was the banquet, which was held in the school, immediately after the sports were over. The science room which was converted into the tea room, was artistically decorated in colors of blue and gold, interspersed with maple leaves. Many magnificent bouquets of asters, dahlias etc., added to the table decorations, a wreath of maple leaves encircling the base of each.

The colour scheme was greatly improved by the numerous salads, jellies, and fruit, which were arranged by those in charge, in order to present the brightest and most attractive appearance possible. Partners were obtained for dinner by means of numbers. Covers were laid for 69, the guests being the judges and the Public School teachers. At 7.15, when the craving for the many good things was being keenly felt, the banquet commenced. After the wants of the inner man were satisfied to the full extent, the following programme was given, Rev. A. J. Black acting as chairman:

Toast to the King, proposed by Rev. A. J. Black, and responded to by the hearty rendition of the National Anthem.

Chairman's remarks.

Piano duet and encore, Lenore Jamieson and Jane Earle.

Scotch song, Laurence Sandy.

Remarks, Messrs. H. Lamb and F. G. Sandy.

Community singing.

Scotch song, Laurence Sandy.

Two contests followed, the first a humorous story which provided much entertainment for everyone, and the second a contest on trees.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and music and at an early hour the happy gathering broke up, thus bringing to a close another event in the history of the Omemee High School.

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 489L Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

GOVERNMENT WILL AID UNEMPLOYMENT

All Co-operation Which the Government Is Able To Afford Will Be Given.

TORONTO, Oct. 9. — (Canadian Press). — The problem of existing unemployment yesterday brought to Toronto representatives of Ontario cities who, after spending the morning in conference at the city hall, finally carried their case to the Provincial Government, meeting with Premier Ferguson and members of his cabinet, during the afternoon. The result of their deliberation was principally a formulation of the general policies to meet the present emergency although from Premier Ferguson specific assurance was obtained of all cooperation which the government could be able to afford, the exact extent of which is to be announced by the Premier during the coming week.

Further extension of the Provinces fall and winter road building programme and reasonably rapid start of construction of new provincial Government office building to east of Parliament Buildings in Queen's Park, were however, indicated by Premier Ferguson, as likely moves in government's efforts to assist the municipalities to combat the winter unemployment.

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

Game Association At Cobourg Objects To The Shooting of Pheasants.

COBOURG, Oct. 8.—(Special.) Last spring the Northumberland Fish and Game Protective Association received from the Department of Game and Fisheries a quantity of pheasant eggs, which were distributed among the farmers of this district. Several farmers were successful in hatching and raising broods of these fine game birds, the destruction of which is protected by the Ontario game laws. On Saturday two of these birds were shot near the old court house and the local association requests sportsmen to be careful in future and assist in the protection of the pheasants. It is understood that the association intends to see that the law is enforced in this respect.

Osland—Jex.

A pretty marriage was solemnized yesterday morning at 7.30 o'clock at St. Peter's church, Rev. Canon Sawers, rector, officiating, when Glenita May, daughter of Mr. A. L. Jex, was married to George Osland, of Galt, son of the late George Osland, Sr., and Mrs. Martin Jex, of Cobourg. The bride entered the church with her father as Miss K. Warner played the wedding march. She wore a flamingo suit with hat to match and fox furs and corsage of sunset roses. She wore also the groom's gift, a diamond and sapphire ring, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Edith White, of Port Hope, wearing pearl grey georgette, with grey hat and corsage of ophelia roses. Mr. William Brown was groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was an emerald set platinum bar pin, and to the groomsman golf cuff links.

The wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father, where the rooms were prettily decorated with lily of the valley, ferns, roses and pink snap-dragons.

Mr. and Mrs. Osland left later for a trip before taking up residence at Galt.

Among those who gave pre-nuptial teas and bridges in honour of the bride were: Mrs. D. W. Jex, Mrs. Jack Cook, Mrs. Norman Noble, Miss Marjorie Greer and Miss Lenore Wood, while Miss Parker gave a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. J. E. Stone.

Plywood, a combination of a number of sheets of wood glued together so that the grain of one ply, usually crosses that of the adjacent plies at 90 degrees, is much stiffer than sheet metal, deflecting only about .13 as far as aluminum, and about 1-100 as far as sheet steel. Tests for elastic energy have shown that the impact which will cause a plywood panel to receive a permanent dent must be seven or eight times as great as the blow which will severely dent sheet steel or aluminum.

ARMY COMMANDER NOW IN AMERICA

On Arrival, Bramwell Booth Immediately Went Into Private Conference.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Unheralded, General Bramwell Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Homeric and went at once into a secret conference with his aides in this country on this subject which reliable authorities whisper lies so close to the very life of the Salavation Army in the United States that one outcome might sever for all time its American from its British soldiers.

On the surface all is as smooth as was the General's voyage from Southampton.

There are, however, persons in contact with under currents who declare that before the General leaves the city there will be a decision on the vital question of whether to enforce as an order recommendations recently approved by General Booth that the Salvation Army members must not be members of any secret organization.

Should such requirement become absolute it is believed the result would be a secession on the part of the American Salvation Army or at least by those who are citizens of this country.

WEST HASTINGS TO HAVE A CONTEST

Charles Hanna, of Belleville, Was Unanimous Choice Of Convention.

STIRLING, Oct. 9. — (Canadian Press).—A Liberal convention for West Hastings met in this town yesterday to nominate a candidate for the Commons to contest this riding in the by-election caused by the resignation of E. Guss Porter. It was not only the largest Liberal convention ever held here, but was one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings of its kind ever held in the riding.

When Mr. Hanna's nomination was made unanimous he was greeted with prolonged cheers. He made a brief speech, in which he stated that, if elected, he would be found working for the constituency, and he hoped to have a better record than that of the member who had just retired. He would appeal to the electors on the policy that would benefit the whole of Canada. Duncan Marshall, Liberal organizer, was present and addressed the meeting on the issues of the campaign.

BURNING LEAVES.

At Kingsville on Tuesday a woman engaged in burning leaves had her dress ignited from the bonfire and was so badly burned that death insued.

The tragedy calls attention to the fact that burning leaves on the streets is not only a dangerous custom, but so far as Peterborough is concerned is contrary to the city bylaws.

To set fire to the leaves is perhaps the easiest means of disposing of them, but it is a method that carries a constant risk to children, and as the dispatch from Kingsville proves, to adults as well.

This being Fire Prevention Week, it is timely to warn citizens generally to devise some other method of getting rid of their leaves.

Burning them on the street may result in a Police Court case, even if it does not end in tragedy as the practice sometimes does.

THE SETTELL CHARGES.

Both Sir Adam Beck and the Ontario Government have acted with proper promptness in the matter of the allegations made by E. C. Settell, Sir Adam's private secretary, against Hydro officials and Hydro methods.

Settell, before his attempted flight to South America, mailed a twenty-page letter to the head of the Hydro Commission making a number of more or less definite charges.

Moreover, the former private secretary is said to have declared that if he went down "others would go down" with him.

As soon as the letter was received Sir Adam Beck demanded an investigation, and the Ontario Cabinet acted immediately by appointing Judge Colin G. Snider of Hamilton as a commissioner under the Public Enquiries Act to probe the Settell charges.

It is well that this matter has been promptly dealt with.

However little there may be in the allegations, the circumstances under which they were made would certainly create suspicion in the minds of many citizens.

The Hydro-electric enterprise as a public ownership organization must be like Caesar's wife, above suspicion, and those at the head of the Hydro could not afford to allow charges, no matter how exaggerated or foundationless they may be, to rest unanswered.

The investigation must be complete and fearless. Public opinion will insist that the truth be revealed.

JAILING BOOTLEGGERS.

Premier Ferguson has said in a letter to one of the prohibition leaders in the Province that his own personal view is that bootleggers should be sent to jail without the option of a fine.

A jail sentence for every conviction might go a long way toward stopping the illegal traffic.

The present method, in so far as the real bootleggers' organizations are concerned, is of little value as a deterrent.

The prospect of a heavy fine may keep some of the small fry out of the bootlegging industry, but to the well-organized gangs the paying out of a few hundred dollars in fines is nothing in comparison with the margin of profit that can be counted upon.

It is never the men higher up who are caught; the heads of the industry are safely in the background with an ample bank roll with which to pay the fines of the agents who may fall into the toils of the law.

Under the present system it is not difficult to get agents who are running little risk when there is plenty of money behind them in the event of an arrest.

Men who would not hesitate so long as the worst punishment confronting them was a fine that would not come out of their own pocket, are apt to think twice before running the risk of spending a few months in jail.

The men higher up can finance the fines, but would be powerless to keep their arrested agents out of jail.

Jailing bootleggers then would undoubtedly help to check the illegal sale, and Mr. Ferguson, who says he is in favour of that method of punishment, is in a position to see that his views are implemented by the proper legislation.

A TIMELY WARNING.

The hunting season is at hand, a period of enjoyment and recreation to many Canadians, and yet too frequently marred by bush fires and accidents.

Most of these are the result of carelessness, and realizing that fact the Ontario Safety League has issued a very timely special bulletin in which it gives much useful advice to hunters.

Many of the Peterborough men who go into the woods are doubtless careful about these points, but there are novice hunters at every camp who, by reason of their inexperience, are a source of danger to themselves and to others.

For their benefit some of the Safety League's suggestions may be repeated.

1. Build your camp fire on solid bottom only, that will not catch. Remove all inflammable material from the ground for a distance of about three feet from the fire. When leaving, put your fire completely out with water or mineral soil, and leave no fire smouldering under the surface. Remember a small fire is just as useful as a large one and more easily controlled.

2. See that the match, cigar or cigarette stump contain no fire before throwing them away.

3. Use new ammunition ONLY. It is safe and sure.

4. Look through the barrels of your gun before going out to see that no cleaning rag has been left in them and that they are clean.

5. Load your gun only after leaving camp, and take out the sheils when through shooting, and before returning to camp.

6. Always lay your gun down when not in use, so that no mud, sand or snow will get into the barrel—a gun with an obstruction in the muzzle, will burst when fired. DO NOT leave your gun standing against a tree, fence or other object.

7. Remove the shells before laying the gun down in a boat (to avoid blowing a hole in the boat), and remove the shells before transferring a gun from one boat to another.

8. Before climbing fences remove shells, place your gun through the fence and climb over.

9. Make sure that your gun, especially an automatic, contains no loaded shells before handling it when in camp, or around a camp fire.

10. When shooting at a target or testing guns, keep at least 300 yards away from camp. Do not discharge a gun after dark. Take the loads out before coming into camp or club house.

Hunting clubs who have not received a copy of the bulletin should write to the Safety League.

One of these posters hung up in every camp in Ontario would do much to reduce the annual casualty list.

WHY NOT SETTLE IN EASTERN CANADA?

Mr. R. L. Calder, K.C., in speaking to the Young Men's Canadian Club last night, raised a question which has often puzzled those of us who are not in the secrets of the immigration officials. He asked why it is that we insist upon railroading all our immigrants through to the prairie country—which is as unlike as possible to the home land that most of them have left—instead of giving them, first, a fair chance at settlement in the East where there is not only plenty of vacant land, but an abundance of human companionship.

The disquieting fact is beyond dispute that we lose much of the immigration which we carry at great expense and a vast amount of trouble through to the West. Various reasons are given for this leakage. Crop failures are blamed until we get a bumper crop—and still the exodus goes on. Then the blame is shifted to the pressure of debt and high interest rates. But experts have been proving beyond the shadow of contradiction that what has ruined similar farming regions in the American West has been precisely too much and too easy credit. Naturally the railways come in for attack. They charge too burdensome freight rates—yet only one of the lines engaged in carrying grain is even making expenses.

It is obvious that other causes must be sought. One frequently mentioned is loneliness. Another is the monotony of the prairies. The fact is that we probably do not pay enough attention to the psychological factors of the problem. It is as true as ever that man shall not live by bread alone. Nor can he live by wheat alone. This is not a plea for mixed farming. It is a plea rather for giving these newcomers to our country a sunny and comfortable outlook on life—a home where it is possible to feel at hme—a welcome into our midst and not a cold introduction to the vast outdoors "where men are men"—but where women go insane.

The lure of the West is not hard to analyze. It stood out from the first as a great money-making proposition. Hordes were to rush in there and "mine wheat" from the virgin prairies. Scratch the soil and it would laugh with a harvest. This slogan did much toward emptying the East and scattering abandoned farms all over our pleasing countryside. Men were ashamed to stay at home and make a comfortable livelihood when they could "go West" and get rich.

So we naturally come to the conclusion that when we talked of "immigration," we talked of the West. While our own people were leaving homesteads in the East to migrate to this magnetic wheat Golconda—much as if a new oil region had been opened up—it was surely nonsense to expect foot-loose immigrants, who could just as well go West as East, to settle on the deserted farms of Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, while their recent owners grew rapidly wealthy in the opulent West. The fat prairies were the all-powerful attraction for the home-seekers. So we hurried them all out there.

But, in viw of recent developments, might we not try a change of policy? The wheat lands of the West are just as good as they always were; but "wheat-mining" has fallen into less buoyant days. We have discovered that the growing of wheat is carried on in competition with much of the worst paid labor in the world—Russian, Indian and the like. Inevitably, the Old World crops fix the market price at Liverpool. Here is another likely "cause" for the Western decline.

But all this being so, might we not think a little along the lines of Mr. Calder's trenchant address, and see if we cannot divert a larger portion of the fertilizing stream of immigration into the all-too-empty reservoirs of the East? Let us try reviving the Maritime Provinces that way. Many of the farming communities of New England—long despondent—are being revived by grateful immigrants from Central Europe, who are far happier in their lovely surroundings than the first Pilgrim Fathers ever were. —Montreal Star.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Sir,—

Mr. Burnham is giving expression to a mistaken idea when he says that General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, was an opponent of prohibition. The Salvation Army, from its founder General William Booth and its present General, Bramwell Booth, down to its humblest members, stands for prevention of sin—in every way possible—as well as for the salvation of the sinner.

In fact, so far as the Salvation Army is concerned, prohibition has been in force since the beginning, and no man or woman has ever been allowed, or ever will be allowed, to become a Salvationist who touches, tastes or handles intoxicating liquor in any shape or form.

It is true that the conversion of many drunkards through the agency of the Salvation Army bears out the Generals' contention that the hope of the sinner is in the mercy and power of God; but is it the desire of any right thinking person to put temptation in the way of young people ,and see them become drunkards and outcasts, in order to prove the power of God to save?

Mr. Burnham should attend a Salvation Army meeting conducted by General Booth, or any of his officers. He would soon find on which side of the Prohibition question the Salvation Army stands. The Salvation Army is unitedly standing for the abolition of all evil, striving at all times to remove temptation from the path of the young, and to lift up the standard of right living for all.

No Salvationist wishes to be classed with the enemies of Prohibition. Mr. Burnham will find no advocates of the liquor traffic and its attendant evils in the ranks of the Salvation Army.

Thanking you, dear sir,

Yours truly,

ALICE M. LEADER,

671 George Street.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—Rogers & Maybee bought a few export steers for space fillers at $6.75 and $7 a cwt. Loads of light butchers' heifers, not good mediums, sold at $5 a cwt.. Billy O'Neill bought a load of 1,000-lb. Ontario feeders from J. B. Shields at $5.30 a cwt. to go to Elmira. Other loads of lighter stockers changed hands at $3.75 to $4.25 a cwt. One big bunch of good medium butchers' cows went to the packers at $3.75 a cwt.

A few choice handyweight butchers sold at $6.60 a cwt. but a buyer said it would be impossible to get a load of these in the entire yards. Good handyweight butchers brought $6 to $6.25, and mediums $5 to $5.50. There was an excellent demand for butchers' cows and these were up 25c a cwt. Bunches of good medium cows are bringing $3.75 a cwt. For a load of Western feeders, 1,000 to 1,100 lbs., for export, Rogers & Maybee paid $5.50 a cwt., and three export heifers were taken at $6 a cwt. Buyers were much more active around 11 o'clock and most of the cattle offerings were contracted for sale.

The Jewish holidays will have some effect on the calf trade, but the volume arriving is small and will serve to offset this. Choice calves sold at 11½ cents and good ones at 10 cents. Heavy f.o.b. calves sold at 7 cents.

The bigger run of lambs today set the packers making lower bids and it was felt that it would be hard to hold the 12-cent market for ewes. One small package of bucks at the initial sale cost 10 cents a pound. R. Bracken bought 600 lambs for the Harris Abattoir at 11½ cents to 11¾ cents. Some choice sheep sold up to 8 cents a pound.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 9 (Canadian Press). — Wheat prices scored a brisk upturn at the last yesterday as a result of enlarged buying based more or less on a correct opinion that crop estimates issued yesterday afternoon at Winnipeg would prove bullish. Reports of rain in Canada counted also as a strengthening factor.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1-4 to 1-8 cents net higher, December 150 5-8 to 150 3-4 and May 155 3-4 to 155 7-8.

Corn finished unchanged to 1-4 up.

Oats finished at 1-8 to 1-4 cent gain.

Provisions were unchanged to 30 cents lower.

According to the latest unofficial figures the 1924 yield of wheat in Canada's Prairie Provinces is 266,000,000 bushels, contrasting with a recent widely noticed estimate of 296,000 000 bushels and with 452,000,000 bushels harvested in 1923.

Announcement of recent liberal export sales to the Orient from the United States tended further to re-establish confidence here among the friends of higher prices for wheat, and so likewise did less optimistic forecasts regarding the outlook for the Australian crop.

On the other hand the market early was depressed by a decided setback in values at Liverpool by better weather in Argentine and by views in some quarters here that the world shortage of production had been discounted.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—(Canadian Press).—The demand from English importers for Canadian grain here today was quieter than it has been of late owing to high prices that prevail in this market. There was a demand from local exporters for Canadian Western barley and sales of feed and rejected grades were made 5½ cents per bushel under the Winnipeg October opinion, c.i.f. basis ports. Prices for Ontario grades of malting barley recovered from the recent decline today.

No. 3 extra was quoted at $1.08; no. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track.

Owing to the renewed strength in the Canadian cash wheat situation, a very strong feeling developed in spring wheat flour and prices were advanced 20 cents per barrel. The volume of business for export account was small owing to the fact that foreign buyers have not responded to the higher prices. There was no further change in winter wheat flour, prices being well maintained.

The volume of business in millfeed was moderate and the tone continued steady. The market for rolled oats was firm.

No change of any importance occurred in the egg situation. The trend was steady under a fair demand from local buyers.

Prices for old crop beans were still quoted at $2.95 to $3.10 per bushel for one pound packers and large supplies were on hand.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 8.—The 1924 wheat yield for the three prairie provinces is estimated at 266,125,000 bushels in a report issued today by the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association. This estimate is about 25,000,000 bushels below the Dominion bureau of statistics report. The association estimates coarse grains as follows:

Barley—54,227,000 bushels.
Rye—9,225,000 bushels.
Flax—6,092,000 bushels.

ORIGINAL "ANNIE LAURIE."

Crude Lines Beautified.

It is just 100 years since "Annie Laurie" was first published as a song but the version thus made popular differs greatly from the original ballad as written, a century earlier, by William Douglas, of Fingland.

Douglas' song had only two verses, the second of which ran:

She's backit like the peacock,
Her breast is like the swan;
She's jimp aroun' the middle,
Her waist ye weel micht span—
Her waist ye weel micht span;
And she has a rollin' e'e.
And for bonnie Annie Laurie
I wud lay me doon and dee.

It was Lady John Scott who revised these crude lines, and entirely wrote the third and most beautiful verse of the immortal song.

MADOC FAIR'S RACES CANCELLED BECAUSE OF HORSEMEN'S DISPUTE

Drivers Objected To Changing Speed Of First Race —Horses Withdrawn.

ATTENDANCE BIG.

(By Staff Reporter.)

Madoc's Agricultural Fair for 1924 closed its second day yesterday with a record attendance and exhibits in all classes which were better and bigger then ever before. Fine weather yesterday afternoon made a splendid setting for the big day.

Forty-seven hundred paid admissions were registered at the gate. These, with all children admitted free, sent the attendance up beyond the five thousand mark, far in advance of last year's total of thirty-two hundred, when a charge was made for juniors. Seven hundred and sixty-two cars entered the ground yesterday, the automobiles being parked on every side of the enclosure that forms Madoc's Agricultural Grounds.

In the exhibits there were thirty-nine hundred entries, the largest number of entries recorded to date in any of the town's annual Fairs.

A pleasing feature of the afternoon's entertainment was the programme put on by the school children, much of whose work also added to the interest of the main building, where examples of their proficiency in art and manual training occupied a large section. On a outdoor platform the children gave an entertainment comprised of physical drills, songs, and a series of well-executed dances, including the Highland Fling, the Sailor's hornpipe and the Sword Dance.

Plenty of band music was supplied during the afternoon by the Madoc Brass Band and the Scottish bandsmen belonging to the Arhe Marks Stock Company, playing during Madoc's Fair days.

Races Called Off.

Owing to the difference of opinion between the officials in the judges' stand who were in charge of the racing programme and the horsemen, two of the scheduled races were called off. Three races were advertised as a 2.25 class, a 2.40, and a 3.00. When the judges announced the changing of the first to a 2.20 speed event, the horsemen objected and withdrew their horses from all races, with the exception of A. Elmhirst of Keene, whose entry of two horses owned by him in one event was also objected to by the others.

The trouble it was said by a spectator arose out of a difference of opinion between the judges and the horsemen at a sports day held in Madoc on 8th August, when the judges complained that the racing men fixed things to suit themselves. Charges of the same nature were laid to the door of the horsemen by the judges yesterday.

A 2.20 race, substituted for one of the cancelled events, was entered by two horses owned by A. Elmhirst of Keene, Polly Stout winning first place in all thrte heats, and Just Jack, second. Time. 2.22 1-4, 2.21, and 2.20 1-4.

Another substitution was a three-minute race, with Seth Wheeler of Belleville entering Black Joe, and Charles Bailey of Rossland entering Judge Whaling.

Black Joe took first place in the three-minute race, Jud Whalen coming second in all three heats.

Time: 3.00, 2.59 1-2, 2.59 3-4.

Judges for the races were Fred Curry of Madoc, James Hill, M.P., of Stannonville Thomas Thompson, M.P., of Madoc, and Angus Nicholson, of Madoc.

Timer: J. L. McGowan of Tweed.

Starter. Clayton Tucker, of Stirling.

Clerk: John Ockerman of Madoc.

Although the Madoc Fair lacked a regular Midway, there was plenty of fun and excitement going on among the crowds who patronised the refreshment booths and the many games which enlivened the promenade between the poultry show and the race track. A dozen or more centres of amusement included popular dart and "throw the ring" games, and the section where a dark-eyed son of Ethiopia stuck his head through an opening in a sheet for the crowd to shy balls at.

Good Exhibit of Ladies' Work.

In the main building was ladies' work, flowers, vegetables, and a display of the work of the public school children. At the entrance to the building were shelves holding enormous pumpkins and squash. Inside were numerous examples of the proficiency of the ladies of Madoc in sewing and domestic science. The fancy work section held some really beautiful pieces of finely-wrought handicraft, in coloured silks and white embroideries of many types. The linens were especially good, the buffet sets being very pretty, with one carried out with a design of conventionalized cornflowers, another in tiny checkered squares of blue and white. Lingerie and woollen sweaters and infants' wear were flanked by several paintings in water and oil colours, with half a dozen pretty painted cushion covers.

The interior of this building, in every display, was arranged with an eye to artistic effect and the crowds that passed in and out were careful to take a look at everything in view. The flowers made a noble showing, with some very nice roses and asters and a bouquet of exquisite white and pink dahlias. Foliages and ferns were also present in numbers.

In the central section also, where overhead were arranged a large assortment of good-looking quilts, with a few rag and hooked rugs, were vegetables in fine array and bags of grains, all arranged in the massed effect that adds attraction to such exhibits. There were some very good-looking apples, and a number of large cheeses, white and coloured, in the quantities which support the contention of Madoc, a cheese-making centre, of having the biggest cheese exhibit between Toronto and Ottawa.

There was a quantity of butter also, and the dressed dolls that formed some of the children's exhibits. The ladies had a toothsome display of cooking, in cakes and pies and biscuits, also dressed fowl, and a number of loaves of bread, whose outstanding entry was an enormous loaf fully two feet in diameter.

The work of the school children covered a sizeable portion of one wall and occupied shelves in one corner. Green plasticine maps of the North and South American continents were especially good, mounted on heavy cardboard, and there was some finely-done work by the manual training classes, including tiny models of automobiles, sewing baskets, and sundry odds and ends. There were drawings of conventional figures and of flowers and landscapes, in crayons and colours; penmanship copies, having to do with verses commemorating "The Fighting Temeraire" and the "Slave's Dream"; dainty bits of sewing by the girls, in towels and crocheted mats; pressed leaves affixed to paper; papier mache lamp shades and tiny baskets; paper cut-outs of Easter bunnies and shamrocks, and ingenious little novelties in plasticine rabbits and squirrels and kitchen utensils. The children had a notable and well-exhibited section that received much admiring attention and comment.

Livestock Display.

Cattle and sheep and swine occupied outdoor stalls over on the hill-top. About fifty head of cattle had the biggest showing in Holsteins, with a few Jerseys, A. H. Tufts of Tweed, James Caskey of Keene and W. H. Kells of Madoc having the most cattle. About forty swine were in high carts, Adam Dean of Madoc showing bacon hogs, W. H. Heath and C. U. Heath of Stirling the Tamworths and Yorkshires. W. H. Heath received five firsts and five seconds for his lot. The sixty-odd sheep had the biggest exhibits from E. Maynes of Thomasburg, J. G. Honey of Roseneath and Hutchinson and Sons of Warkworth, the latter showing pure-bred Lincolns.

A fault found with the showing here, as at many of the Fall Fairs, was the fact that all swine were judged in the same way, instead of in separate classes.

Judging in the ring drew the interest of the crowd, as usual. General purpose horses were in the lead, with some good heavy beasts. Richardson and Son of Stirling, Chas. Vance of Harold, G. D. Watson of Wallman's Corners and S. P. Hagerman of Belleville had good exhibits in the light horse class, while heavy horses were shown by many, including G. Garrett of Erinsville, W. LeBarge of Stoco, Victor Irwin of Campbellford, Percy Downey, James and Walter Whytock of Madoc.

The poultry were housed in a shed with open sides, the overflow in the exhibit for which there was no room, occupying boxes on the ground. About three hundred birds were on view, in a very good variety, including a few silver Polish, guinea fowl and a large showing of waterfowl, with Emden geese in the lead. Pigeons, fantails and tumblers occupied half a dozen coops. Messrs. Barton of Madoc, H. Van-Allen of Stirling and Lorne Hutchinson of Warkworth were big exhibitors of poultry.

Among the miscellaneous exhibits were a couple of dozen glistening cars, J. B. Boyce of Belleville showing the Essex, Leggett and Buckley of Belleville the Maxwell-Chrysler, R. P. Wellman of Madoc the Star, J. H. Naylor of Madoc the McLaughlin and Chevrolet, Haselstine and Son of Belleville a Reo speed wagon and touring model.

COULDN'T EVEN WALK AROUND HER HOME

"Inside of 24 hours after starting on Tanlac I could tell it was helping me, and five bottles has increased my weight 10 lbs.." is the striking statement made recently by Mrs. Kate Wrigley, 20 Lipton Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

"For a whole year before taking Tanlac stomach, liver and kidney disorders had me so run down that I couldn't even walk around in the house without suffering extreme discomfort. Frequently after eating my stomach would hurt me so that I would cry out from the pain. Nights my rest was often broken and mornings my tongue was coated white. I had no appetite, and my weight was going down.

"But Tanlac has made me eat, sleep and feel better than in two years. To this great medicine alone is due the credit for the wonderful improvement in my health."

Tanlac Vegetable Pills recommended by the manufacturers of TANLAC.

FABLES ON HEALTH

WATCH YOUR BELT.

After a month or so of relaxation following his vacation Mr Mann of Anytown awakened to the distressing fact that his belt was again getting tight.

The "ba-- window" lost through exercise and conditioning was creeping back. It would not be long before he could lean his bridge hand upon it.

Men and women alike will keep in good physical trim over a period of time, then climax it with vacation exercises.

Returning to work with renewed vigor, they will grow careless. They feel fine. Old eating habits will come back upon them. They will neglect their exercises, and back will come the fat, the headaches, and all the rest.

The moral is simple: Don't lie down on your duty to yourself any more than you would lie down on the job!

quantities of stamps drawn from the Commission's supply, were charged to expense accounts. Quantities of these stamps were said to have been enclosed in envelopes containing orders for goods on Toronto dealers, with fictitious names attached to the orders. The stamps were in payment for the goods ordered. When the goods were delivered at the Commission's offices on University Avenue, the person whose name was signed to the order did not collect the goods.

It is reported, somewhat indirectly, that dealers receiving such orders with as much as $10 worth of stamps enclosed for payment, became suspicious and reported the circumstances to Sir Adam Beck, who himself met some of the shortages in the stamp account.

FAT THAT SHOWS SOON DISAPPEARS

Prominent fat which comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden to carry, a hindrance to activity, a curb upon pleasure. You can remove the fat where it shows by taking after each meal and at bedtime, one Marmola Prescription Tablet. These little tablets are as pleasant and effective as the famous prescription from which they take their name. Buy and try a box today. All druggists the world over sell them, at one dollar a box, or you can order them direct from the Marmola Co. General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. You can thus say good-bye to dieting, exercise and fat.

PRODIGAL.

Things do not always run true to precedent. A prodigal son, returning home in New York, failed to find a fatted calf awaiting him. There was a warrant out for the prodigal.

His father, a plainclothesman, served the warrant—took him to jail. This is not without its note of tragedy. Can you imagine the mental and spiritual tortures this father went through?

Sakr-el-Bahr laughed, and he mocked now in earnest. He set his left foot upon the rowers' stretcher, and leaned forward and down his elbow upon his raised knee so that his face was close to Lionel's.

"For your deliverance?" said he "God's life! Lionel, your mind was ever one that could take in naught but your own self. 'Tis that has made a villain of you. Your deliverance! God's wounds! Is there none but yourself whose deliverance I might desire? Look you now. I want you to swim to Sir John's ship and bear him word of the presence here of this galeasse and that Rosamund is aboard it. 'Tis for her that I am concerned, and so little for you that, should you chance to be drowned in the attempt, my only regret will be that the message was not delivered. Will you undertake that swim? It is your one sole chance short of death itself of escaping from the rower's bench. Will you go?"

"But how?" demanded Lionel, still mistrusting him.

"Will you go?" his brother insisted.

"Afford me the means and I will," was the answer.

"Very well." Sakr-el-Bahr leaned nearer still. "Naturally, it will be supposed by all who are watching us that I am goading you to desperation Act, then, your part. Up and attempt to strike me. Then, when I return the blow—and I shall strike heavily, that no make-believe may be suspected—collapse on your oar, pretending to swoon. Leave the rest to me. Now," he added sharply, and, on the word, rose with a final laugh of derision, as if to take his departure.

But Lionel was quick to follow the instructions. He leaped up in his bonds, and, reaching out as far as they would permit him, he struck Sakr-el-Bahr heavily upon the face. On his side, too there was to be no make-believe apparent. That done, he sank down with a clank of shackles to the bench again, whilst every one of his fellow slaves that faced his way looked on with fearful eyes.

Sakr-el-Bahr was seen to reel under the blow, and instantly there was a commotion on board. Biskaine leaped to his feet with a half cry of astonishment; even Asad's eyes kindled with i terest at so unusu l a sig'it as thato a galley slave attacking a corsair. Then, with a snarl of ange,r the snarl of an enraged beast almost, Sakr-el-Bahr's great arm was swung aloft and his fist descended like a hammer upon Lionel's head.

"Thou dog!" he roared, and then checked, perceiving that Lionel appeared to have swooned.

He turned and bellowed for Vigitello and his mates in a voice that was hoarse with passion. Vigitello came at a run, a couple of his men at his heels.

"Unshackle me this carrion and heave it overboard," was the harsh order. "Let that serve as an example to the others. Let them learn thus the price of mutiny in their lousy ranks. To it, I say."

Away sped a man for hammer and chisel. He returned with them at once. Four sharp metallic blows rang out, and Lionel was dragged forth from his place to the gangway deck. Here he revived, and screamed for mercy as though he were to be drowned in earnest.

Biskaine chuckled under the awning. Asad looked on approvingly. Rosamund drew back, shuddering, choking and near to fainting from sheer horror.

She saw Lionel borne struggling in the arms of the boatswain's men to the starboard quarter and flung over the side with no more compunction or care than had he been so much rubbish. She heard the final scream of terror with which he vanished, the splash of his fall and then, in the ensuing silence, the laugh of Sakr-el-Bahr.

For a spell she stood there with horror and loathing of that renegade corsair in her soul. Her mind was bewildered and confused. She sought to restore order in it, that she might consider this fresh deed of his; this act of wanton brutality and fratricide. And all that she could gather was the firm conviction that hitherto he had cheated her; he had lied when he swore that his aim was to effect her deliverance. It was not in such a nature to know a gentle mood of penitence for a wrong done. What might be his purpose she could not yet perceive, but that it was an evil one she never doubted, for no purpose of his could be aught but evil. So overwrought was she now tha she forgot all Lionel's sins, and found her heart filled with compassion for him, hurled in that brutal fashion to his death.

And then, quite suddenly, a shout rang out from the forecastle.

"He is swimming!"

Sakr-el-Bahr had been prepared for the chance of this.

"Where? Where?" he cried, and sprang to the bulwarks.

"Yonder!"

A man was pointing. Others had joined him and were peering through the gathering gloom at the moving object that was Lionel's head and the faintly visible swirl of water about it which indicated that he swam.

"Out to sea!" cried Sakr-el-Bahr. "He'll not swim far in any case. But we will shorten his road for him.

He snatched a crossbow from the rack about the mainmast, fitted a shaft to it and took aim.

On the point of loosing the bolt he paused.

"Marzak!" he called. "Here, thou prince of marksmen, is a butt for thee!"

From the poopdeck, whence, with his father, he too was watching the swimmer's head, which at every moment became more faint in the failing light, Marzak looked with cold disdain upon his challenger, making no reply. A titter ran through the crew.

"Come now," cried Sakr-el-Bahr. "Take up thy bow!"

"If thou delayest much longer," put in Asad, "he will be beyond thine aim. Already he is scarcely visible."

"The more difficult a butt, then," answered Sakr-el-Bahr, who was but delaying to gain time. "The keener test. A hundred philips, Marzak, that thou'lt not hit me that head in three shots, and that I'll sink him at the first! Wilt take the wager?"

"The unbeliever is forever peeping forth from thee," was Marzak's dignified reply. "Games of chance are forbidden by the Prophet."

"Make haste, man!" cried Asad. "Already I can scarce discern him. Loose thy quarrel."

"Pooh," was the disdainful answer. "A fair mark still for such an eye as mine. I never miss—not even in the dark."

"Vain boaster," said Marzak.

"Am I so?" Sakr-el-Bahr loosed his shaft at last into the gloom, and peered after it, following its flight, which was wide of the direction of the swimmer's head.

"A hit!" he cried brazenly. "He's gone!"

"I think I see him still," said one.

"Thine eyes deceive thee in this light. No man was ever known to swim with an arrow through his brain."

"Aye," put in Jasper, who stood behind Sakr-el-Bahr. "He has vanished."

"'Tis too dark to see," said Vigitello.

"Well, well, shot or drowned, he's gone," he said, and there the matter ended.

Sakr-el-Bahr replaced the crossbow in the rack, and came slowly up to the poop.

In the gloom he found himself confronted by Rosamund's white face between the two dusky countenances of his Nubians. She drew back before him as he approached, and he, intent upon imparting his fiews to her, followed her within the poop house, and bade Abiad bring lights.

When these had been kindled they faced each other, and he perceived her profound agitation and guessed the cause of it. Suddenly she broke into speech.

"You beast! You devil!" she panted "God will punish you! I shall spend my every breath in praying Him to punish you as you deserve. You murderer! You hound! And I, like a poor simpleton, was heeding your false words. I was believing you sincere in your repentance of the wrong you have done me. But now you have shown me——"

"How have I hurt you in what I have done to Lionel?" he cut in, a little amazed by so much vehemence.

"Hurt me!" she cried, and, on the words, grew cold and calm again with evry scorn. "I thank God it is beyond you power to hurt me. And I thank you for correcting my foolish misconception of you, my belief in your pitiful pretense that it was your aim to save me. I would not accept salvation at your murderous hands. Though, indeed, I shall not be put to it. Rather," she pursued, a little wildly now in her deep mortification, "are you like to sacrifice me to your own vile ends, whatever they may be. But I shall thwart you, heaven helping me. Be sure I shall not want courage for that."

He looked on with a faint, bitter smile, understanding her mood just as he understood her dark threat of thwarting him.

"I came," he said quietly, "to bring you the assurance that he has got safely away, and to tell you upon what manner of errand I have sent him."

Something compelling in his voice, the easy assurance with which he spoke, drew her to stare at him again.

"I mean Lionel, of course," he said in answer to her questioning glance. "That scene between us—the blow and the swoon and the rest of it—was all make-believe. So afterwards the shooting. My challenge to Marzak was a ruse to gain time—to avoid shooting until Lionel's head should have become so dimly visible in the dusk that none could say whether it was still there or not. My shaft went wide of him, as I intended. He is swimming round the head with my message to Sir John Killigrew. He was a strong swimmer in the old days, and should easily reach his goal. That is what I came to tell you."

"You are speaking the truth?" she asked at last in a small voice.

He shrugged.

"You will have a difficulty in perceiving the object I might serve by falsehood."

She sat down suddenly upon the divan; it was almost as if she collapsed bereft of strength; and as suddenly she fell to weeping softly.

"And—and I believed that you—that you——"

"Just so," he grimly interrupted. "You always did believe the best of me."

And on that he turned and went out abruptly.

CHAPTER XXIX

MORITURUS

He departed from her presence with bitterness in his heart, leaving a profound contrition in her own. The sense of this, her last injustice to him, so overwhelmed her that it became the gauge by which she measured that other earlier wrong he had suffered wrong he had suffered at her hands. Perhaps her overwrought mind falsified the perspective, exaggerated it until it seemed to her that all the suffering and evil with which this chronicle has been concerned were the direct fruits of her own sin of unfaith.

Since all sincere contrition must of necessity bring forth an ardent desire to atone, so was it now with her. Had he but refrained from departing so abruptly he might have had her on her knees to him, suing for pardon for all the wrongs which her thoughts had done him, proclaiming her own utter unworthiness and baseness. But, since his righteous resentment had driven him from her presence, she could but sit and brood upon it all, considering the words in which to frame her plea for forgiveness when next he should return.

But the hours sped, and there was no sign of him. And then, almost with a shock of dread, came the thought that ere long perhaps Sir John Killigrew's ship would be upon them. In her distraught state of mind she had scarcely pondered that contingency. Now that it occurred to her, all her concern was for the result of it to Sir Oliver. Would there be fighting, and would he perhaps perish in that conflict at the hands either of the English or of the corsairs whom, for her sake, he had betrayed, perhaps without ever hearing her confession of penitence, without speaking those words of forgiveness of which her soul stood in such thirsty need?

It would be towards midnight when, unable longer to bear the suspense of it, she rose and softly made her way to the entrance. Very quietly she lifted the curtains and, in the act of stepping out, almost stumbled over a body that lay across the threshold. She drew back with a startled gasp; then stooped to look, and, by the faint rays of the lanterns on mainmast and poop-rail, she recognized Sir Oliver, and saw that he slept.

She never heeded the two Nubians, immovable as statues, who kept guard. She continued to bend over him, and then gradually and very softly sank down on her knees beside him. There were tears in her eyes; tears wrung from her by a tender emotion of wonder and gratitude at so much fidelity. She did not know that he had slept thus last night. But it was enough for her to find him here now. It moved her oddly, profoundly, that this man whom she had ever mistrusted and misjudged should, even when he slept, make of his body a barrier for her greater security and protection.

A sob escaped her, and, at the sound, so lightly and vigilantly did he take his rest, he came instantly, if silently, to a sitting attitude; and so they looked into each other's eyes, his swarthy, bearded hawk face on a level with her white gleaming countenance.

"What is it?" he whispered.

She drew back instantly, taken with sudden panic at that question. Then, recovering and seeking, woman-like, to evade and dissemble the thing she was come to do, now that the chance of doing it was afforded her:

"Do you think," she faltered, "that Lionel will have reached Sir John's ship?"

He flashed a glance in the direction of the divan under the awning where the Basha slept. There all was still. Besides, the question had been asked in English. He rose and held out a hand to help her to her feet. Then he signed to her to re-enter the poop-house, and followed her within.

"Anxiety keeps you wakeful?" he said, half question, half assertion.

"Indeed," she replied.

"There is scarce the need," he assured her. "Sir John will not be like to stir until dead of night, that he may make sure of taking us unawares. I have little doubt that Lionel would reach him. It is none so long a swim. Indeed, once outside the cove, he could take to the land until he was abreast of the ship. Never doubt he will have done his errand."

She sat down, her glance avoiding his; but the light falling on her face showed him the traces there of recent tears.

"There will be fighting when Sir John arrives?" she asked him presently.

"Like enough. But what can it avail? We shall be caught—as was said to-day—in such a trap as that in which Andrea Doria caught Dragut at Jerba, saving that, whilst the wily Dragut found a way out for his galleys, here none is possible. Courage, then, for the hour of your deliverance is surely at hand."

He paused, and then, in a softer voice, humbly almost:

"It is my prayer," he added, "that hereafter in a happy future, these last few weeks shall come to seem no more than an evil dream to you."

To that prayer she offered no response. She sat bemused, her brow wrinkled.

"I would it might be done without fighting," she said presently, and sighed wearily.

"You need have no fear," he assured her. "I shall take all precautions for you. You shall remain here until all is over, and the entrance will be guarded by a few whom I can trust."

"You mistake me," she replied, and looked up at him suddenly. "Do you suppose my fears are for myself?"

She paused again, and then abruptly asked him:

"What will befall you?"

"I thank you for the thought," he replied gravely. "No doubt I shall meet with my deserts Let it but come swiftly when it comes."

"Ah, no, no!" she cried. "Not that!" And rose in her sudden agitation.

"What else remains?" he asked, and smiled. "What better fate could anyone desire me?"

"You shall live to return to England," she surprised him by exclaiming. "The truth must prevail and justice be done you."

He looked at her with so fierce and searching a gaze that she averted her eyes. Then he laughed shortly.

"There's but one form of justice I can look for in England," said he "It is a justice administered in hemp. Believe me, mistress, I am grown too notorious for mercy. Best end it here to-night.

"Besides," he added, and his mockery fell from him, his tone became gloomy, "bethink you of my present act of treachery to these men of mine, who whatever they may be, have followed me into a score of perils and but to-day have shown their love and loyalty to me to be greater than their devotion to the Basha himself. I shall have delivered them to the sword. Could I survive with honor? They may be but poor heathens to you and yours, but to me they are my sea hawks, my faithful, gallant followers, and I were a dog indeed did I survive the death to which I have doomed them."

BIGGER FRENCH ARMY IF PROTOCOL FAILS

If Other Powers Wish That Army Be Reduced They Must Sign Says de Jouvenal.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Senator Henri de Jouvenal, speaking editorially in the Matin, says that if the other great nations should refuse to ratify the Geneva protocol of arbitration, security and disarmament, it will become necessary for France to increase her military burdens instead of decreasing them. To date only France and the smaller powers have signed the protocol. Great Britain, Italy, Germany, Russia and the United States have not signed.

Increased military charges are the last thing France desires, he says. At the same time, it is not what the other nations desire. They wish to see the French Army reduced. For this it is necessary that they sign.

"There is no other means," he continues. "We will limit our armaments in proportion as our security is fortified. The French thesis has not changed in the past three years and to-day we have the initiative."

FISHING INDUSTRY.

Two Experiments Of Great Importance Brought Forth.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.— (Canadian Press).—Two experiments of greatest importance to the fishing industry of Canada have been brought to the stage where success can be claimed it was announced by officials of the department yesterday.

Atlantic Salmon, famous the world over as a game fish, although of no utility for canning purposes has been transferred successfully to Cowichan River on Vancouver Island. At the same time Pacific salmon of sockeye family has been brought to Lake Ontario and successfully launched into fresh water. Two year old Atlantic salmon have been caught in the Pacific coming down the Cowichan River and fully matured sockeye have been caught in Lake Ontario.

INDIAN LEADER SICK.

PETERBORO WHEAT ACREAGE LARGER

Crop is Looking Fine at the Present Time—Farm Conditions.

The following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The rain in the early part of the week called a halt in harvesting, threshing and grain cutting operations but it was appreciated in many sections where the soil to be plowed was benefited. Very little seasonal plowing has been accomplished to date and exceptional good weather or an open fall will be necessary if the usual amount is turned over before the "freeze up."

Frost in the northern and eastern portion of the Province has whitened the corn and all silo outfits are kept humming in these districts. Along the lakes and central part of the Province and in the southern Peninsula there has been little frost which is favorable to the late corn and other crops.

While there are a few fields of grain still out in the eastern counties the buckwheat is the only grain crop of any proportion to be hauled in. Owing to the recent moisture and warm weather the fall wheat has made excellent growth, late root crops are doing well and pastures are abundant.

Peterboro—There was a lot of fall wheat sown, probably 25% more acreage than usual. The crop is looking well at the present time.

Algoma—The milk and cream supply is still holding up well. Creameries are paying 35 and 36 cents per pound butterfat.

Bruce—Mangels and turnips have done extra well of late, owing to the ideal weather conditions. Both of these crops will be quite up to the average. Fall wheat is making excellent growth, and will have plenty of top before winter sets in.

Dufferin—Farmers generally are very much behind with their work. In the northern and western parts of the county there is a good deal of harvest to draw in and considerable cutting to be done. Frost of the previous week has done considerable damage.

Dundas—Cheese is advancing slowly and sold at 17 cents; sweet cream at 50 cents per pound butterfat. Apples No. 1 McIntosh at $3 per box. Fall wheat is doing nicely with the acreage increased nearly 50%.

Frontenac—Demand is good for springers but the price is only fair. The price is $85.00, ordinary grade cows bringing around $45.00 to $50.

Glengarry — Considerable lambs were marketed this week but the big rush is now over. Prices run from 9 to 11 cents. A few hogs were marketed at $9.00 to $10.25. Hogs are now on the increase as the spring hogs are coming in.

Kent—Roots: The beet growers have commenced pulling and there has been sufficient shipped in to the Dominion Sugar Company to have the plant operating next week. With the large acreage this year, it has been necessary for the company to enlarge their plant from an 18,000 to a 20,000 ton capacity per day. The yield of sugar beets is fair and the test reports to date vary from 12 to 19%. Tobacco: The majority of our tobacco crop is now in the barn. We have a number of reports of very good crops, however on the average the tobacco is not a good yield. A few fields of late planting are not yet cut.

Oxford—The last three weekly statements of hogs received at the Ingersoll Packing Plant have showed an average grading of 50% selects. In a letter from Mr. Barbour today, he states that the percentage of selects on Oct. 2nd was 64.

Rainy River—Hay pressing is commencing, preparatory to shipping to the lumber camps. Prices for hay are a little stronger than last year. Buyers are fixing prices from $17 to $20 per ton, according to quality.

South Simcoe—The live stock in this section is in exceptionally good condition. A large shipment went out from Alliston during the past week; 100 hogs brought from $9 to $9.90 per cwt. Eight head of cattle from .04 cents to 5 3-4 cents per pound; 52 good lambs at 10½ cents and fat sheep at .05 cents; 100 head of breeding ewes were brought in and they are being sold today from the stock yards at $12.00 each. These came from the Montreal market.

Temiskaming—Potatoes and hay are the two principle things being placed on the market at present. Hay is selling at $11.00 to $13.00 per ton, $14.00 in some cases for No. 1. Potatoes going in carload lots at $1.00 per 90 pound bag.

Victoria—The root crop is better than for some years, particularly turnips. The stand is good and they are making good growth.

ZR-3 FLIGHT POSTPONED.

Giant Dirigible Will Depart On Sunday Morning.

LONDON, Oct. 9. — (United Press).—The ZR-3 will leave Friedrichshafen, Germany, for America Sunday morning, an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam said to-day.

No reason for the postponement of the flight, which was at one time set for to-day, was given. Hundreds of persons of all nationalities gathered at Friedrichshafen to witness the departure of the giant dirigible were disappointed at the delay.

The ZR-3 made a short trial flight over Friedrichshafen to-day in anticipation of her flight to America, according to a message received here at noon.

Tests were made of the motor and other apparatus, and it is unlikely that another trial will be given the ship before the trans-Atlantic voyage.

NEWS MARMORA AND DISTRICT

SOCIAL EVENTS

MARMORA, Oct. 8.—On Monday evening last the officers and members of Sulphide L. T. B. 322 returned the visit paid by Marmora L. T. B. 177 to them last August. At the first convenient period of the meeting W. Bro. Mr. W. Emmorey called upon W. Bro. W. J. Cottrell, D.D.G.M., to occupy the chair. Excellent addresses were delivered by members of each lodge and a miscellaneous program rendered by the entertaining lodge. With opportunities for social intercourse in addition being provided, the evening passed away all too quickly. First-class refreshments were served at the close.

A Euchre Party.

The euchre party held in the Moloney and Forestell Block on Monday evening was well attended. The Catholic Women's League, under whose auspices it was held, labored hard to make it as entertaining as the many held in the past. The prizes were won by Mr. Hector Auger and Mrs. Hugh Crawford.

Sunday Services.

There was a good congregation at St. Paul's on Sunday morning when the officiating clergyman was Rural Dean B. F. Byers, M.A., of Stirling. The speaker delivered a very eloquent discourse on the subject of prayer. He traced its history from the days of the Jewish dispensation down to the present. He pointed out that the spirit which in past days decried the usage of a prayer book was not now so active. The Lord's Prayer is a printed prayer, and by using it earnestly and with true intention, we are acting for the common good of all. A large number stayed for the celebration of Holy Communion. In the afternoon service was held at Holy Trinity, and in the evening at Deloro. St. Paul's choir accompanied the Rev. Byers to Deloro to unite with the choir there in a service of a special character.

Temperance Address.

Mr. Clayton Burr of Bloomfield occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday last. He was the representative of the Plebiscite Committee. He made a strong plea for the retaining of the Ontario Temperance Act, especially for the sake of the children.

In speaking of the argument that it could not be enforced, he said that in 1922 in Toronto there were 1,000 violations of the O. T. A., but in 1922 in Toronto there were 13,000 violations of the Ontario Automobile Act. Would we say the Automobile Act was no good or repeal it? Then why put up that argument against the Temperance Act?

Literary Society.

Marmora Continuation School under the leadership of the new principal, Miss Campbell, has organized a Literary Society.

President—Mr. James Hughes.
Honorary President—Miss Campbell.
First Vice-President—Miss Hazel Williams.
Secretary—Miss Lorraine Bell.
Program Committee—Miss Florence Clare, Mr. Clayton Neal, Mr. Jack Grant, Miss Gladys Williams, Miss Ida Clare, Mr. William Flynn.

The meetings are held on each Friday from 3.30, each form taking their turn in preparing the program. This week it was the turn of form I. The program was as follows:

Recitation—Miss Helen Cronkrite.

A reading, "A Big Mistake," by Miss Connie Simmons.

A recitation by Ida Clare, "A Smack in School."

Miss Mildred Bedore, critic for the day, failed to criticize, but commended highly the program and stated that it did credit to the new arrivals in school.

Ladies' Aid Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. R. O. Jones on Thursday afternoon. The annual bazaar was discussed and plans formed. After the business meeting a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Church Social.

A very unique church social was held in Deloro on Wednesday evening. It was a "radio" local program. The stage was enclosed as a broadcasting station. Each item was announced as being broadcasted from Corbeyville and Lemington, Kentucky, stations. The unseen chairman was Mr. Kenneth B. Patterson. A varied and enjoyable program was rendered behind the scenes. The Deloro orchestra, composed of Messrs. S. B. Wright, W. T. Rigg and R. Hunter, gave a number of selections. Mr. Hunter also played on the saxaphone, Miss C. Wilson sang in her usual pleasing way, Miss "Irish" Smyth gave a reading entitled "Afternoon Tea," Revs. Watson and Clare both spoke and a number of boys gave a selection of jazz. This was followed by a social hour and refreshments.

"We have used Zam-Buk with remarkable success"

"WHEN I happened an injury to my left foot," says Mr. Edward Whiteman, of 463, Notre Dame St., Lachine, Que., "it was painful enough, but didn't seem to call for special attention. A few days later, however, trouble began which I tried to check with poultices. But the sore got worse, the tendons became affected, and I could scarcely move about.

"PAIN & INFLAMMATION WAS DREADFUL

until I was persuaded to put Zam-Buk on to the foot. I renewed the dressings at regular intervals, and gave the treatment every chance by resting the foot as much as I could. Zam-Buk drew soreness and impurity out of the wound in a surprising way and caused inflammation to quickly disappear. As a result, the foot went on steadily mending until perfectly healed.

"IN MY WIFE'S CASE poison and lancing combined had caused a painful wound that wouldn't heal. So without telling the doctor she set her mind upon Zam-Buk. Sure enough, healing commenced soon after the balm was applied. Within a few days my wife could wear a shoe and the foot was soon made sound and strong again. In future we shall always keep Zam-Buk in the house. It really is wonderful."

ZAM-BUK, the favourite home skin-remedy, is made from pure and costly medicinal herbs. Its soothing, healing and antiseptic virtues are never found in ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is 50c. box., 3 for $1.25. Zam-Buk Medicinal Soap, 25c. the cake. Of dealers everywhere.

If you suffer from a skin that is sore, inflamed or blotchy, from dry or weeping eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis, impetigo, pimples, scalp trouble, boils, abscesses, ulcers or piles, you will find Zam-Buk quickly soothing and healing. Also invaluable for cuts, bruises, burns, scalds, etc.

Be sure and get a box of Zam-Buk from your dealer to-day and keep it always handy.

Making wash day pleasant—

Just use Rinso where you used to use bar soap—for soaking, boiling, or in your washing machine.

THE hardest part of wash-day, rubbing, rubbing, rubbing, has given way to the new method of soaking the clothes clean with Rinso. This wonderful new soap gently loosens the dirt and a thorough rinsing leaves things white and glistening as you never could get them before.

Only spots where the dirt is ground-in, such as neck bands, cuff edges, and the like need a light rubbing, and a little dry Rinso rubbed on these spots quickly makes the dirt disappear.

Rinso is sold by all grocers and department stores

ROYAL CONTRACTS FOR MANY FINE PRODUCTIONS

Many of the season's outstanding photoplays have been booked for early screenings at the Royal. Laurette Taylor, whose first picture was "Peg Of My Heart," which pleased one hundred per cent., appears next Monday in "Happiness." Alan Dale, in the New York American, says: "It is the best thing Laurette Taylor has done."

Mary Philbin, "The Merry Go Round Girl," comes soon in "Fool's Highway," a fascinating phase of New York life.

"The Marriage Circle," directed by Ernest Lubitche, is a daring department from the usual screen entertainment, with Monte Blue, Marie Provost, Adolphe Menjou, etc.

Viola Dana in "The Heart Bandit," has Milton Sills in the cast, a lickety-split comedy, with Viola at her best.

May Murray in "Mlle. Midnight," comes recommended as her most elaborate production, which means gorgeous Murray gowns and Murray dances.

You have a lot of laughs coming to you. Don't miss "Second Youth" when you see it advertised. All the new Hoot Gibsons, Betty Compson and Priscilla Dean productions are coming to the Royal. Also the new Christie feature length comedies.

The above list is for early showing, and Royal patrons can rest assured of seeing the best productions on the film market to-day.

"SQUIBS" IS BACK AT THE ROYAL.

"Squibs' Honeymoon," her last and Greatest Adventure.

"Squibs' Honeymoon," Betty Balfour's latest film, is a logical conclusion to the series of Squibs' pictures, on which the Welsh-Pearson Company Ltd., and Betty Balfour have built such a reputation. Everybody loved Squibs and her adventures as the little Piccadilly flower seller who won a fortune in the Calcutta Sweep and everybody will be sorry to lose her. But after all she was a merry maid whose decision to retire into serious domesticity deserves to be respected. "Squibs' Honeymoon" stops at this point, but between Squibs' resignation from Parliament and her complete entry into a talking shop of her own, where woman, by right of tradition, is The Speaker, a gulf of amusing adventure has been fixed (by George Pearson) which should provide happy reminisces of the pre-nuptial days of a very pleasant young lady.

To tell the story of "Squibs' Honeymoon" would be to spoil the element of surprise in the film. Sufficient is it to say that on deciding to get married Squibs quickly disposes of the cares of the milk business she acquired in Squibs, M.P., and brooking no interference or argument from her sweetheart, ex-P.C. Lee, names the day and makes all arrangements for the wedding. This wedding is probably the simplest yet, at the same time the most impressive wedding seen in a film, and if it fails to get round after round of applause it will only be because the solemnity of it has hushed the audience to silence. As for the bride, a well known film correspondent described Mrs. Charlie Lee, nee Squibs Hopkins, easily the happiest bride ever seen in films. After the ceremony wild scenes of happiness follow, and then off to the continent, where the fun begins in earnest and the action proceeds with the pace of the express train carrying Squibs on her greatest adventure. And it really is her greatest adventure!

The final fade-out should leave most people with a real feeling of regret that Squibs is to return to the realm of fancy from which she came.

HERE'S HAPPINESS

Then glance at a couple of comments on the stage play "Happiness" at Royal Monday:

"Far better play than 'Peg O' My Heart' by reason of its simplicity."—New York Evening World.

"Best thing Laurette Taylor has done in many a long day." — Alan Dale in the New York American.

" 'Happiness 'is a most delicious bit of art."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

" 'Peg O' My Heart,' a great play, will think 'Happiness' an equally great play."—George Jean Nathan in the Chicago Herald.

Then read what J. Hartley Manners has to say about "Happiness". He ought to know, both "Peg" and "Happiness" came from his brain.

"We filmed 'Peg' first because it was so well known, but I like 'Happiness' better for picture purposes. It moves along at a faster pace and is better screen material."

FIRE CHIEF IS SATISFIED WITH THE FIRE DRILL

Chief Gimblett Accompanied On Inspection Tour By Board Of Education.

MADE GOOD TIME.

King George School, In East City, Picked As Best Of Six Inspected.

Now that Fire Prevention Week is well under way, Fire Chief George Gimblett has started his rounds of inspecting the different schools of this city.

Yesterday afternoon, accompanied by four members of the School Board, Messrs. J. M. Greene, Dr. J. J. Craig, Roland Denne and A. A. Fowler, the Chief inspected the six public schools with very satisfactory results in most cases.

The King George School in East City, under the supervision of Mr. J. E. R. Munroe, the first school visited by the Chief, was undoubtedly the best of the six schools visited. As soon as the alarm was sent in the larger boys of the classes rushed out to open the doors. The children walked briskly but did not run or cause any confusion on the stairs or in the halls. Although they did not have their school cleared as fast as some of the others, they showed more unity. The actual time taken to clear the school of the 350 pupils was 59 seconds, which was much better than last year. The boiler-room of this school was very clean, the only defect being a pile of soot in one corner, that had been taken out of the boiler. Mr. Saunders, the janitor of this school, said that this would not be there, only he was waiting for a man to come and draw it away, and that he would have put it outside, but he was afraid that it would blow away. The doors of the school were also tried and found in good condition.

Central School was the next one visited by the Chief. This was the only one visited that the Chief found any confusion in getting out. Since the Chief was last there, there has been some new electric bells installed in the building, and this was the cause of practically all the confusion. When the Chief pulled the bell in the hall only half of the pupils came out, and the ones that did come out were all mixed up. Mr. R. Whiteman, principal of the school, explained the cause of the mix-up, and they were given another chance, in which they did fairly well. The pupils made fairly good time when 536 of them were out of the school in one minute and four seconds. Running on the stairs by some of the larger boys and girls, who should know better, spoiled Central's chances of topping the list.

There are three electric bells in the building, to be used only for fire alarms. One of these is in the Principal's room and the other two are in the basements. The Chief said that there should be a bell in the hall of every floor as well as the ones in the basement, and that he hoped they would be installed. One door in this school was locked, which is against the law, but Mr. Whiteman told the Chief that the door was never used and might just as well be boarded up.

Queen Alexandra School in the north end of the city, with their 390 pupils did their test in 51 seconds, and would have most likely done it in less time had the pupils not been ready to come out for recess. In coming out for recess the girls go first, while in fire drill it is the opposite, the boys go ahead. On account of the girls being first in line they got mixed up a little, and there was no one to hold the doors back. The Chief advised the principal to see that the boys always go before the girls when marching out of the building. Queen Alexandra drill was very satisfactory.

The teachers of Queen Mary School assisted greatly when they kept the door of their rooms open and saw that the pupils were lined up properly. They made very good time when 475 pupils got out of the building in 52 seconds. The pupils in this school showed that they had been well trained by their teachers, but some of the smaller pupils were inclined to hurry a little, and one small child slipped and fell on the stairs, but was up in time to avoid any confusion. The manner in which the larger boys looked after the doors was a feature at this school. The Chief was well pleased with the performance of these pupils but said that he thought there was more hurrying than was necessary.

Prince of Wales' School, with 515 pupils, made the record when they went through their first drill in 56 seconds. The pupils of this school had the advantage on the pupils of the other schools as the stairs and halls are much wider and there are more doors for them to get out of. Hurrying of small children also caused one small girl to fall, on the stairs, but no confusion was caused by the slip that might mean the loss of life in a real fire. This is one of the more serious slips that have to be avoided as a fall in a real fire may block up a passage way and cause panic and loss of life. This is the main reason why the Chief is so strict about hurrying on the stairs and in the hallways. Outside of this mishap, the Prince of Wales' School pupils did very well.

King Edward School, with three stories, also make good time when the school of 480 pupils was emptied in one minute exactly. This is good time for the three-storied building, the only public school in the city with three stories. There is a fire escape on the west side of the school that runs from the top to the bottom, but this is not used in fire drill. It was the request of the Chief that this fire escape be used in the future by some of the classes on the third story. The teachers of the third floor were also instructed to see that an invalid boy on that floor was looked after by a couple of the larger boys when practicing fire drill. It was proposed by the Chief that he be taken out by way of the fire escape, and if he was too heavy to be carried down to the ground to be left on the fire escape so that if there was a fire the firemen would be able to rescue him. The members of the Board of Education who accompanied the Chief on his inspection tour were very pleased with the showing made by the different schools, and all were of the opinion that a bell as the Chief proposed should be placed in the halls of each school to be used for fire drills or an alarm and to have signs over the buttons or bell to show that they were for fires. Several other schools in the city will be inspected some time this week.

LADY ASTOR HAS NEW CAUSE.

She Upholds Right of Uncles and Aunts to Wed Nieces and Nephews.

LONDON, Oct. 9. — Lady Astor appeared Tuesday as the upholder of the right of uncles and aunts to marry their nieces and nephews.

A bill to make this legal has been introduced in Parliament and a resolution in support of it, moved on Tuesday at the annual conference of the National Council of Women, found a ready sympathizer in Lady Astor.

"I think it is appalling that a man cannot marry his niece," she said. "There is nothing in it but old-fashioned suspicion. I hope you won't look on it as a law of God. It appears to me to be a very old man-made law."

The proposal was agreed to amid laughter.

'QUAKE RUINS ARMENIAN VILLAGES.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Most of the villages in the Erzerum district of Armenia were shaken by another earthquake, the fourth within six weeks, last Thursday, says a belated Constantinople despatch. The 'quake, though not as severe as the preceding ones, continued at intervals for fourteen hours, caused some deaths and destroyed a great number of houses, several railroad stations and bridges which had withstood earlier shocks.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS GIVEN BY JACK MINER

Opera House Filled To Hear Well Known Friend Of The Birds.

TAMING DUCKS.

Started With Seven Ducks, Now Has Thousands of Ducks, Geese and Swan.

Jack Miner, who is well known throughout Canada as a friend of the birds and maintains a bird sanctuary at his home at Kingsville, addressed a large gathering in the Opera House last evening.

Mr. Miner told of his life history since he was a boy and of being brought up among the birds and how he came to love them and became friends of thousands of ducks, geese and swans that come each year to his ponds and spend two months, where they are fed and cared for, when they are sick and when they are well.

Mr. Miner started his career with the birds in the year 1904 when he bought seven ducks. He stated that before this he never saw a wild duck on his farm. Up till 1908, no geese came and the people began making fun of him as a goose trainer and had practically lost faith in him until late in the spring of 1908 when 11 ducks arrived. The neighbours a short time later gathered on the bank of his pond early one morning and shot five of the eleven ducks. The other six flew away, but came back the next day and stayed for a considerable length of time. After waiting and watching patiently for the return of his ducks the next year he was met with a huge surprise when early one morning a flock of thirty-two ducks lit within fifty feet of him. They looked him over and then went on feeding. He went to church and on returning he found that the ducks had eaten the food that he had placed outside for them, so he knew that he had them now for good. Out of the thirty-two that arrived that spring ten were shot by the neighbours, but the next spring four hundred came, but the neighbours did not yet let up on their shooting matches and this spring they took the lives of sixteen of these birds which Mr. Miner classes as the most intelligent creatures on this earth. The 1911 was the year for Mr. Miner and his ducks, for that year the ducks came by thousands and he said that he did not have enough feed to give them and that it caused him much concern because his money was beginning to get rather low and he did not know how he was going to feed the large masses of birds. Out of a flock of five geese, two were shot and one fell with a broken pinion. The lame goose was caught and looked after but it was lamed for life and stayed at Mr. Miner's farm for the rest of its life and a proof of how faithful the Canada Ganader is, which is termed by Mr. Miner as "The most Godly creature that ever walked," was explained by Mr Miner when he said that the gander the mate of the goose that was lamed for life lived the rest of its life, protecting its mate, and staying always in seeing and hearing distance of the bird it loved so much. Mr. Miner said, still the people will say, "that silly old goose", and that silly old gander". They are classed as silly because they are too wise for the most of hunters and if it was not for their wisdom there would be no geese or ducks to-day. A gander would stand up and let you burn it to death it to death sooner than give in and let you harm its young or much beloved mate. One proof of this statement made by Mr. Miner was when he showed a slide of a gander fighting a dog in protection of its young and its mate. Soon after Mr. Miner proved to the people of Canada that he had made a success in the taming of these birds, a law was passed, barring the shooting of these ducks or geese within a mile of his premises. Neighbours who used to creep up on his flock and take home enough for a nice meal have turned to love the birds and protect them. "Birds are not wild, it is the man that is wild," said the speaker.

Three thousand nine hundred bushels of ears of corn and three hundred bushels of shelled corn were fed to the enormous flocks of these birds by Jack Miner and his helpers last spring. At present the Government is helping him supply food for these birds.

Mr. Miner spoke of the birds as missionary workers and said that a Missionary from Hudson Bay, came to him with a number of tags that had been taken off birds shot by the Eskimos. The Missionary told him that his work with the birds was helping him greatly in Christianizing the Eskimos of the far north. He said that hundreds of Eskimos with tags off birds they have killed have come to him and asked him to tell them what the writing on the tags meant and wanted to know all about this man who tamed the birds. The missionary was given pictures of Mr. Miner and of the flocks of geese about his farm and he took them back with him and showed them to the heathens and explained them. This has helped the Missionary to be more closely connected with northern heathens.

Mr. Miner told of the many interesting letters he had received from people in different parts of the world. Of the hundreds, thirty-two of them were very interesting, especially one, which was from a man in the Arkansas State Prison who said that his bed-mate was in prison for murder. He said that he read in a newspaper of the "tamer of birds" and thought he would like to write to him and learn more about the way in which he became able to master them. At the close of the letter the man said I hope that you will answer my letter, but if you do not find time, I hope that you will not be offended at me for writing to you from such a place as this. Mr. Miner said that if the people were taught more about these wonderful birds and animals, they would have more joy out of life and would not think so much of money, the thing that leads a great many astray.

Many different slides of tamed birds of different kinds were shown. Mr. Miner proved that even the robins can be tamed the same as any other bird, it taken in the right way.

LOEB'S MOTHER VISITS HIM.

Son Tells Her His Ambition Is to "Get Along" In Prison.

JOILET, Ill., Oct. 9.—For the first time since he was imprisoned for life for the kidnapping and murder of Robert Franks, Richard Loeb saw his mother, Mrs. Albert H. Loeb, Tuesday, when she visited him in the State Penitentiary here.

Obedience and cheerfulness were urged by the mother, who told him: "Your father and I and all the rest of us are hoping and praying for your welfare. You'll try to do your best now, won't you?"

"I have a different viewpoint now," Richard said. "I've changed. I see things a little differently here. Now my ambition is to get along in prison. I'm striving for success down here."

The visit lasted thirty minutes.

The father, vice-president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who remained at the Loeb summer home in Charlevoix, Mich., during the trial, is in Chicago. He is suffering from heart trouble. He has not seen his son since Richard was arrested.

GIANTS START CLINCH SERIES

WASHINGTON, Oct 9.—(Canadian Press).—King baseball was back in Washington to-day to put on his final act of the world series classic of 1924, in one or two scenes, depending upon success of Senators in their tilt with New York Giants in the sixth game for baseball's premier honors.

Once again the nation's capital thrust aside its business to jam its way into Griffith stadium, where Washington, with its back to the wall must defeat New York or yield finally their hope of world championship. Crowds laid early siege to ticket booths for bleacher seats and all other space had been sold out long before outcome of New York games had been determined.

Roger Peckingpaugh is making heroic effort to make line-up and "Buckeye" Harris will gamble his remaining chips on Tom Zachary with Marberry for relief. To clinch series McGraw of Giants plans to use Arthur Nehf, who won first game from Johnson with Barnes ready to wage battle if Nehf's arm gives out.

POLAR.

Did you "catch" the new scientific theory about freakish weather this year They figure that pockets or funnels suddenly open in our atmosphere, permitting rushing wedges of frigid Polar air to sweep down on us from up North.

The cold breaks through just as a river through a broken levee or dam. Then the funnel-shaped pocket suddenly closes up and days are warm again.

The cause probably is connected with our sun, which for several years has been on the sick-list. Now it is convalescing after a period of giving off 5 per cent. less heat than normal.

EXPLODED.

The 100 million pounds of high explosives ordered by the national government is the largest single order for "powder" ever placed. Even in war time there was no such buying in one order.

It starts you thinking how much could have been accomplished in the way of progress if the explosives, money and human energy wasted in the war had been turned into construction.

NEWS FROM CAVAN.

Methodist Church Went Over the Top in Collection Objective.

Cavan, Oct. 9.—Rev. Mr. Howard, of Millbrook, had charge of the thanks-offering service in the Cavan Methodist church on Sunday evening.

The church board had stated that one hundred and sixty dollars were needed to help defray expenses of some improvements made to the church property, as well as some current expenses.

The objective was passed in the day's contributions, and one hundred and sixty seven dollars placed upon the plate.

Next Sunday being Fairmount's anniversary services, there will be no service on the Cavanville appointment on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Taylor and son, Jamie, of Toronto, were week-end guests at the home of T. A. Kelly.

Ray Staples is home from Whitby.

The Ladies' Aid of the Cavan Church will meet at the home of Mrs. R. Matchett, on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30.

Miss Preston, teacher of S. S. No. 7, usually known as "Matchett's School," received word last Friday that her school had received the silver cup, given annually, at the North Cavan Rural Fair, to the school securing the highest number of points. It was very gratifying to both the pupils and teacher, as when lined up in parade, the school makes a poor showing as they have only ten pupils on the roll, some of them being quite small.

However, when it came to exhibits it was found that the ten pupils had secured nine first prizes, eleven seconds, ten thirds, four fourths, and two sixths. They will hold the cup for one year when it will again be competed for. Any school winning the cup three times owns it. Beechwood school has done it twice.

On the day of the fair it was thought by many that the cup was won by one of the larger schools.

BEER.

George Washingtons great-great-grandfather, Lawrence, long ago piled up a beer bill at Oxford University in England and neglected to pay it. So runs tradition.

American lawyers, at their convention over there this summer, took up a collection and paid the old account, which amounted to less than $4. That, however, bough enough beer to float a battleship back yonder, which may be why they are referred to as "the good old days."

THEATRES AT THE GRAND.

"WHITE TIGER" IS UNUSUAL; DEAN GREAT.

Universal-Jewel Picture Deserves High Place in Year's List of Screen Hits.

"White Tiger" is an unusual screen play of the underworld showing at the Grand Theatre to-morrow and Saturday. It is a Universal-Jewel production starring Priscilla Dean, whom many that see this picture will recall as the beautiful heroine of "Outside the Law," an underworld story triumph of two years or so ago. Miss Dean is always a popular favorite in this city.

"White Tiger" is the story of three crooks who were human. Most crooks in fiction are sort of Sir Walter Raleighs and Joan de Arcs gone wrong, romantic, impossible, strutting figures who do everything honorable towards each other and are the best of pals. In "White Tiger" the trio pictured are high-class international operators, but they fight from morning to night and have no sense of the "honor among thieves" that so many writers rave about. In brief, they are the kind that actually live.

This novel angle on crookdom results in some fine drama and a constant run of the highest sort of humor, the humor of real characterizations.

Priscilla Dean portrays the queen of this trio, with the support in the other two roles of Wallace Beery, the inimitable "villain" of "The Flame of Life." "Robin Hood" and a score of other big pictures, and Raymond Griffith, a leading man whose immediate rise to stardom has been prophesied.

For the sympathetic male role opposite Miss Dean, the only 'straight' character in the story, Matt Moore was engaged. He portrays the part with his usual artistry. Moore will be recalled for his magnificent work in "The Storm."

Like "Outside the Law," "White Tiger" was written and directed by Tod Browning, a master of cinema direction and noted for his attention to details that make a perfect film.

AT THE CAPITOL.

One of Wm. J. Locke's fantastic and yet very human stories, "The Mountebank," has been filmed for the silent drama, under the title of "The Side Show of Life," and is the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre, commencing yesterday, ending to-day. It is a likeable and entertaining picture, relating the adventures of Andrew Larkaday, "Petit Patou," a titled English gentleman who is introduced to the audience in his role of a circus clown, travelling in France.

From "The Mountebank" by William J. Locke the story was adapted by Willis Goldbeck and Julie Herne. It deals with the adventures of a circus clown who becomes a general during the war, falls in love with a titled, English lady only to come to the bitter realization, when the war is over, that once a clown, always a clown! In a series of heart-tugging situations a powerful climax is reached, and from this point on the picture marches on to a happy and triumphant finish.

There are lavish sets and circus backgrounds and dramatic content of the story. With it all Ernest Torrence's impressive portrayal of the lovable clown dominates the picture. It is a role that affords a wider dramatic scope than anything he has done before. Torrence has a chance to be a real hero himself and the way he does it makes you love him. He is not only funny but human and tender and that is a hard combination to beat.

Anna Q. Nilsson is an ideal type for the aristocratic heroine. Miss Nilsson has a featured role with Torrence in the production. Louise Lagrrange, Maurice Cannon, Katherine Lee and others prominent on both stage and screen appear in support.

SCHOOL TEACHERS ATTEND CAPITOL THEATRE TO-NIGHT, SPECIAL PROGRAM ARRANGED

Will See "The Side Show of Life"—Stan. Laurel and Educational Reels.

Over 100 school teachers in the city to-day attending the conference will be present in a body to-night at the Capitol Theatre to see the picturization of William J. Locke's famous story, "The Mountebank," or, to give it it's screen title, "The Side Show of Life." Ernest Torrence, beloved as the scout of "The Covered Wagon," has the leading role, supported by Anna Q. Nillson and a distinguished cast. Stan. Laurel, in his latest comedy, "Short Kilts," will provide the laughs. Several reels of an educational nature will be specially added to the programme.

SABATINI'S ROMANCE OF PIRATE LIFE; "CAPTAIN BLOOD" COMING TO CAPITOL

One of the most famous romances ever written dealing with the life of a famous pirate, comes to the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when Rafael Sabatini's celebrated story, "Captain Blood," will be the feature attraction. This is a remarkable production in which the lives of the pirates are shown with relentless candor and ruthless realism. Striking battle scenes, containing some wonderful sea fights, are among the great scenes in the picture. The story tells of an English doctor, accused of treachery to his king, who is deported as a slave to Barbadoes. He escapes from the penal establishment and becomes a pirate. His daring attacks make him the scourge of the seas and the legitimate prey for vessels of the French and English navies. How he regains his pardon and returns to England an honored sailor, is one of the greatest and most powerfully dramatic stories ever told. J. Warren Kerrigan has the title role. By special arrangement the Capitol will offer this great picture for three days, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. There will be no advance in the admission prices charged.

AT THE REGENT.

MAE BUSCH FINDS FILM STARDOM IN HER 'SECOND' LIFE.

Member of "Broken Barriers" Star Cast Retired, then won Anew — Was born in Australia—Metro Favorite Started Theatrical Career as Singer but the Movies called.

Mae Busch, who is one of the stars in Metro's big production, 'B'roken Barriers," which is now playing at the Regent Theatre, has had two movie lives—that is, she is in her second. A few years back she played comedy parts in Mack Sennett's famstick two-reelers. Then she left the screen to get married and disappeared for two years.

Suddenly Mae Busch came back, more beautiful than ever, and filled with a pep and verve that brought her to the top in a flash. She appeared as the exotic heroine of Von Stroheim's "The Devil's Passkey, and imediately became a star. Since then she has been one of the bright particular personages in the film firmament.

Had Many Big Parts.

Some of her more important pictures since then include 'A Parisian Scandal," "Foolish Wives," "The Love Charm," "Brothers Under the Skin," "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," and the "Shooting of Dan McGrew."

Miss Busch was born in Melbourne Australia, and spent her early life there and on the island of Tahiti, as some one said recently, probably accounts for the star's great charm—the occasionally barbaric atmosphere she injects into her acting which turns into a soft beauty at the proper time, viz., when the hero wins her.

Came to the U. S. for Schooling.

Her father was conductor of the Symphony Orchestra Melbourne and her mother had given up a social career in England to go on the operatic stage. When she was 12 she was sent to America for her school, and attended St. Elizabeth's Convent in Madison, N. J. It was during her several years at the convent that it was discovered that she had a beautiful voice, and she decided on a stage career.

Her family disaproved of this idea, but to no avail. Mae Played in several Broadway musical productions, and went on tour. While in Los Angeles Mack Sennett noticed her, and she decided the films offered a bigger future.

"Broken Barriers" is a Reginald Barker production, presented by Louis B. Mayer through Metro. It was adapted from Meredith Nicholson's novel by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Giants Win Fifth Game 6-2 -- Oslers Defeat Galt 4-2 -- Walter Johnson May Retire

WALTER JOHNSON TRAGIC FIGURE IN HIS SECOND DEFEAT OF SERIES

HUNG ON GRIMLY

Harris Swayed by Sentiment —Accepted Defeat Rather Than Withdraw Johnson.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Walter Johnson, the "old master" buckled on his armor yesterday in a final fight for the glory of the world's series victory that he has sought for eighteen years but fate with the mighty bats of his foe turned him back.

Unleasing a furious, ruthless attack, the New York Giants battered the great veteran into defeat for the second straight time, captured the fifth game of the series from the Senators by a score of 6 to 2, and left last night for Washington with the 1924 world's championship within their reach.

The Giants, coming back yesterday with the powerful type of attack that carried the Senators to triumph Tuesday now hold a formidable edge of three to two in games. They need but one more victory to clinch the series and give their leader, John McGraw, his fourth baseball crown and a new major league record.

The forces of McGraw, who shares the present record of three world's series victories with Connie Mack and his Athletics, are heavy favorites today to carry off the major honors in one of the game's most spectacular battles, for yesterday they spiked Washington's big gun, and left the Senators with shattered resources for the rest of the fight.

If Art Nehf, McGraw's brilliant southpaw, who was prevented from starting yesterday's game by a thumb bruise, sustained in his victory over Johnson on the opening day, is able to take the mound today, the Giants will have an excellent prospect of ending the series. If not, or if Nehf fails, the decision will go to the seventh game, which will also be played in Washington.

Gallant But Tragic.

Through the smoke of yesterday's conflict, Johnson stood out as a gallant but tragic figure, one of the most tragic baseball has ever known. Another outpouring of 50,000 fans braving the chilliest day of the series, came chiefly in the hope of seeing Johnson hang up his first world's series victory. Their sympathies, which have been with the Senators throughout the New York games of the series were particularly evident for Johnson. They cheered him to the echo in the early part of the game but as it wore on and Johnson's defeat seemed inevitable they became quieter, realizing that "Big Barney" one of the game's greatest idols, was taking the bitterest setback of his career. Johnson took the punishment administered by the Giants' bats grimly, but it was a sad spectacle to those who recalled his greatness over nearly a score of years and his valiant struggle to reach the door that refused to open to him when he knocked. Yet probably no one realized the tragedy of it all more keenly than Johnson himself when after "Goose" Goslin's third home run of the series had revived Washington hopes in the eighth inning, the Giants shelled the veteran for three more runs and removed the last uncertainty over the outcome.

Harris Shows Sentiment

Under this terrific bombardment, it seemed foolhardy for Manager "Bucky" Harris to keep Johnson in the game, the outcome of which meant so much to the Senators' championship hopes but the young Washington pilot apparently was willing to accept defeat rather than cap the climax of the veteran's last stand by taking him from the box.

In Johnson's declaration after the game that he may retire from the game next season for all time may be the real reason for keeping him to the last. If it was to be the veteran's final battle, he wanted to be on he firing line to the last even in face of crushing defeat.

Johnson's famous fast ball, which had forced the Giants to twelve bitterly contested innings before they won the opening game, held no terrors yesterday. The National League champions pounded "Barney" for thirteen safe blows, and bunched three of them in the third, fifth and eighth innings when they did all their scoring.

Jack Bentley, southpaw star, opposed Johnson and held the Senators to one run until the eighth inning when he left under an outbreak that was started by Goslin's homer, a blow that gave the slugging "Goose" a tie with Babe Ruth for the greatest number of circuit clouts made in a single series.

But before Bentley left the game his own bat gave the Giants a lead they held to the finish. He caught one of Johnson's curves in the fifth inning for a towering home run into the upper tier of the right field stands, scoring Hank Gowdy ahead of him. This proved the deciding punch of the game, although the Giants came back in the eighth with a three run rally that clinched their victory.

Lindstrom A Sensation.

Bentley's was the crucial blow, but the most dynamic figure in the Giant attack was Fred Lindstrom, 18-year-old Chicago schoolboy who was in the cradle when Johnson first broke into the big leagues in 1906. Lindstrom who took the place of the veteran Heinie Groh at third base when the latter was injured, smashed out four hits in five times at bat. He drove in two runs, sparkled in the field and established himself as one of the greatest sensations of the series.

Every Giant but "Hack" Wilson shared in the barrage of hits that whistled past Johnson and had it not been for two double plays that checked the Giants in the midst of rallies, the margin of victory would have been much greater. The first of these double killings came in the third inning after the Giants had tallied once and filled the bases with one out. Jackson scratched an infield hit to Miller and scored on singles by Bentley and Lindstrom after Gowdy fanned. Miller's failure to touch third for a foce-out on Frisch's bounder to Bluege, filled the bags but Ross Young lined to Rice and Bentley, due largely to poor base running, was doubled at the plate on a relay throw by Jackson.

Again in the fifth, after Bentley's homer had brought in Gowdy, the Giants were halted by fast fielding. With Lindstrom out, Frisch got a double on a Texas leaguer to right centre and Young was hit in the knee by a pitched ball, but Kelly hit into a double play via Bluege, Harris and Judge.

Bentley's Good Form.

Meanwhile the Senators were making little headway against the southpaw shoots of Bentley, although they threw away good chances to score in both the second and third innings before finally breaking through for a run in the fourth on Judges' single, a sacrifice by Bluege, and infield out and Miller's single.

In the second, Goslin registered his sixth straight hit when he beat out an infield blow, was forced by Bluege, and Ruel walked, but Miller failed in the pinch. Three hits failed to produce results in the third. Johnson's hard single to left was wasted when he over-ran first and was caught on his return to the infield. It was a particularly bad break because McNeely and Harris followed with hits, only to be stranded by two of the club's heavy artillery, Rice and Goslin.

Encouraged by his home run blow, Bentley improved as the game wore on, allowing only one hit in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings and retiring the side on strikes in the sixth, including Goslin. But the "Goose" had his revenge in the eight when his home run, followed by Judge's single drove Bentley from the hill in favor of Hugh McQuillan, right hander, who held the Senators scoreless for the rest of the game.

But just when Goslin's homer put the Senators within striking distance of the lead, the Giants fell on Johnson in heir half of the eighth for the final, clinching attack. Singles by Kelly, McQuillan and Lindstrom. Jackson's sacrifice fly and a pass to Terry figured in their three runs.

Peckinpaugh Missed.

The Senators as in the previous game here, sadly missed their veteran shortstop, Roger Peckinpaugh, who was forced out by a "charley-horse". The substitute link in Washington's inner defense, Ralph Miller at third in place of Oscar Bluege, who took Peck's place at short, was largely responsible for the hole in which Johnson found himself in the third. Two scratch hits which the third sacker handled poorly and his failure to touch third with a force-out in sight were costly mistakes although he partly atoned for them by knocking in the Senator's first run in the fourth.

In a way we are sorry Mr. Sand didn't take the $500.....It's been a long time since the Philadelphia ball park had a sell-out.

GATE-CRASHER

"ONE-EYE" CONNOLLY.

"One-Eye" Connolly, the most famous gate-crasher of the age, bet John McGraw he would see all the world series games without paying a penny. And here's Connolly inside the Washington ball grounds for the first game. Yesterday he maintained his record at the Polo grounds. Any old time that "One-Eye" can't crash a gate, there won't be any series.

NOTES OF FIFTH GAME

Senators' Infield Rookie Subbing for "Peck" Made Costly Blunders.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. — Roger Peckinpaugh was a much missed cog in the Washington machine. The Giants concentrated their attack on the rookie, Ralph Miller, at third, and reaped a harvest of results. Peckinpaugh was also sorely missed in the batting rallies staged by the Senators. His bat, one of the most dangerous on the Washington team, in a pinch, was needed to-day.

According to the sequence of games and result thus far the Senators should win to-morrow and the Giants Friday. The New York club has won every "odd" game and the Senators have broken the tape on the "even" contest.

"Muddy" Ruel has yet to get a hit in the series. The Washington receiver has been passed frequently but popping or grounding out more often. In the eighth to-day with Judge on second and two down, Ruel smashed to Lindstrom, who juggled the drive, picked it up, dropped it again and then threw him out at first by a step.

The "Goose's" string of consecutive hits was broken at six when he was tosed out in the third. He made a safe blow in the last time at bat on Monday, chalked up four yesterday and got an infield hit on his first time up to-day.

Terry's terrific drive in the fourth that landed near the stands in deep right centre, was the first triple of the series and one of the longest hits ever seen at the Polo grounds.

Goslin hit a foul over the right field stands in the eighth just before he clouted his third homer of the series and tied Babe Ruth's record total of three for any single series made last year.

CHEU AND DOUGHTY LEAD P. C. I. SPORTS

Results of Athletic Events in Junior and Senior Groups.

Harry Cheu and Harry Doughty led the field in their respective jumps, senor and junior, in the P.C.I. sport events which have been run off. Cheu capped all the runs and was second to G. Pogue in the shot put, and Doughty was home first in all the junior races.

However, the only events recorded yet are the races and their remains still the jumps and the road races to decide. These events control the major portion of the points.

The sun shone on the P.C.I. Field Day this year for the first time in many years and the fine weather gave the many competitions added zest and a keen track. The events were all keenly contested although this year will go on record since none of the records set up by past athletes were broken.

Some idea of how fans awaited the opening of the world series may be gathered from the picture showing a small section of the long line of "sleepers" who slept out all night in order to be near the front of the line when the Washington ticket window opened in the morning.

JOHNSON MAY NOT PLAY BALL AGAIN

"I Couldn't Hold Them," He Said After Wednesday's Game—Last Appearance?

NEW YORK, October 9 (Canadian Press).—Walter Johnson said yesterday after he was beaten for the second time during the World's Series by the Giants that it was doubtful if he would play ball next year.

The big pitcher, who waited 18 years to get into baseball's classic, would not elaborate on his statement but did deny a report that he had bought stock in the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League.

"I couldn't hold them," he said, referring to the game which he evidently considered to be his last appearance in a World Series, if not in big league baseball.

"I'm sorry," he continued. "I had two chances to beat them, but I could not hold them at either time."

Manager Harris was philosophial.

"They made breaks and they beat us. Life is that way. But we'll catch them to-morrow. Zachary will pitch."

Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran shortstop, and captain of the Senators, whose absence because of a charley-horse has been severely felt during the last three games, was determined to play to-day.

"I'll get in that game if I break the leg," he said.

Manager McGraw was in happy spirits as his team made ready to be escorted by a motor cordon through the town to catch the special train chartered to take the players of both teams to Washington shortly before six o'clock.

ROYAL BANK TOOK TWO OUT OF THREE FROM THE DOMINION BANK

The Royal Bank and the Dominion Bank hooked up last night at Solomon's Alley and the former came out with two out of three. Some nice rolling was turned in, considering the very little practice the teams have had this season, and the games were viewed by quite a crowd. With a little more practice and time the boys in the Bankers' League will be hitting 'em A-1. It is a little too early in the season to expect high scores, although O'Neill with 472, who was high man of the evening, and Babcock with 453, who was next, turned in nice games. O'Neill had the high single of the evening with a nice score of 211.

Following are the scores:

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 8.— Ladkin, August Belmont's colt, pulled up lame after working a mile and a quarter in 2:10 2-5 here to-day. Trainers said, however, they expected to have the horse in shape for Saturday's international special race.

GALT'S TERRIERS TAMED BY OSLERS

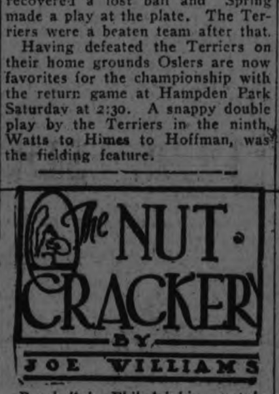
GALT, Ont., Oct. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Joe Spring, pitching ace of Toronto Oslers scored one of the greatest victories of his career here yesterday afternoon when in the first game of the senior O.B.A.A. finals he tamed the Terriers 4 to 2.

A record crowd of 6,112 paid admissions, witnessed the game which did not furnish a brand of ball expected in a championship series, errors figuring largely in the run getting on both sides. Kress, pitching for Galt, got away to a bad start, being erratic, walking three and and with three errors and a hit Oslers got three runs. From then on it was a pitcher's battle, Kress twirling beautiful ball keeping the remaining hits scattered. Both Kress and Spring struck out ten each. The Terriers lacked punch in their attack, bad coaching costing them a run after Kinsman getting to third on the longest hit of the afternoon was an easy out at the plate when Benson recovered a lost ball and Spring made a play at the plate. The Terriers were a beaten team after that.

Having defeated the Terriers on their home grounds Oslers are now favorites for the championship with the return game at Hampden Park Saturday at 2:30. A snappy double play by the Terriers in the ninth, Watts to Himes to Hoffman, was the fielding feature.



Baseball in Philadelphia must be picking up if the boys have to bribe the Phillies to lose.

Until Mr. O'Connell stepped forward as the money man in the newest baseball scandal, nobody knew why McGraw had him on the team.

You cant' help but admire the tremendous courage of Judge Landis in barring such an important individual as a second-assistant coach from the series .....How the bat boy ever escaped the czar's judicial wrath is beyond us.

It is said that Mr. Sand of the Phillies curtly refused the proffered bribe of $500 to throw a game .... You can't get very far on $500 anyway.

You are asked to believe none of the other Giants knew about the attempted bribe .....You are asked to believe it but you are an awful hick if you do.

Mr. O'Connell came to the big leagues as the $75,000 beauty....It looks as if he will depart as the $500 goat.

Joe Jackson, Eddie Cicotte and Buck Weaver of Black Sox fame will now rise and sing that appealing little ballad, entitled "You Don't Know the Half of It, Dearie!"

Perhaps the enterprise would have been more successful if Mr. O'Connell had used Secretary Fall's little black valise.

CHICAGO RAZES EIGHT BUSINESS BLOCKS TO CONSTRUCT DOUBLE-DECK BOULEVARD

Property Owners Along South Water Street Accept $12,500,000 to Vacate Buildings—Huge Project Estimated to Cost $24,000,000.

By GEORGE BRITT.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—A policeman's whistle blows at a corner on South Water street. North and south traffic halts, street cars and automobiles massing for half a block each side of the intersection. All to let four swarthy laborers with pushcarts transfer a few crates of cabbages or apples or chickens across the street from one commission merchant to another.

That's South Water street today—a market whose congestion and smells and inconvenience are as great as its fame.

But South Water street tomorrow will be a boulevard and Chicago's most important cross-town traffic way. Monumental skyscrapers will replace its rat-infested shells of buildings.

Work of demolishing the eight blocks hugging the south river bank will begin in a few weeks.

Double-Decker.

Years of negotiations have ended with the property owners agreeing to accept $12,500,000 from the city and get out. The total cost of the work is estimated at $24,000,000.

Within little more than two years the job is due to be finished. It will provide a double-decked thoroughfare along the river from Michigan avenue west to Market street.

Skyscraper Goes, Too!

The lower level, 135 feet wide, will accommodate truck traffic, from the railroad yards on the east to the West Side warehouse district. The upper level, 110 feet wide, will carry light vehicles.

Ever since the great fire South Water street has fed Chicago's hungry tables. Most of the city's vegetables, fruit and produce are marketed there.

Every year it has grown more antiquated. More and more teams and automobiles have wedged and pulled themselves into its restricted space. Traffic on the great intersecting streets leading into the loop has suffered increasing interference.

One exception to the general ramshackled character of the district is the new, spreading, ten-story building of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. This was the principal obstacle. The city at length agreed to pay $3,950,000 for that one piece of property, making approximately $2,207,000 for the building and $40 a square foot for the land.

The Chicago Plan Commission worked out the improvement scheme and created sentiment for its accomplishment. It estimates that removal of the market district will relieve the congested loop streets of 16,000 market vehicle trips a day and make a direct reduction of traffic of 16 per cent. Directly and indirectly, the traffic relief is put at 40 per cent.

Realization of the project makes necessary the lifting up bodily of the second largest produce market in America and re-planting it in some suitable place. And the business of tens of millions of dollars a year must be interfered with as little as possible.

Some of the merchants already have moved out to W. Randolph street. Others have just announced a co-operative plan for the South Side, where they have bought 70 acres of land and are preparing to build next winter a $6,000,000 model market district.

FALL PLANTING TIME AT HAND

Growing Season Has Been Greatly Lengthened By Lack of Dry Weather.

PLAN PROGRAMME

The fall planting season is at hand. Our summer weather which, as is usual with weather, has been very unusual, has at the same time lengthened the growing season, and hastened the planting season. The usual dry spell which we have not had this year has the effect of putting a stop to growth; so trees and shrubs in some cases are still growing.

But trees and shrubs cannot be planted, except in the case of evergreens, until their leaves fall. It is the iris and perennials which are first on the planting programme, and the August rains have left the ground in good condition for them.

Should Plant When Possible.

Whatever one can plant in the fall, one should; for at this season there is none of the spring rush, which will handicap our efforts six months hence. It is easier to obtain things to plant and pleasanter to work in mellow soil in cool weather. Those things which can be planted in the autumn do much better when they are so planted. The iris is likely to blossom next year; the peonies probably will do so, and the other perennials are certain to. The trees and shrubs will get established sooner, and put forth next summer a full suit of leaves, instead of being half clothed and straggly as so often happens with spring planting. Nurserymen, in fact, assert that planting in the autumn saves a year, and the claim is not extravagant.

Planning Comes Before Planting.

And of course before planting there must come planning. This is of more importance than ever. Our suburbs are becoming increasingly critical of garden design; and the home owner who buys a dozen shrubs and dots them over his front lawn will find much disapproval. Good books on landscaping small home grounds are numerous, and may be borrowed from the public library. If one studies such a book before beginning to plant his effort will be repaid many fold by increased satisfaction in the effect of his planting, and by the saving of labor in replanting; for be assured you will not be long content with a garden picture which is not right.

MARS.

If you have been wondering how the scientists are able to tell so much about conditions on Mars, here is a sample: The Lowell Observatory in Arizona recently found that the temperature on Mars is 488 degrees, instead of below zero, as has been supposed. This was learned by using the Coblenz radiometer, which is so delicate that it accurately measures the heat of a candle 100 miles away.

Human brains that can make such a wonderful mechanim will not be balked at finding a way to communicate with Mars, if any.

EGO.

The public used to sneer and guffaw when imaginative scientists, far in advance of their time, suggested that people may live on Mars and other heavenly bodies besides the earth.

Man's egotism, knowing no bounds, fancied that the stars and their satellites far off in space existed only as tiny points of light for men to glance at when they felt like it.

Now we know that our world is, in the universe, less than a single drop of water in the oceans. With knowledge, man becomes more humble.

AT LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

Appeal Made on Behalf of Children's Aid Society.

WORK ON NEW PARK

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 8.—Mr. G. W. Powell of Peterboro addressed a meeting in the Council Chamber on the work of the Children's Aid Society. Unfortunately the attendance was small but all present were in full accord with the great work done by the Society and the importance of maintaining the Shelter.

Mr. Powell briefly reviewed the programme of the Society which is under government supervision and which deals with hundreds of cases each year, in fact more than 23,000 cases were looked into during the past year. In Ontario there are 39 shelters and many branches of the Society. Norwood, Havelock and Lakefield have for several years past held tag days for this worthy cause and a substantial sum has resulted.. It is planned to hold tag days in each of these places on Saturday of this week.

Mrs. Laurence Grahame was appointed convanor of the committee and it was arranged that a tag day would be held in the schools on Friday under the supervision of the teachers.

A house to house canvas on Saturday afternoon and evening was proposed. The girls will also tag on Saturday night.

A meeting is being held in the Council Chamber on Friday evening to arrange the Soft Ball League for the season. Representatives of the teams entering the league will be present and the schedule drawn up. Each year these games are very popular growing more so every year. Good clean sport and a fine community spirit combines to make the games of great value to the village.

Work is progressing rapidly at the Lakefield-Peterboro road which will be, when completed, a great improvement on its former condition. At present the section between Phelan's Corner and the gooseneck is closed and cars have to detour going over Huggin's hill turning south past the cemetary to the next concession.

Work has commenced at the clearing of Hague's Point as the village park. The underbrush will be cleared and the road approaching it will be put in first class condition and it is hoped next year it will be an attraction to the increasing number of motor campers which are (alas) passing through the village. Much of the work at the park is voluntary labor by citizens who are interested in the improvement of our village. A number of road signs will be put up directing tourists to this delightful camping ground.

Rev. and Mrs. A. W.. Mackenzie entertained about forty friends at an afternoon tea on Thursday afternoon last. A delightful time was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher rendered several selections on the violin and piano which were very much appreciated and Mrs. Fawcett, who was in splendid voice, sang two solos.

A large contingent from Lakefield took in the fair at Curve Lake on Friday last, the ideal weather and the novel attraction combined to make the Lakefield representation larger than ever before.

Mr. Sam S. Spence celebrated his 75th birthday on Monday, October 6th. Mr. Spence is hale and hearty and every day is to be seen hard at work, with no thought of retiring. His friends, which include everyone in the village, join in expressing good wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Rev. P. L. Jull and Rev.. W. Cox were in Warsaw on Tuesday night attending the anniversary dinner of the Warsaw Presbyterian Church.

A good representation from Lakefield expect to attend the meeting of the Peterboro District Council of the A.Y.P.A. to be held in Millbrook on Thursday evening of this week.

The Citizen's Band are resuming their regular practice and will be one of the attractions at the rink this winter. The band has succeeded in building up a good reputation for itself in the few months which have intervened since it was re-organized and at the fair their truly creditable performance won many compliments from the crowds assembled.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., called attention to their performance and urged the co-operation of the citizens with this valuable asset to the village.

The vegetables and fruit which were used in the harvest decorations of St. John's Church, Lakefield, were donated to the Nicholl's Hospital by Rev.. W. Cox.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning last.

Sunday next will be observed as A.Y.P.A. Sunday in St. John's Church. There will be a corporate communion at 8 a.m. and both morning and evening services will be in keeping with the young people's part in church work. At the evening service it is expected that a number of visitors will be present representing other branches of the A.Y.P.A. in the district. Rev. Walter Cox will set forth the four fold programme of the society which has for its motto: "For Christ and the Church."

The anniversary services in the Baptist Church will be held on Sunday next, October 12th. Rev.. T. L. White will be in charge. In the evening there will be no service in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches to enable the members of these congregations to attend the Baptist Church.

On Sunday, October 19th Rev. T. L. White will preach his farewell sermon before leaving for his new field of labor in Scotland, Ontario.

On Sunday, October 19th the anniversary services will be held in the school room, followed by an entertainment in the church.

"Eczema on My Face Completely Relieved"

Miss Winifred Ernest, Box 46, Blockhouse, N. S., writes:

"Ever since I was a little child, I suffered with eczema on my face. At times my face was completely covered with large sores, and I tried nearly every kind of medicine that I heard of with no results. This lasted for over twenty years, until one day I asked the advice of my druggist, who bade me give Dr. Chase's Ointment a trial. After using the Ointment for a few days, the sores began to heal, and soon I was completely relieved of the disease."

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Salts To Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts.

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

SOUP FOUNDATION

A tablespoon of cooked cereal such as oatmeal or cream of wheat may be used as the foundation for a bowl of soup, combined with tomato sauce and possibly a few vegetables.

PENALTY

People who cause fires by carelessness should be punished by courts, argues the state fire marshal of Massachusestts. He thinks the careless man cannot be converted into a careful man simply by telling him to be careful.

This is direct reasoning without any bunk. A penalty is not always a preventive. But it helps. It's the kick in a live wire that keeps people away. Carelessness becomes ethically criminally when it endangers the lives or property of others.

BOSS.

Northern Pacific Railway insures all its employees under a 50-million dollar "group contract" that requires no medical examination.

It's a wise provision, especially for men who never save.

Begins to look as if most of our social and economic problems will be solved by corporations instead of government—in the far-off future.

Business, after all, is the real government.

LIBERAL LEADER SPOKE IN SASK.

Premier King Addressed a Large Gathering at Prince Albert.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Oct. 9. —(Canadian Press.) — Any blue-blooded statesman was prepared to go down fighting for his principles, but no men would allow himself to be forced into action by the group bludgeon, declared Premier King here last night. The Liberal party was not antagonistic to the west, but was handicapped in carrying out its policy by lack of support. He asked the west to seriously consider the position of the Liberal party and its attitude to the west with its restricted support from the prairies. The only hope for successful administration of the country was a return to the two party system. The Prime Minister reiterated his stand on the Hudson Bay railway and declared the action of the government in repairing the line could be taken as part of its future intention.

BETHANY COUPLE 40 ANNIVERSARY

Children of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Jackson Gathered Together Last Evening.

Last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Jackson, a happy family gathering took place, when the children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. R. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston's children were all present, and all the grandchildren with the exception of Miss Violet Jackson, their oldest grand-daughter, who found it impossible to leave her position in Toronto, but who sent her congratulations and expressed her disappointment at not being present, in a letter which was read during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston were taken completely by surprise as the event had been planned unknown to them. We sincerely hope and trust that they will be spared to us for many years to come. And in another ten years that they will be with us still, an undivided family to celebrate their golden wedding.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WHAT IS GOVERNMENT CONTROL?

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Quebec boasts that they made four million dollar by making alcohol liquors plentiful, which increases drunkenness, poverty, crime, insanity, consumption and other diseases and lessens efficiency. Ontario, on the other hand, has been enriching the people by lessening all those evils and increasing efficiency by prohibiting the use of liquor as a beverage as rapidly as possible.

Clever financiers estimate that prohibition has enriched the people of Ontario at least sixty million dollars a year. That being so, it follows that Government control has impoverished the people of Quebec by about forty million dollars and left a great number of diseased, degenerate and weakened people. How could it be otherwise with people poisoned with alcohol?

Statistics show that the American people are getting rich under prohibition. Quebec financiers must have had their brains muddled with something. Why could they not have got that money without poisoning the people? In order to get the people to buy all that liquor Quebec has opened 82 Government stores and 1,906 hotels, taverns, grocery stores, restaurants and clubs all licensed to sell liquors, and they call that Government control.

Montreal has 35 Government stores, 248 taverns, 588 grocery stores, 56 hotels, 47 restaurants and 98 clubs all licensed to sell liquor. That is over fifty times as many places selling liquor as before they got the so-called Government control, which doesn't try to control. No wonder the streets are said to be unsafe for ladies after dark.

We can stop the bootleggers when ever we really want to. I was in North Carolina when they were neither fined nor sent to jail. They were sent to work on the roads for a year with a ball and chain to their ankle and a soldier guarding them with a gun. Or, why not send the man who defies the law to jail for one year for a first offence, two years for a second, and so on. That would soon break the law-breakers.

AIRPLANES AID BUSHMEN.

By the Purchase of 15 Planes $300,000 Has Been Saved.

SARNIA, Ont., Oct. 9. — Pronouncement on the results attained by the use of aircraft on forest patrol work in North Ontario, was made by Hon. James Lyons, Minister of Lands and Forests for Ontario, in an address before the chamber of Commerce last night. He said that destruction by fire in the four years prior to this year had been in excess of six million acres of timber, a greater amount than that cut to maintain the pulp mills and saw mills in operation.

Since the purchase of 15 hydroplanes the area patrolled by the land forces had been increased and up to the present date only about 50,000 has been lost by fire this year.

He claimed that the innovation despite necessary expenses to get the organization together, had brought a saving of almost $300,000 to the department this year.

He spoke at length on the resources and the possibilities of Northern Ontario.

KING REVIEWED WORK IN SPEECH TO PARLIAMENT

Referred to Acceptance of Dawes Plan, Russian Treaty and Trade Depression.

INVOKES BLESSING

Formal Speech by His Majesty in Proroguing Parliament—Election Oct. 29.

LONDON, Oct. 10. — (Canadian Press). — The King's Speech proroguing Parliament, after announcing that Great Britain's relations with foreign powers continued friendly, notes the confirmation and acceptance of the Dawes report by the London conference, together with the unanimous approval of recommendations for implementing the report.

It then declares "this happy result was due to the broad-minded spirit of co-operation with which the difficult problems were approached by the powers concerned. I believe this settlement will contribute largely to the restoration of international commerce on which the material prosperity of this country so largely depends."

The speech proceeds to refer to the fifth assembly of the League of Nations which by formulating proposals for dealing with the problem of general arbitration and security, made an important advance on the road to reduction of armaments. "The issue and its discussion have been embodied in a protocol which will be submitted to Parliament as soon as possible and which, it is hoped, will lead to the first practical measures for lightening the heavy burden under which the nations are suffering."

Russian Treaty.

The renewal of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia was then announced together with the conclusions of two treaties "having for their object the re-establishment of the political and commercial ties of Great Britain and Russia as the necessary element in the general pacification and economic reconstruction of Europe."

The speech then alludes to the question of the frontier between Turkey and Irak, which has been referred to the League of Nations for a report pending which both parties have undertaken to maintain the status quo on the frontier. It expresses regret that the informal discussions of Premier MacDonald with Said Zagloul, Egyptian Premier, failed to lead to negotiations, the Anglo-Egyptian relations will continue to be governed by the policy adopted when the protectorate was withdrawn.

Business Depression.

Matters of home interest are then referred to by the speech, such as steps taken with the Dominions' Governments to promote the marketing of foodstuffs in Great Britain. It continues:

"Although there are, I am glad to say, signs of a distinct improvement in some of the principal industries and in certain branches of trade and commerce, severe depression continues. My Ministers have been actively engaged in the development of a constructive policy with a view of stimulating industry and encouraging trade as the only means of dealing fundamentally with unemployment, from which a large proportion of our fellow-citizens are still suffering.

The speech then proceeds to outline these relief measures, including unemployment benefits, housing, assistance to agriculture by means of loans, grants, etc., and other social reforms.

In conclusion, the speech says:

"I pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest upon your labors."

Earlier in the day, the King held a privy council at Buckingham Palace, at which he signed the proclamation necessary to dissolution.

Premier MacDonald announced that the general election would be held on Wednesday, October 29, and that the new Parliament would meet a week or two after that date.

PRINCE VISITED PAT BURNS' PACKING PLANT

CALGARY, Alta., October 10 (Canadian Press). — Ninth Avenue and the precincts of the C.P.R. station adjacent to the Palliser Hotel were crowded with hundreds of men, women, and children who cheered heartily as the Prince of Wales walked out, accompanied by Mayor Webster, on the arrival of the special train here at 2.15 p.m. on Thursday.

The Prince expressed a wish to go and see the Imperial Oil plant, to which he was at once driven, followed by cars containing members of his suite.

Later he inspected the P. Burns packing plant.

The Prince looked well and as bright as usual as he stepped off the train. The first to greet him was his ranch manager, Professor W. L. Carlyle, who delivered to him some parcels.

After chatting a while the Prince spied the Mayor, and beckoned him to come into his car. When the Prince reappeared a few minutes later His Royal Highness descended to the platform and was then introduced to the local dignitaries.

TIMBER WOLF DIGS UP BOY'S CONCEALED BODY

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press).—A black northland wolf came out of the timber on the shore of the Laird River and followed a scent which attracted him. He found where it came from beneath the earth and he dug to reach it. Under the soil he found a layer of logs and was foiled in his efforts.

The wolf was an agent of providence and an innocent assistant to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. His act led to the discovery of the concealed body of a 17-year old boy, Moccasin, or Atol, who had been killed a few months before by members of his tribe because he was suspected of being in league with evil spirits. The escort of R.C.M.P. officers brought in five Indians believed to have been connected with the murder of the boy to the city yesterday on board the steamer Princess Alice from Wrangel for trial.

OPPONENTS MAY UNITE AGAINST LABOR'S FORCES

Working Agreement Mooted to Avoid Triangular Contests That Gave Labor Seats.

MAY BE BITTER

Nobody Desired This Election And Cause of Dissolution Will Be Forgotten.

LONDON, October 10. — Despite the seeming eagerness with which ministers have hailed the dissolution of parliament, this election will likely go down in history as the election nobody wanted. Largely because of this it bids fair to prove also one of the bitterest elections fought in recent times. It is safe to say that before the campaign is finished, the primary cause of dissolution, namely the prosecution of John Ross Campbell will have been obliterated by the pyramided arguments of the parties. Perhaps the chief consolation to parliamentarians and to the electors at this moment is the reflection that since the fight had to come, it will be at least compressed into the narrowest possible compass of time.

May Join Forces.

Members by the dozen packed their bags Wednesday night and caught the late trains to the provinces.

It is of course early to prophesy how the line of battle will develop but strenous efforts are sure to be made by prominent Conservatives and Liberals alike to reach some working agreement under which the two old line parties will unite to fight against labor on an anti-socialist agreement. The evils of the triangular party system and the tendency to produce dual elections, will be thoroughly canvassed.

It must be borne in mind that the Labor government carried seventy seats on a mere minority vote and it will inevitably be urged that by entering into a compact, Liberals and Conservatives, with a common candidate, would wrest most of these from the Ramsay MacDonald forces. In London, for instance, Labor holds 14 seats, to which MacDonald's candidates were elected by a minority of the total vote cast. In nine of these the Conservatives candidates polled more votes than the Liberal candidates, and in five the Liberals polled more than the Conservatives. The argument put up by these in favor of a principal of fusion is that if the Conservatives conceded these five seats to the Liberals, and the Liberals conceded the other nine to the Conservatives, then Labor would lose the whole fourteen. In short a sort of replica of Lloyd George's famous coupon system of election is lurking in the minds of many stalwarts of the elder parties.

However the idea may come to nothing. There are many Parliamentarians who still feel aggrieved over what the coupon system did for their parties in teh past, and only the enticing prospect of putting out the Laborites will persuade some members to adopt such a plan.

Points of Agreement.

Within the Labor camp a belief is widely held that the suddenness of the election catches the Liberals at a bigger disadvantage than the Conservatives, the latter having a large number of candidates already in the field. Points for a common policy for Liberals and Conservatives alike might be found in the general dislike in the ranks of both parties to the Russian Loan guarantees, and also the alleged subservience of the ministry to the Communist wing with a general commendation of the government for its alleged nervelessness in handling the reins of government. The electors are naturally expected to lend a willing ear to the plea that the country above all wants a stable government, and that stable government cannot be hoped for under conditions existing during the past nine months.

JUDGE RESENTS REFLECTION BY SMITH COUNSEL

Gordon Waldron Said Crown's Lawyer "Running" Home Bank Trial Court.

DREW REPRIMAND

"Remark Aimed at Me Over His Head," Judge Coatsworth Declared.

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press).—An exciting incident occurred just before the close of the afternoon session Thursday of the trial of Clarence F. Smith, Montreal, Home Bank director, on charges of making false statements of the bank's affairs, when Gordon Waldron, defence counsel was reprimanded by His Honor Judge Coatsworth for disrespect of the court. Thomas Gibbs, assistant chief accountant of the Bank, was in the stand verifying the minutes of directors' meeting at which the accused was in attendance. Mr. Waldron objected to them going in as evidence claiming that they contained more material than the crown stated they did. He went over to the witness stand to examine the papers and then started asking the witness questions concerning them.

Waldron's Outburst.

Crown Counsel McCarthy objected to the questions stating there could be no cross-examination until the crown had finished with its examination. Mr. Waldron turned about and striding to the defence counsel table exclaimed: "I resign from this inquiring. Do as you please you are running this court."

"Don't be childish" replied McCarthy.

"I'm not childish" retorted Mr. Waldron.

Judge Coatsworth then intervened and addressing Mr. Waldron sharply said: "You are not called upon to make such disrespectful remarks of the court. I am surprised at a man of your age, experience and knowledge making such remarks and I resent them."

"I was making the remarks to my learned friend" said Mr. Waldron.

"And at me over his head" said His Honor. "Mr. McCarthy is not running this court, and I do not think he is trying to."

"Well the crown is trying to run me," Mr. Waldron said.

"I don't know about that but we'll let it go" replied the judge.

Apologized to Judge

Mr. Waldron then apologized stating that no one was more sorry than he if the remarks touched the court.

Counsel had frequent clashes during the day and most of the time was taken up with arguments on objections and reading from the minutes of the directors meeting from the time Smith was made director in 1919. The minutes concerned affairs of the bank which were reported to the directors and have been submitted in other forms of evidence in the preceding trials. They were all put subject to the objection of Mr. Waldron that they were not evidence until connected with the accused.

Lloyd George Tours Scotland Next Week

British Political Leaders Quickly Prepare For Campaign.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(By Canadian Press Cable).—Campaign plans of the political leaders are being made Thursday. Ex-premier Lloyd George makes a tour of Scotland next week, his principal speeches beng planned for Edinburgh, Aberdeen and Inverness.

Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, home secretary, opens the governments' campaign at Burnley on Saturday. Premier Ramsay Macdonald speaks at Glasgow on Monday, and afterwards will tour the northern industrial centres.

The conservatives made arrangements some time ago for a big autumn campaign and several of their big guns opened fire last night in various parts of the country.

ASK CROWN TO DEFEND PIRIE

Self-Confessed Murderer of Wife and Children Committed for Trial.

G.W.V.A.'S APPEAL

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—(Canadian Press).—John Buchanan Pirie, self-confessed murderer of his wife and two children here on October 1, was committed for trial Thursday by Magistrate Hopewell.

The responsibility of the crown to take over the matter of Pirie's defence was involked at the opening of the preliminary hearing by Harold Fisher, K.C., in a statement in which he said that both himself and R.A. Olmstead, who had been retained by the local command of the Great War Veteran's Association to act for the former air force officer, would retire from the case for the present, but would act if called upon at a later stage.

In a statement issued by the G.W.V.A. and read at the hearing it was declared that the "Great majority of the veterans feel satisfied that Pirie was mentally unbalanced when he committed the deed."

As a result of his mental condition, which, the statement says render Pirie unable to instruct, the Veteran's organization have taken the stand that he automatically becomes a ward of the crown.

PIRACY CHARGE IN LIQUOR SUIT WAS DISMISSED

Secrets of Traffic and Its Magnitude Disclosed to Montreal Jury.

VOUCHER SYSTEM

Halves of Dollar Bills Given to Prospective Purchasers to Identify Them.

MONTREAL, October 10 (Canadian Press). — Captain Samuel C. Forde, New England shipmaster and one-time skipper of the good ship Lutzen, was acquitted of the charge of piracy on the high seas in the Court of King's Bench here yesterday afternoon.

The finding followed a two hours' deliberation on the part of the jury.

The case, which developed many highly sensational features, the recital of which suggested a reversion to the days when picturesque privateers and the Brotherhood of the Coast plied their nefarious calling amid the chop of the Roaring Forties, taking toll of treasure-laden galleons and honest merchantmen, centred upon something less romantic than "doubloons" 'and pieces of eight. But the circumstances alleged in the litigation revealed that whatever a cargo of whisky may lack in romance, it compensates in cold, hard cash.

Torn Dollar Bills.

Witnesses in the case, under severe examination, naively disclosed the magnitude of the trade that has been developed since Uncle Sam slammed down the lid on the import of alcoholic liquor, and they also revealed the ingenous system by which business transactions are conducted.

Prospective purchasers ashore were given dollar bill torn in half which they presented as identification vouchers to the super-cargo of the ship from which they wished to buy the "wet goods." The super-cargo being in the possession of the corresponding halves of the torn currency, was thus assured of the patron's bona-fides, and the sale took place.

The piracy case was surrounded by many complex issues.

SETTELL'S WIFE FORGIVES PAST

Visits Husband in Hamilton Jail After Two Years Estrangement.

WON HIM OVER

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 10. — Prison bars brought a reconciliation between Clarence Settell, Hydro secretary, and his wife here Wednesday after an estrangement of about two years. Not in years has such a scene been witnessed in Hamilton jail in which the grill-work separating prisoner and his wife performed such a miracle. On the one hand, there was the prisoner, Clarence Settell, a man of about forty years of age, held in the Bastille because of cashing a $29,925 cheque on the Hydro Commission, for which he had worked for twenty years, and on the side of freedom, visiting the jail with but the thought of assistance in her heart, Ada Fogg Settell, a woman of about thirty-six, confronting the man from whom matrimonial differences had separated her. Earlier in the day Settell, when informed that his wife whom he had not seen for some months, wished to see him and help him, passed the suggestion off with a snap of the fingers.

"She does not want to see me now—I'm in bad here," he said.

She is a frail built woman, who bears the marks and lines of worry brought on through family troubles. Those who knew her say that Settell had fallen in love with her through hearing an excellent soprano voice in one of the churches, and Settell himself is possessed of a voice of considerable quality.

A Woman's Loyalty.

Mr. Sullivan, therefore, sent a message to Settell in his cell that his wife was present and wanted to see him. At first he would not see her, but after a short few words with Mr. Sullivan, he agreed, and Mrs. Settell met her husband from behind the grill-work of the local jail. Settell was dressed as in street attire, holding his Christie hat in one hand and at first sight he stood back against the "danger line" painted on the floor, and, with considerable reserve, greeted the woman he had married.

Mrs. Settell first explained that she had come up with only one thought, of assisting in some manner.

"I'm in pretty bad now," Settell replied. "I can't see how you can help me."

"Oh, but I want to help you, Clary," pleaded the wife with tears in her eyes, "and I am going to help you in every way I can."

Doesn't Complain.

The conversation continued in regard to family matters. Mrs. Settell inquired how he was being treated, and in defernce to Governor Lalonde, who was standing nearby, Settell remarked: "Fine, couldn't be better,' 'although he knew that the incarceration was having much effect on his mental and physical condition.

During the conversation it was remarked that a Toronto lawyer had served a writ on him for a sum of

SHIP COMBINE UNDER ENQUIRY

W. T. R. Preston Sails From London After Investigations of Ocean Traffic.

GOVERNMENT AGENT

LONDON, October 10. W. T. R. Preston sailed on the Andania yesterday for Canada after having investigated the North Atlantic steamship combine concerning ocean traffic between Canada and Europe. Mr. Preston was reticent with regard to the questions involved in his enquiry on behalf of the Canadian government, and the shipping circles were almost as reticent.

It is understood that Mr. Preston was hopeful of securing from the combine important concessions as regards freight rates for the dominion. Negotiations to this end were carried on for several weeks, but seemingly they came to a sudden end coincident with the return of Sir Norman MacKinder, chairman of the Imperial shipping board, from his Canadian visit.

The assertion is made that the steamship conference conditions have tightened and efforts are assiduously being made to embrace continental companies in the combine. If this is attained there is a possibility of Canadian influence detaching any steamship companies now sailing to Canada from the combine will at least be considerably diminished.

It is understood that Mr. Preston's reports on his investigations will not reveal much not already known to the Canadian government.

PERFECT LOVE BREAKS HOME

TWO DIVORCES

CHICAGO, Oct. 10. — Notwithstanding all the precautions taken by Professor Hall-Quest, dean of the University of Pittsburgh, to shield from publicity, for the sake of the wife he divorced Tuesday, the name of the "other man" in the case, this became known yesterday.

The latter is Frederick William Hart, a public accountant, formerly of Cincinnati and also married. This fact became known indirectly as the result of the filing in that city of a suit for divorce against him by his wife, Rosamund. The suit was brought a month ago and Mrs. Hart on her part sought to keep her rival's name secret so that the two could live out their romance absolved of the social penalty for violating the conventions.

Mrs. Hall-Quest and Hart, it also became known, had for the last month been living at the Evanshire Hotel in Evanston as Mr. and Mrs. Hart. They left Wednesday night, saying that business had called them out of town.

Husband Absent.

Mrs. Hall-Quest and Mr. Hart met about two years ago, when the two families occupied adjoining apartments near the University of Cincinnati where Professor Hall-Quest was professor of Secondary Education. Professor Hall-Quest joined the university faculty in 1917 and remained until 1923. It is said that the romance developed while the Professor was taking a year's leave of absence to do research work at Columbia University, New York. Mrs. Hall-Quest remained behind to study medicine. She would have been graduated in 1924 had she not met Hart. The latter had been a major in the British army during the war. He married while in England and brought his wife to America.

In deliberately giving up his wife so that she may enjoy "perfect, passionate love," Hall-Quest is slamming shut the door leading to his own pathway of happiness.

In doing so he is following that new law in the code of the American gentleman—to let the woman go her way in her search for the will-o'-the-wisp.

But society wonders — will he some day meet Fred W. Hart face to face? If so, will the primitive burst the bonds he has welded around his heart?

Letters breathing a passionate love for the man who had cantured her imagination were read during the trial by the grim-lipped husband. But each time he deleted Hart's name. The first letter speaks of that greatest of human desires, the search for happiness. Here it is:

"Dear Lawrence,—I wanted to show you if possible that my going away with —— was necessary, not because it meant a consummation of the perfect and passionate love that is between us, but because it offered, as we saw it, the only way for an upbuilding made necessary by years of tearing-down process. — Shirley."

Did Not Act Hurriedly.

The next one tells of her passionate desire to place everything

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

GENERAL BOOTH AND PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Your correspondent, "Alice M. Leader" pretends to contradict my statement that General Booth, the founder of the S. A., did not endorse prohibition, but she very disingenuously avoids saying so. God did not prohibit sin. If He had there would be no means of sin and no sin, would there? Many of these enthusiasts do not seem to know what prohibtion means. It means the prohibition of the means of drinking, and when applied generally the prohibition of all means of sinning. If God had done that it would have been done finally, but He did not. He chose to leave it to each individual to choose eternal life or eternal death. The prohibitionist would prevent the individuals choosing death by prohibiting the means of death. As Christ did not do this, but gave the remedy for the sinner in turning from his desire to misuse (sin) and voluntarily choosing the better way. Prohibition is a denial of Christ's teaching.

J. H. BURNHAM.

REV. MR. POGUE ON PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Rev. Mr. Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, is giving his congregation some straight talks on prohibition, a question which for many years he has carefully studied. The reverend gentleman is a minister who believes in the Bible, and he teaches his people that prohibition is in accordance with the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, and while his opinions are certainly pronounced, his reasoning is logical, and his facts are incontrovertible.

At this time when we have so many wet temperance men, that is, men who are willing to do anything in the world for temperance except vote for it, these weekly talks will strengthen many weak knees, and provide spinal columns for those who are in immediate need of them in view of what will be required of them on the 23rd inst.

I feel assured that even those who have not the happiness of being able to see eye to eye with him on this question will warmly commend the reverend gentleman for his fearless advocacy of the right as he sees the right, and for his endeavor to give leadership to his large congregation upon a great moral question.

Magna est veritas et praevalebit.

J. C. SMITH.

AVOIDING COLDS

"Get used to temperately heated rooms," advised the Mann family doctor when Mr. Mann consulted him on avoiding colds.

"Try to wear loose, porous clothing. Heavy wraps and fur coats should be worn only during unusual exposure, such as is encountered when out autoomobiling.

"Outer garments should be adanted to the changes of weather and medium-weight underclothing worn.

"Office workers and all persons employed indoors spend the greater part of the day at summer temperature and too heavy underclothing, under such circumstances, impairs the resistance powers.

"It is better to have heavy outergarments, so that when the warm indoors place has been left behind, the more rigorous temperature can be faced.

"In ordinary offices or homes, the temperature should not be allowed to rise above 68 degrees."

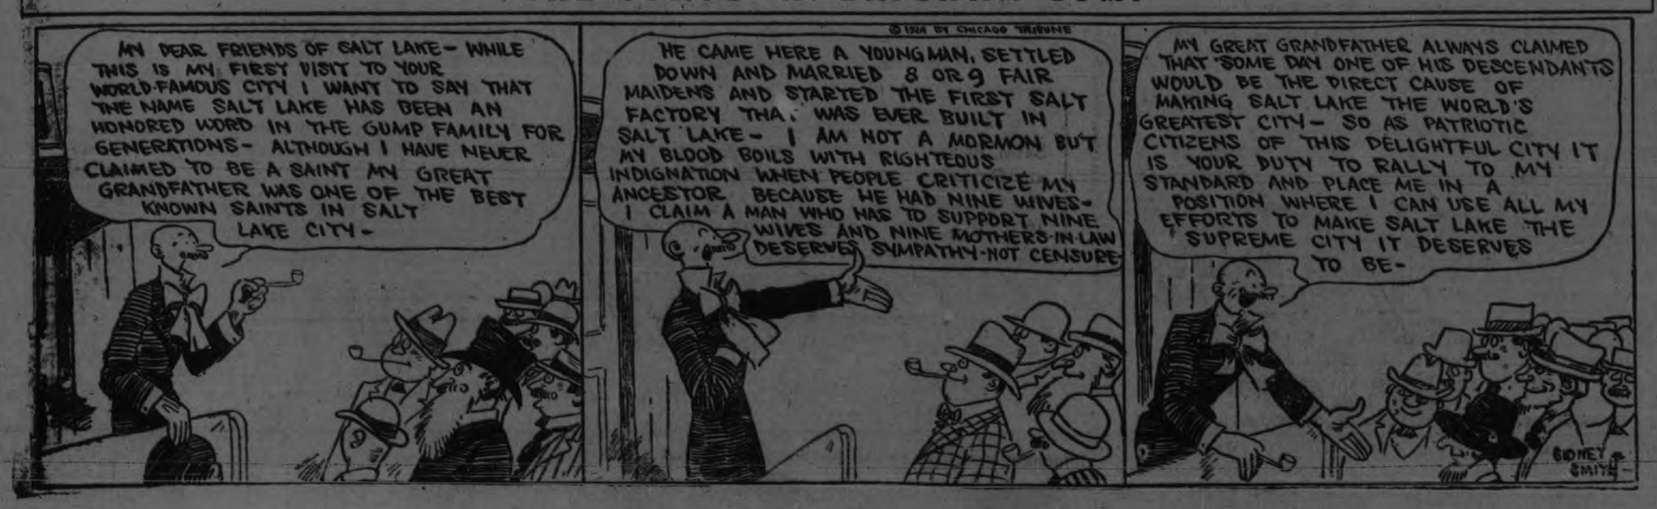
THE GUMPS—A. BRIGHAM GUMP



SHOT HIS CHUM; BOY IN PRISON

Mortally Wounded Boy Staggered Into the Kitchen To Die.

BOTH ARE 16.

TORONTO, October 10. — Staggering from an upper room into the kitchen of the home of Mrs. Irene Banks, Peel avenue, with blood streaming from a mortal wound in his neck, where a rifle bullet has entered, with a cry of "I'm shot!" 16-year old Russell Guppy, Argyle street, last night collapsed on the floor and died. Death was due to the severing of an artery on the left side of his neck.

The body of the unfortunate lad was removed to the morgue where an inquest will be held.

Guppy and Lynch were upstairs in the Banks' home when the tragedy happened. Lynch was showing a German 22 calibre rifle to his chum when in some manner his finger touched the trigger, the rifle discharged and the bullet lodged in Guppy's neck.

Queen's Girls Tore Hair From Male Intruders at Reception.

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press). — Queen's girls may take proceedings through the college courts against male students who broke into the freshetts' reception Wednesday night. There were some half dozen of the intruders, with handkerchiefs concealing their faces and blankets over their bodies, who entered by an entrance at the rear. Nearly all the girls pitched into them, tore off their disguise so they could recognize them, and did a great deal of hair pulling. It was a rough time for the unwelcome visitors.

Unfortunate Men Will Be Looked After This Winter

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Interviewed yesterday by four unemployed men, representing hundreds of unfortunates in the same position, Premier Ferguson was impressed by two sugestions put forward by them as means to combat unemployment during the coming months and will put them into effect. The first suggestion approved by the Premier was that the government institute a cooperative scheme among the business institutions and factories to have each employers of labor provide one extra job each week during the winter months He is asking Richard Stapell's president of the board of trade to confer with him at Parliament buildings as the first step in the plan to put the sug gestion into effect.

The men told the Premier that they believed they could canvass the industrial situation and find a few jobs for married men with families. The Premier took them up also on this proposition and they are going out to hunt up every job opportunity that can be found and report direct to the goverment their findings.

Two Army Aviators Killed in Heavy Windstorms.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Two army aviators were killed and eleven airplanes wrecked Wednesday in a series of accidents caused by a terrific windstorm that caused the sudden cancellation of army air manoeuvres intended to be held over Versailles and Rambouillet.

The two airmen were killed in a short fall over Le Bourget a minute after they had taken off with their squadron. They apparently were forced down and out of control by a descending air current.

Ten other machines were smashed in the efforts of 200 airplanes to leave the various airfields.

Canadian Shot In Detroit—Companions In Hospital.

Atkinson, accompanied by two friends, Richard Burns and Nathan Gunn, were motoring, and called at a roadside inn at Oakwood.

As they were re-entering their car, a number of shots rang out from an upstairs window of the inn and Atkinson was killed instantly.

The other two men were removed to the hospital suffering from gun shot wounds.

The slayer, Carlo Spano, 35 years old, Highland Park, was captured shortly afterwards. He confessed and the Detroit police claim that Mr. Atkinson was shot down in mistake for another man.

The victim was born in Dorchester Township, Elgin County, 41 years ago.

"If I could talk with everybody who is not feeling right I would certainly urge them to try Tanlac. A year ago I was taken down with influenza which left me in an awful run-down condition. I was sick with a terrible hurting in my stomach, had no appetite, suffered all the time with pains in my back, was extremely nervous and dizzy, and had headaches that nearly set me wild.

"Tanlac was the first and only thing that did me any good. Since taking this grand medicine I eat and sleep like a child and feel fine. In fact, I am now enjoying the best of health and will always praise Tanlac."

COMPANY TO ASSUME HOME BANK ASSETS

Prospectus Names $3,000,000 Corporation To Look After Affairs.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—(Canadian Press).—At the original meeting of the Home Bank depositors on December 6th, 1923, it was left to the national committee of depositors and the courts to decide whether or not it would be in the best interests of the depositors and shareholders to form a holding company for the proper handling of the "slow and important assets of the bank."

The time has now arrived for consideration of this proposal, and the national committee of depositors will pass upon it at the next meeting, probably at the end of October. A prospectus has been prepared providing for the chartering of a $3,000,000 corporation, to be known as the Home Bank Assets, Limited. This company would liquidate the assets of the bank and turn the proceeds over to whoever is entitled to the money. A general manager, with a salary of $10,000 a year is provided for, to take up the duties now performed by G. T. Clarkson and I. E. Weldon, joint liquidators.

JURY FINDS MURDER.

Declares Car Was Driven Wilfully Into Smylie Muirhead.

NIAGARA FALLS, Oct ber 10. — Wilful murder against Frank Barned (now at large), was the ...dict of a jury at the inquest last night into the death of Smylie Muirhead, killed on Saturday, September 27th, by being hit by a car driven on to the sidewalk.

The jury at the inquest accepted the evidence of several witnesses that the killing of Muirhead was deliberate.

Witnesses showed that the Barned car was driven along the sidewalk from behind Muirhead, Mrs. Muirhead and Mrs. Barned, and continued for 100 feet, and that there was no loss of control, but that murder was intended.

SETTELL'S WIFE

about $500 in connection with a note, and although the wife had nothing to do with this, she said "I will help to fix that, your mother and I will pay that." To which Settell, who gradually evidenced a softening in feeling, dropped his head, and it was evident that he was slowly breaking down a srong wall that had been built in his heart against his wife.

Mrs. Settell inquired if her husband had not seen her in Toronto one day when he passed driving in an automobile. Settell agreed he had seen her, but had not spoken. This brought tears to the eyes of the woman who had valiantly come to Hamilton to befriend the man whom she had loved.

An Emotional Scene.

Before departing Mrs. Settell remarked: "Clary I would like to kiss you before I go. Would you not kiss me through this screening?"

Settell had stood back several feet from the grill-work up to this point, but when Mrs. Settell expressed such a wish, Governor Lalonde, Mr. Sullivan and the guard, stepped back out of sight, and the couple kissed each other through the iron wiring of the cage. Tears streamed down both their cheeks, and both were visibly effected.

On parting, Mrs. Settell promised to do everything in her power for his aid.

"We had a very consoling talk," she said. "I still believe in Clary, and I think he will come out all right in the end. He has always sworn by Sir Adam Beck, and I do not think he means anything wrong against him."

The prisoners wood-cutting gang stopped work to a man in astonishment yesterday when Settell voluntarily joined their midst at the Barton street jail.

"Now I know why Kaiser Bill turned wood cutter," grinned the former private secretary, as he took the saw proffered by Governor Lalond and started to "lay to."

Shortly after he transferred to a two-man buck saw. On the other end was a colored prisoner "in on a vag charge."

The Governor watched the pair, the colored man gradually beginning to feel the pace set by Settell. The darkie started to roll and the sweat to pour from the midnight brow.

"What's the hurry, we got all day, ain't we?" the Governor heard Settell's fellow worker gasp.

O'Ryan, of the United States army, received a true military welcome to the city last evening at the Military Institute. Private in nature, the dinner was presided over by Col. Allison H. Borden, D.S.O., Commandant of the Military District, and was attended by senior officers of the garrison and representative citizens.

PIRACY CHARGE

zen off Rum Row in October, 1923, after the super-cargo, a Jack Morris of Montreal, and another man named Isaacs, a Winnipeg lawyer, had been thrown in irons.

It was alleged that Forde had sold the liquor over the side and flaunted the proceeds, amounting to between $80,000 and $100,000 in the faces of the prisoners.

The Lutlen was then taken to Bermuda, where one of the victims, according to evidence, reported "everything O.K." This witness gave it as his reason that he was afraid lest the alleged pirate would shoot him.

A few days following the incident, the owners of the Lutzen filed a claim with Lolyd's for payment of insurance on the cargo, amounting to over $30,000. This has not yet been paid.

Rum Row Geography.

Yesterday was taken up with addresses of counsel.

Charles Russell MacKenzie, acting for the accused, pointed out several discrepancies in the evidence, and gave the jury a lesson on geography. He described the situations of St. John, N.B., whence the Lutzen had sailed on her fateful voyage, Bermuda, at which port the vessel eventually arrived, Havana, whither it was feared the alleged pirates had taken the ship, and finally that uncharted stretch of waters known as Rum Row.

He expressed surprise at the apprehension of the super-cargoes in fearing to tell their tale of woe to the authorities at Bermuda, surrounded as they were police, British infantry, artillery, and the protective ships of the Royal Navy.

R. C. Calder, K.C. Crown Prosecutor, emphasised that Forde had no right to be on board the Lutzen at all, and that it was Forde who had thrown the super-cargo in irons.

Mr. Justice Demers was emphatic in his appreciation of the veracity of the witnesses.

PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT.

The request made by the deputation of municipal representatives who waited upon Premier Ferguson the other day that the Provincial Government contribute one twenty-five per cent. of the cost of winter emergency relief measures expenses, the balance to be paid by the Federal Government and the municipalities, the latter paying 50 per cent. of the total, did not particularly appeal to the Premier.

Mr. Ferguson pointed out the danger that such a policy might lead to municipal extravagance.

That risk undoubtedly would exist where the municipalities were assured that half of the expenses would be borne by Provincial and Federal Governments.

Canny municipal councils might consider it a convenient time to errect a new civic building under the guise of an emergency employment scheme and have half the cost carried by the Dominion and the Province.

That the Province has some responsibility in regard to the unemployment situation cannot be denied, and the best possible way in which that responsibility could be discharged would be by the immediate undertaking of all Government work sanctioned during the past session, if it is of a nature that can be carried on during the winter months.

The Premier has promised activity along this line, and if the building programme can be launched the situation should be appreciably relieved.

SOMETHING LACKING.

How much value do you put on your franchise?

The question is timely because the registration of voters for the plebiscite has brought ou the surprising fact that many young men entitled to cast a ballot refused to have their names placed on the list because they were afraid that registration would make it necessary to pay their poll tax.

In other words, these youths did not consider the privilege of voting worth five dollars.

The young men who placed such a slight valuation upon possession of something was only sercured after hundreds of years of fighting against despotism and autocracy were not, the majority of them at least, illiterate or uneducated.

Most of them were graduates of Ontario's school system, supposed to have some degree of learning and some knowledge of history.

And yet they were so indifferent about the privileges and responsibilities of citizenship that they declined to run the chance of having to pay five dollars for the right to vote.

The curriculum of our schools may be overcrowded at present, but it begins to look as if some of the subjects might profitably be scrapped in favour of a course in citizenship.

If the boys coming out of our schools value their franchise so little as to prefer to save five dollars a year to possessing the privileges of a voter, there is something lacking in our system of education.

The schools of this country should at least teach our youngsters to be good citizens, and therefore good Canadians.

THE SITUATION IN BRITAIN.

The inevitable has happened to the British Labour Government, and the MacDonald Ministry has been forced to appeal to the country for a fresh mandate.

Labour has held the reins of power for nine months in spite of being in the minority in the House, and it was regarded as only a question of time before the situation would grow so irksome to Mr. MacDonald and his followers that they would welcome a general election and a chance to come back into the House with augmented forces.

The end finally came over an issue of no great importance, the withdrawal by the Attorney-General of the prosecution of a Communist editor charged with inciting His Majesty's forces to sedition.

The campaign is to be decidedly short, the election having been set for October 29th, but it will make up in interest and excitement what it lacks in length.

Labour expects to make big gains, professing to believe that its administration has been such as to merit the confidence of the people.

Most political experts do not concede any strengthening of the Labour position by an appeal to the country, declaring that Labour will hold its own, the Conservatives will gain and the Liberals lose.

However, most of the same experts were very much at sea in trying to predict the result of the last general election, and it is possible that they are again under-estimating the hold the Labour party has gained upon a large proportion of the electorate.

England is having a surfeit of elections, and the country will undoubtedly welcome a clear majority in the House for one of the parties, giving some hope of staple government.

KEEPING UP YOUR END.

Your cost of living is only about 62 per cent. higher than it was before the war, according to economists. In other words, you can buy as much for $1.62 as you could for $1 in $1914.

This claim must ge the average man's goat once in a while, as he checks up and discovers that he's spending a lot more than in the good old days when he could buy a meal for a quarter.

The joker is in the fact that the economists fail to make allowances for the advanced standard of living.

It may be true that your bills for basic foods, rent, clothing necessities, etc., are only 62 per cent. higher than before the war. And that, by spending $1.62, you can buy as much as you formerly could for $1.

But, since 1914, an advancing standard of living has added items to the list of "necessities" that were without question in the luxury class back yonder.

The "cost of living" also includes non-essentials which the average person imagines he must have in order to maintain his social standing. A lot of foolishness is included, such as the waning of the respectability of patched trousers and mended furniture.

It isn't so much the increased price of what we used to buy, as it is a matter of the price of things we formerly never dreamed of buying. And that's chiefly why the average man finds he has less cash on hand after paying his bills, not to mention that the average income may not have increased apace with the so-called advancing standard of living.

It is possible to live almost as cheaply now as 60 or 110 years ago—provided one would be satisfied with the old-time standard of living which supplied only the simplest and most urgent wants.

And, as a matter of fact, none of us would have to work more than a few hours a day if we returned to the old-time standard of living. We have to work long hours because we demand more commodities and services in daily life than was the custom long ago.

The increased cost of living is to considerable extent the price of increased standard of living.

TEMPTATION.

Fundamentally, no excuse can ever justify crime, though it may stand in some instances for a palliative, says the Montreal Star. The plea of Clarence Settell, who admits having stolen $29,000 from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission by forgery, that he took the money because he had not been paid enough for his services, does not make his theft any the less serious an offence. But it does give food for thought. This is not the first time in recent years that a man holding a position of trust and responsibility, through whose hands large sums of money pass or who has access to them, has advanced the plea of inadequate pay in extenuation of theft. There have been instances, indeed, in which the discrepancy between the remuneration paid and the responsibility borne has been so great that the employer has preferred to maintain silence rather than run the risk of exposure in prosecution proceedings.

In the present instance, it is clear, the criminal believed he was being treated unfairly. Whether he was or not will doubtless come out later. The laborer is just as worthy of his hire today as he was in the days when they lent cash at high interest rates in the purlieus of the Temple at Jerusalem. And it ought not to be necessary to join a union in order to get adequate recognition of valuable services. The employer who places upon an employee heavy responsibility and trusts him with the temporary care of large sums of money owes it as a duty to himself to see that this employee is in receipt of such a salary as places him beyond constant temptation. To pay anybody an inadequate wage and then ask them to play with temptation daily, is a type of economy for which there are unpleasant names.

WHY THE LEAVES FALL.

Do you know why the maples turn to scarlet and gold and why the evergreens keep their leaves, when the cool, crisp, golden autumn days come to the land? In the October number of Nature Magazine, the editor tells us he asked many people those questions, but nobody seemed to know. Then when he went home he asked his wife. She knew, because "Mothers have to know such things."

The leaves are the lungs of the trees, but in the winter the roots cannot gather as much moisture as in summer, so the tree discards the leaves and carries on respiration through the bark alone. And there is also another reason. If they remained on the trees, the combined weight of snow and leaves would mean the tearing of the branches.

Early in the autumn the living substance in each leaf is gathered into the branches and tree proper, until only the framework is left. And then some sunny day in October you will see the shower of leaves falling, for the dry air seems to shrivel the leaf, and practically all fall from the elm and birch tree. And then some frosty morning the leaves of the sugar maples and poplars fall. Ice crystals form in the sticky separation layer, and when the warmth of the sun thaws and expands them, the woody tissue is torn and the leaves pushed free.

Sometimes the oak and beech trees retain a great many of their leaves all winter. The separation layer seems not to be quite thick enough, and needs the added soaking and decay of winter to complete this process, and March and April winds and rain often carry away the last of the withered leaves.

In warm climates, the leaves fall just the same as they do in the North, choosing the dry season, for if a tree held its leaves during the season of drought, the moisture loss would be more than it could endure.

You have heard many people say that Jack Frost is responsible for the gay coloring of the autumn leaves, haven't you? But that is not correct. As the nourishment of the leaf is withdrawn into the trees, the various pigments and other products of decomposition which have until that time been hidden by the green chlorophyll, show themselves. Iron and minerals which the sap has collected from the soil, contribute to this pageant of color. A long, dry autumn produces the finest coloring. Long, cold rains wash the color, and wilt the leaves. Frost catches them unawares sometimes, and kills them before their beauty can be shown.

The evergreen trees are much better equipped to stand the winter. Their leaves are waxy-coated and slender, and snow and ice slip between them. They are somewhat changed in appearance, however, for the chlorophyll granules have withdrawn from the surface as far as possible and the water content is reduced. Protected in this way, the alternate freezing and thawing seem to have no bad effect, and the leaves are ready in the spring to continue their work of starch making. The leaves on the evergreen trees do not live long. The average tree has its needles replaced in from three to five years. But so gradual is this change that we hardly notice the old ones falling off and the new making an appearance.

We are told that the work of the leaves is not finished when they fall, for in the woods they protect the roots, and when the spring rains come the mineral substance is leached out and added to the soil, enriching it and forming the very-much-prized humus. In casting off its leaves the tree prepares the way for the sprouting of its seeds, and supplies nourishment for their future growth.—Christian Guardian.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Probably no one in Washington today is worrying half as much about the presidential election as over the question of which pitcher the Senators will use in the final game.

Mr. Chas. Hanna, Liberal candidate in West Hastings, will not be able, like his namesake of the old poem, to stay "at the window binding shoes." He has a formidable opponent in E. Gus Porter.

A THOUGHT.

STRAIGHT TIPS.

If you repeat ugly stories you may expect them in return.

Force yourself to take an interest in your work and the effort will soon become a pleasure instead of a hardship.

Evil speaking can do no lasting evil, for the wall of friendhip that is so frail it will crumble to dust beneath the lash of an evil tongue is not worth having.

In youth we make temples or hovels of our castles in Spain. In age, we simply live in the structures we have builded, going back to them across the Bridge of Memory.

The good opinions of others are mental crutches by which we hobble into better and higher walks of life; most of us struggle to be what those we love best believe us to be.

Men often talk to hide their real character, but it is a small personality that can be hidden behind that narrow strip of red velvet, the tongue, for the nose, lips and mouth are all traitors to the cause.

Some music is so poor and weak it will not hold even the words of our grand old hymns; they slip through and are lost, while other music is so noble and strong that it enfolds them in a deeper and tenderer meaning, and flings them back into the heart.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 10 (Canadian Press). — Severe breaks resulted yesterday from heavy selling of wheat to be delivered next July. The quotations for that month fell 5 3-4 cents a bushel to $1.33 1-2 on account of excellent conditions for seeding the new 1925 crop, and as a result of prospective enlarged acreage.

Despite the fact that much of the selling of July was marked by simultaneously buying of May, the wheat market closed unsettled from 1 1-8 to 4 1-8 cents net lower; December 149 3-8 to 149 1-2, May 154 1-4 and July 134 7-8 to 135.

Corn finished at 1-4 off to 3-8 cents gain.

Oats 1-4 to 1 cent down.

PERFECT LOVE

society holds dear on the altar of her love:

"Surely, Lawrence, I did not act hurriedly in this matter. I had months in which to decide whether I truly loved another. And doesn't my giving up everything in the world—honor (from the standpoint of Society), friends, work, position and, more important still, my harming you — do not all these things mean that this love is of more importance than anything else in the world?

"I cannot conceive of life apart from —— and I must therefore continue to trust that our life together may be eventually sanctioned by social laws."

In another of these odd messages which she penned in her love-nest, she doubts the possibility of perfect love. This one says:

"The future for me, of course, may hold disillusionment. It is possible that there is no such thing in this world as perfect love."

Tries to Elevate Amour.

Yet another epistle shows that she tried to keep her illicit amours on the highest plane possible:

"It seems to me so much more honest to live openly than to meet clandestinely, which is so sordid and unnecessary and would therefore tend to lower us."

FUNNY?

The funniest thing in the round-the-world airplane flight, says Lieutenant Smith, was the way the frightened natives in Indo-China fled into the woods when they saw the huge steel birds swooping down toward them.

It didn't strike those Malay natives as being especially humorous. George Washington would probably have dropped dead of heart failure if he could have seen one of these planes.

We've approached it gradually, so it has none of the terrors of what is magical and not far from supernatural—this flying 'magic carpet.'

INTELLIGENT CARE OF YOURSELF IS ALL THAT IS NECESSARY TO LIVE 100 YEARS

Annual Physical Examination Best Preventive of Disease, Dr. Fisk Says.

DIET AND EXERCISE

Insurance Companies Reduce Mortality Rate 28 Per Cent. By Examinations.

By GEORGE BRITT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—It is exactly an even bet, Sir or Madame, that there's some active, unrealized defect within you which can shorten your life.

It is more than an even bet that it can be corrected so as not merely to increase your days but to prolong your vigorous enjoyment of life.

You probably can live to be 100, and if not you, then your children and grandchildren certainly can, according to Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, medical director of the Life Extension Institute of New York.

"Just intelligent care of yourself, without the use of any magic elixir, is all that is necessary to give a century's life span," says Dr. Fisk.

Humanity's Ills

Here are some of Dr. Fisk's conclusions as to what is wrong with humanity in the United States today:

"Examination of more than 300,000 persons reveals not one who is physically perfect, and 50 per cent. of our working population need important medical and physical attention.

"Most important chronic infections are above the neck. Mouth infections are present in 60 per cent. of the cases examined, and head infections in 85 per cent.

"Muscular apathy is the great menace of civilization. A physical equipment developed by climbing trees and delving in caves is used now to whirl around in an office chair.

"Next to inherited health and longevity, the greatest element in prolonging life is the thorough annual physical examination," he says. "If this is followed by conscientious care, anyone can add years and years onto his probability of life.

"Diet is adjusted to trade distribution rather than to health. People choose their food because it comes in convenient cans or sacks. Inactivity and improper diet lead to overweight, and fat people always are worse insurance risks than slender people."

Three large unsweetened stewed prunes, 1 cup casserole of vegetables, 1-4 one pair sweetbreads in nest of peas, 1-2 head lettuce, 1 cup fresh strawberries, 1 toasted bran roll, 2 whole wheat pop-overs, 1 gluten roll, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Sweetbreads in Nests of Peas (For Four).

One pair sweetbreads, 1 thin slice bacon, 1 carrot, 1 small onion, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 cup white stock, 1 pint peas, 6 mushrooms, salt and pepper.

Parboil sweetbreads and split in halves. Place in a baking dish and pour over stock. Add carrots scraped and cut in thin slices, the onion peeled and sliced and the lemon rind. Bake thirty minutes, basting often. The bacon is cut in narrow strips and laid under and over the sweetbreads before the stock is added.

Cook peas, season with salt and pepper and rub through a colander. Make into small cakes with a depression in the center. Fill with sweetbreads. Strain stock and add mushrooms cut in small pieces. Reheat and pour one-fourth of the plain stock and mushrooms over the sweetbread and peas intended for the reducing number.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Six larged sweetened stewed prunes, 1 soft boiled egg, 1 cup boiled rice with 1 tablespoon sugar and 1-4 cup cream, 1 toasted bran roll with 1 tablespoon marmalade, 1 cup noodle soup, 1 cup casserole of vegetables, 1-4 one pair sweetbreads in nest of peas, 2 tablespoons scalloped potatoes, 1-2 head lettuce with 2 tablespoons Thousand Island dressing, 1 individual strawberry shortcake with 1 tablespoon sugar and 1-4 cup cream, 1-6 rhubarb and raisin pie, 2 whole wheat pop-overs, 2 dinner rolls, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 pint whole milk, 1 tablespoon crab-apple jelly with dinner rolls.

An equal amount of hot cream is added to the stock after enough is taken out for the reducing diet in the sweetbread dish. This adds many calories of fat undesirable for the too stout person but just the thing for the too thin person.

The marmalade is suggested to give piquancy to an otherwise rather tasteless breakfast.

The shortcake planned was made with sponge cake instead of biscuit dough. The cream can be whipped or plain as preferred. Sponge cake shortcake is considered easier to digest than "old-fashioned" shortcake.

THE DEMONS

(With Apologies to Kipling)

A fool there was and he placed his all
(Even as you and I)
In the sticks and stones of a building tall;
(We called it the place where fire would fall)
But the fool he called it his "fire-proof" mall.
(Even as you and I)

Oh, the wealth we waste and the health we waste,
And the value of buildings and land
All go to the Demon who did not care
(And now we know that it never could care
And never could stay its hand.

A fool there was and his goods he spent,
(Even as you and I)
Honor and faith and a sure intent,
(In the very place where the Demon went)
But a fool must follow the precedent,
(Even as you and I)

Oh, the toil we lost and the spoil we lost!
And the excellent future planned
Went up in the smoke of the Demon's spite,
(And now we know of that Demon's might)
Who could not stay its hand.

The fool was stripped to his foolish hide,
Which the Demos saw by the ruins side;
(But it isn't on record the Demon cried)
So some of him lived, but his business died,
(Even as you and I)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That gives to the fool his brand;
It's coming to know that the Demon's might
Could have been checked in the stilly night
And made to restrain its hand.

THIEVES

Scotland Yard detective discusses the unwritten law among British crooks, by which members of the royal family are not to be robbed under any circumstances.

Over here there are no such distinctions. Poor boxes in churches are pillaged by prowlers, widows and orphans robbed and swindled with intent, the poorest consumer gouged to the last penny of possible extortion.

Even a detective occasionally has his badge "lifted" by a "dip." Being a younger civilization than the British, American thieves have not yet established traditions.

As she listened and gathered from his words the apprehension of a thing that had hitherto escaped her, her eyes grew wide in sudden horror.

"Is that to be the cost of my deliverance?" she asked him fearfully.

"I trust not," he replied. "I have something in mind that will perhaps avoid it."

"And save your own life as well?" she asked him quickly.

"Why waste a thought upon so poor a thing? My life was forfeit already. If I go back to Algiers they will assuredly hang me. Asad will see to it, and not all my seahawks could save me from my fate."

She sank down again upon the divan, and sat there rocking her arms in a gesture of hopeless distress.

"I see," she said. "I see. I am bringing this fate upon you. When you sent Lionel upon that errand you voluntarily offered up your life to restore me to my own people. You had no right to do this without first consulting me. You had no right to suppose I would be a party to such a thing. I will not accept the sacrifice. I will not, Sir Oliver."

"Indeed, you have no choice, thank God!" he answered her. "But you are astray in your conclusions. It is I alone who have brought this fate upon myself. It is the very proper fruit of my insensate deed. It recoils upon me as all evil must upon him that does it."

He shrugged his shoulders as if to dismiss the matter. Then in a changed voice, a voice singularly timid, soft, and gentle—

"It were perhaps too much to ask," said he, "that you should forgive me all the suffering I have brought you?"

"I think," she answered him, "that it is for me to beg forgiveness of you."

"Of me?"

"For my unfaith, which has been the source of all. For my readiness to believe evil of you five years ago, for having burnt unread your letter and the proof of your innocence that accompanied it."

He smiled upon her very kindly.

"I think you said your instinct guided you. Even though I had not done the thing imputed to me, your instinct knew me for evil; and your instinct was right, for evil I am—must be. These are your own words. But do not think that I mock you with them. I have come to recognize their truth."

She stretched out her hands to him.

"If—if I were to say that I have come to realize the falsehood of all that?"

"I should understand it to be the charity which your pitiful heart extends to one in my extremity. Your instinct was not at fault."

"It was! It was!"

But he was not to be driven out of his conviction. He shook his head, his countenance gloomy.

"No man who was not evil could have done by you what I have done, however deep the provocation. I perceive it clearly now—as men in their last hour perceive hidden things."

"Oh, why are you so set on death?" she cried upon a despairing note.

"I am not," he answered with a swift resumption of his more habitual manner. "'Tis death that is so set on me. But at least I meet it without fear or regret. I face it as we must all face the inevitable—the gifts from the hands of destiny. And I am heartened—gladdened almost—by your sweet forgiveness."

She rose suddenly, and came to him. She caught his arm, and standing very close to him, looked up now into his face.

"We have need to forgive each other, you and I, Oliver," she said. "And since forgiveness effaces all, let—let all that has stood between us these last five years be now effaced."

He caught his breath as he looked down into her white, straining face.

"Is it impossible for us to go back five years? Is it impossible for us to go back to where we stood in those old days at Godolphin Court?"

The light that had suddenly been kindled in his face faded slowly, leaving it grey and dawn. His eyes grew clouded with sorrow and despair.

"Who has erred must abide by his error—and so must the generations that come after him. There is no going back ever. The gates of the past are tight-barred against us."

"Then let us leave them so. Let us turn our backs upon that past, you and I, and let us set out afresh together, and so make amends to each other for what our folly has lost to us in those years."

He set his hands upon her shoulder, and held her so at arm's length from him considering her with very tender eyes.

"Sweet lady!" he murmured, and sighed heavily. "God! How happy might we not have been but for that evil chance—"

He checked abruptly. His hands fell from her shoulders to his sides, he half-turned away, brusk now in tone and manner.

"I grow maudlin. Your sweet pity has so softened me that I had almost spoke of love; and what have I to do with that? Love belongs to life; love is life, whilst I—Morituru te salutat!"

"Ah no, no!" She was clinging to him again with shaking hands, her eyes wild.

"It is too late," he answered her. "There is no bridge can span the pit I have dug myself. I must go down into it as cheerfully as God will let me."

"Then," she cried in sudden exultation, "I will go down with you. At the last, at least, we shall be together."

"Now here is mid-Summer frenzy!" he protested, yet there was a tenderness in the very impatience of his accents.

He stroked the golden head that lay against his shoulder.

"How shall that help me?" he asked her. "Would you embitter my last hour—rob death of all its glory? Nay, Rosamund, you can serve me better far by living. Return to England, and publish there the truth of what you have learnt. Be yours the task of clearing the truth of what drove me to the infamy of becoming a renegade and a corsair."

He started from her.

"Hark! What's that?"

From without had come a sudden cry:

"Afoot! To arms! To arms Hola! Balak! Balak!"

"It is the hour," he said, and turning from her suddenly sprang to the entrance and plucked aside the curtain.

CHAPTER XXX

THE SURRENDER

Up the gangway between the lines of slumbering slaves came a quick patter of feet. Ali, who since sunset had been replacing Larocque on the heights, sprang suddenly upon the poop still shouting:

"Captain Captain Mylord Afoot Up, or we are taken!"

Throughout the vessel's length came the rustle and stir of waking men. A voice clamored somewhere on the forecastle. Then the flap of the awning was suddenly whisked aside and Asad himself appeared with Marzak at his elbow.

From the starboard side as suddenly came Biskaine and Othmani, and from the waist Vigitello, Jasper—that latest renegade—and a group of alarmed corsairs.

"What now?" quoth the Basha.

Ali delivered his message breathlessly.

"The galleon has weighed anchor. She is moving out of the bay."

Asad clutched his beard, and scowled.

"Now what may that portend? Can knowledge of our presence have reached them?"

"Why else should she move from her anchorage thus in the dead of night?" said Biskaine.

"Why else, indeed?" returned Asad, and then he swung upon Oliver standing there in the entrance of the poop-house.

"What sayest thou, Sakr-el-Bahr?" he appealed to him.

"What is there to say? What is there to do?" he asked. "We can but wait. If our presence is known to them we are finely trapped, and there's an end to all of us this night."

His voice was cool as ice, contemptuous almost, and whilst it struck anxiety into more than one, it awoke terror in Marzak.

"May thy bones rot, thou ill-omened prophet!" he screamed, and would have added more but that Sakr-el-Bahr silenced him.

"What is written is written!" said he in a voice of thunder and reproof.

"Indeed, indeed," Asad agreed, grasping at the fatalist's consolation. "If we are ripe for the gardener's hand, the gardener will pluck us."

Less fatalistic and more practical was the counsel of Biskaine.

"It were well to act upon the assumption that we are indeed discovered and make for the open sea while yet there may be time."

"But that were to make certain what is still doubtful," broke in Marzak, fearful ever. "It were to run to meet the danger."

"Not so!" cried Asad in a loud confident voice. "The praise to Allah who sent us this calm night. There is scarce a breath of wind. We can row ten leagues while they are sailing one."

A murmur of quick approval sped through the ranks of officers and men.

"Let us but win safely from this cove and they will never overtake us," announced Biskaine.

"But their guns may," Sakr-el-Bahr quietly reminded them to damp their confidence.

His own alert mind had already foreseen this one chance of escaping from the trap, but he had hoped that it would not be quite so obvious to the others.

"That risk we must take," replied Asad. "We must trust to the night. To linger here is to await certain destruction."

He swung briskly about to issue his orders.

"Ali, summon the steersmen. Hasten! Vigitello, set your whips about the slaves, and rouse them."

Then as the shrill whistle of the boatswain rang out and the whips of his mates went hissing and cracking about the shoulders of the already half-awakened slaves, to mingle with all the rest of the stir and bustle aboard the galeasse, the Basha turned once more to Biskaine.

"Up thou to the prow," he commanded, "and marshall the men. Bid them stand to their arms lest it should come to boarding. Go!"

Biskaine salaamed and sprang down the companion. Above the rumbling din and scurrying toil of preparation rang Asad's voice.

"Cross-bowmen, aloft! Gunners to the carronades! Kindle your linstocks! Put out all lights!"

An instant later the cressets on the poop-rail were extinguished, as was the lantern swinging from the rail, and even the lamp in the poophouse which was invaded by one of the Basha's officers for that purpose.

The lantern hanging from the mast alone was spared against emergencies; but it was taken down, placed upon the deck and muffled.

Thus was the galeasse plunged into a darkness that for some moments was black and impenetrable as velvet. Then slowly as the eyes became accustomed to it this gloom was gradually relieved Once more men and objects began to take shape in the faint, steely radiance of the summer night.

After the excitement of that first stir the corsairs went about their tasks with amazing calm and silence. None thought now of reproaching the Basha or Sakr-el-Bahr with having delayed until the moment of peril to take the course which all of them had demanded should be taken when first they had heard of the neighborhood of that hostile ship. In lines three deep they stood ranged along the ample fighting platform of the prow; in the foremost line were the archers, behind them stood the swordsmen, their weapons gleaming lividly in the darkness. They crowded to the bulwarks of the waist-deck and swarmed upon the ratlines of the mainmast. On the poop three gunners stood to each of the two small cannon, their faces showing faintly ruddy in the glow of the ignited match.

Asad stood at the head of the companion, issuing his sharp brief commands, and Sakr-el-Bahr, behind him, leaning against the timbers of the poophouse with Rosamund at his side observed that the Basha had studiously avoided any of this work of preparation to himself.

The steersmen climbed to their niches, and the huge steering oars creaked as they were swung out. Came a short word of command from Asad and a stir ran through the ranks of the slaves, as they threw forward their weight to bring the oars to the leve. Thus a moment, then a second word, the premonitory crack of a whip in the darkness of the gangway, and the tom-tom began to beat the time. The slaves heaved, and with a creak and splash of oars the great galeasse skimmed forward toward the mouth of the cove.

Up and down the gangway ran the boatswain's mates, cutting fiercely with their whips to urge the slaves to the very utmost effort. The vessel gathered speed. The looming headland slipped by. The mouth of the cove appeared to widen as they approached it. Beyond spread the dark steely mirror of the dead-calm sea.

Rosamund could scarcely breathe in the intensity of her suspense. She set a hand upon the arm of Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Shall we elude them, after all?" she asked in a tembling whisper.

"I pray that we may not," he answered muttering. "But this is the handiwork I feared. Look!" he added sharply, and pointed.

They had shot clear to the headland They were out of the cove, and suddenly they had a view of the dark bulk of the galleon, studded with a score of points of light, riding a cable's length away on their larboard quarter.

"Faster!" cried the voice of Asad. "Row for your lives, you infidel swine! Lay me your whips upon these hides of theirs! Bend me these dogs to their oars, and they'll never overtake us now."

Whips sang and thudded below them in the waist, to be answered by more than one groan from the tormented panting slaves who already were spending every ounce of strength in this cruel effort to elude their own chance of salvation and release. Faster beat the tomtom marking the desperate time, and faster in response to it came the creak and dip of oars and the panting, stenorous breathing of the rowers.

"Lay on! Lay on!" cried Asad, inexorable.

"We are drawing away!" cried Marzak in jubilation. "The praise to Allah!"

And so indeed they were. Visibly the lights of the galleon were receding. With every inch of canvas spread yet she appeared to be standing still, so faint was the breeze that stirred. And whilst she crawled, the galeasse raced as never yet she raced since Sakr-el-Bahr had commanded her, for Sakr-el-Bahr had never yet turned tail upon the foe in whatever strength he found him.

Suddenly over the water from the galleon came a loud hail. Asad laughed, and in the darkness shook his fist at them, cursing them in the name of Allah and his Prophet. And then in answer to that curse of his, the galleon's side belched fire; the calm of the night was broken by a roar of thunder, and something smote the water ahead of the Moslem vessel with a resounding thudding splash.

In fear Rosamund drew closer to Sakr-el-Bahr. But Asad laughed again.

"No need to fear their marksmanship," he cried. "They can not see us. Their own lights dazzle them. On On!"

"He is right," said Sakr-el-Bahr. "But the truth is that they will not fire to sink us because they know you to be aboard."

She looked out to sea again, and beheld those friendly lights falling farther and farther astern.

"We are drawing steadily away," she groaned. "They will never overtake us now."

So feared Sakr-el-Bahr. He more than feared it. He knew that save for some miraculous rising of the wind it must be as she said. And then out of his despair leaped inspiration—a desperate inspiration, the child of that despair of which it was begotten.

"There is a chance," he said to her. "But it is as a throw of the dice with life and death for stakes."

"Then seize it," she bade him instantly. "For though it should go against us we shall not be losers."

"You are prepared for anything?" he asked her.

"Have I not said that I will go down with you this night? Ah, don't waste time in words!"

"Be it so, then," he replied gravely, and moved away a step, then checked. "You had best come with me," he said.

Obediently she complied and followed him, and some there were who stared as these two passed down the gangway, yet none attempted to hinder her movements. Enough and to spare was there already to engage the thoughts of all aboard that vessel.

He thrust a way for her, past the boatswain's mates who stood over the slaves ferociously plying tongues and whips, and so brought her to the waist. Here he took up the lantern which had been muffled, and as its light once more streamed forth, Asad shouted an order for its extinction. But Sakr-el-Bahr took not the least head of that command. He stepped to the mainmast, about which the powder kegs had been stacked. One of these had been broached against its being needed by the gunners on the poop The unfastened lid rested loosely atop of it. That lid Sakr-e-Bahr knocked over; then he pulled one of the horn sides out of the lantern and held the now half-naked flame immediately above the powder.

A cry of alarm went up from some who had watched him. But above that cry rang his sharp command:

"Cease rowing!"

The tomtom fell instantly silent, but the slaves took yet another stroke.

"Cease rowing!" he commanded again.

"Asad!" he called. "Bid them pause, or I'll blow you all straight into the arms of Shaitan."

And he lowered the lantern until it rested on the very rim of the powder keg.

At once the rowing ceased. Slaves, corsairs, officers, and Asad himself stood paralyzed, all at gaze upon that grim figure illumined by the lantern threatening them with doom. It may have crossed the minds of some to throw themselves forthwith upon him; but to arrest them was the dread lest any movement toward him should precipitate the explosion that must blow them all into the next world.

At last Asad addressed him, his voice half-choked with rage.

"May Allah strike thee dead! Art thou djinn-possessed?"

Marzak, standing at his father's side set a quarrel to the bow which he had snatched up.

"Why do you all stand and stare?" he cried. "Cut him down, one of you!"

And even as he spoke he raised his bow. But his father checked him, perceiving what must be the inevitable result.

"If any man takes a step toward me, the lantern goes straight into the gunpowder," said Sakr-el-Bahr serenely. "And if you shoot me as you intend, Marzak, or if any other shoots, the same will happen of itself. Be warned unless you thirst for the Paradise of the Prophet."

"Sakr-el-Bahr!" cried Asad, and from its erstwhile anger his voice had now changed to a note of intercession.

He stretched out his arms appealingly to the captain whose doom he had already pronounced in his heart and mind.

"Sakr-el-Bahr, I conjure thee by the bread and salt we have eaten together, return to thy senses, my son,"

"I am in my sense," was the answer, "and, being so, I have no mind for the fate reserved me in Algiers—by the memory of that same bread and salt. I have no mind to go back with thee to be hanged or sent to toil at an oar again."

"And if I swear to thee that naught of this shall come to pass?"

"Thou'lt be forsworn. I would not trust thee now, Asad. For thou are proven a fool, and in all my life I never found good in a fool and never trusted one—save once, and he betrayed me. Yesterday I pleaded with thee, showing thee the wise course, and affording thee thine opportunity. At a slight sacrifice thou mightest have had me and hanged me at thy leisure. 'Twas my own life I offered thee, and for all that thou knewest it, yet thou knewest not that I knew." He laughed "See now what manner of fool art thou? Thy greed hath wrought thy ruin. Thy hands were opened to grasp more than they could hold. See now the consequence. It comes yonder in that slowly but surely approaching galleon."

Every word of it sank into the brain of Asad thus tardily to enlighten him. He wrung his hands in his blended fury and despair. The crew stood in appalled silence, daring to make no movement that might precipitate their end.

"Name thine own price," cried the Basha at length, "and I swear to thee by the beard of the Prophet it shall be paid thee."

"I named it yesterday, but it was refused. I offered thee my liberty and my life if that were needed to gain the liberty of another."

Had he looked behind him he might have seen the sudden lighting of Rosamund's eyes, the sudden clutch at her bosom, which would have announced to him that his utterances were none so cryptic but that she had understood them.

"I will make thee rich and honored, Sakr-el-Bahr," Asad continued urgently. "Thou shalt be as mine own son. The Bashalik itself shall be thine when I lay it down, and all men shall do thee honor in the meanwhile as to myself."

"I am not to be bought, O mighty Asad. I never was. Already wert thou set upon my death. Thou canst command it now, but only upon the condition that thou share the cup with me. What is written is written. We have sunk some tall ships together in our day, Asad. We'll sink together in our turn to-night if that be thy desire."

"May thou burn forevermore in hell, thou black-hearted traitor" Asad cursed him, his anger bursting all the bonds he had imposed upon it.

And then, of a sudden, upon that admission of defeat from their Basha there arose a great clamor from the crew. Sakr-el-Bahr's sea-hawks called upon him, reminding him of their fidelity and love, and asking could he repay it now by dooming them all thus to destruction.

"Have faith in me!" he answered them. "I have never led you into aught but victory. Be sure that I shall not lead you now into defeat—on this, the last, occasion that we stand together."

"But the galleon is upon us" cried Vigitello.

And so, indeed, it was; creeping up slowly under that faint breeze, her tall bulk loomed now above them, her prow plowing slowly forward at an acute angle to the prow of the galeasse. Another moment and she was alongside, and with a swing and clank of metal and a yell of victory from the English seamen lining her bulwarks her grappling irons swung down to seize the corsair ship at prow and stern and waist.

Scarce had they fastened, than a torrent of men in breastplates and morions poured over her side, to alight upon the prow of the galeasse, and not even the fear of the lantern held above the powder barrel could now restrain the corsairs from giving these hardy boarders the reception they reserved for all infidels. In an instant the fighting platform on the prow was become a raging, seething hell of battle, luridly illumined by the ruddy glow from lights aboard the Silver Heron. Foremost among those who had leaped down had been Lionel and Sir John Killigrew. Foremost among those to receive them had been Jasper Leigh, who had passed his sword through Lionel's body even as Lionel's feet came to rest upon the deck, and before the battle was joined.

A dozen others went down on either side before Sakr-el-Bahr's ringing voice could quell the fighting, before his command to them to hear him was obeyed.

"Hold there!" he had bellowed to his sea-hawks, using the lingua franca. "Back, and leave this to me. I will rid you of these foes."

Then in English he had summoned his countrymen also to desist.

"Sir John Killigrew" he called in a loud voice. "Hold your hand until you have heard me Call your men back and let none others come aboard! Hold until you have heard me, I say, then wreak your will."

Sir John, perceiving him by the mainmast with Rosamund at his side, and leaping at the almost inevitable conclusion that he meant to threaten her life, perhaps to destroy her if they continued their advance, flung himself before his men to check them.

Thus almost as suddenly as it had been joined the combat paused.

"What have you to say, you renegade dog?" Sir John demanded.

"This, Sir John: that unless you order your men back aboard your ship, and make oath to desist from this encounter, I'll take you straight down to hell with us at once. I'll heave this lantern into the powder here, and we to hell with us at once. I'll heave this sink and you come down with us held by your own grappling hooks. Obey me and you shall have all that you have come to seek aboard this vessel. Mistress Rosamund shall be delivered up to you."

Sir John glowered upon him a moment from the poop, considering. Then:

"Though not prepared to make terms with you," he announced, "yet I will accept the conditions you impose, but only provided that I have all indeed that I am come to seek. There is aboard this galley an infamous renegade hound whom I am bound by my knightly oath to take and hang. He, too, must be delivered up to me. His name was Oliver Tressilian."

Instantly, unhesitatingly, came the answer——

"Him, too, will I surrender to you upon your sworn oath that you will then depart and do here no further hurt."

Rosamund caugh her breath, and clutched Sakr-el-Bahr's arm, the arm that held the lantern.

"Have a care, mistress," he bade her sharply, "or you will destroy us all."

"Better that!" she answered him.

And then Sir John pledged him his word that upon his own surrender and that of Rosamund he would withdraw nor offer hurt to any there.

Sakr-el-Bahr turned to his waiting corsairs, and briefly told them what terms he had made.

He called upon Asad to pledge his word that these terms would be respected, and no blood shed on his behalf, and Asad answered him, voicing the anger of all against him for his betrayal.

"Since he wants thee that he may hang thee, he may have thee and so spare us the trouble, for 'tis no less than thy treachery deserves from us."

"Thus, then, I surrender," he announced to Sir John, and flung the lantern overboard.

One voice only was raised in his defense, and that voice was Rosamund's. But even that voice failed, conquered by weary nature. This last blow following upon all that lately she had endured bereft her of all strength. Half-swooning she collapsed against Sakr-el-Bahr even as Sir John and a handful of his followers leaped down to deliver her and make fast their prisoner.

The corsairs stood looking on in silence; the loyalty to their great egptain, which would have made them spend their last drop of blood in his defense, was quenched by his own act of treachery which had brought the English ship upon them. Yet when they saw him pinioned and hoi ted to the deck of the Silver Heron, there was a sudden momentary reaction in their ranks. Scimitars were waved aloft, and cries of menace burst forth. If he had betrayed them, yet he had so contrived that they should not suffer by that betrayal. And that was worthy the Sakr-el-Bahr they knew and loved: so worthy that their love and loyalty leaped full-armed again upon the instant.

But the voice of Asad called upon them to bear in mind what in their name he had promised, and since the voice of Asad alone might not have sufficed to quell that sudden spark of revolt, there came down to them the voice of Sakr-el-Bahr himself issuing his last command.

"Remember and respect the terms I have made for you! Mektub! May Allah guard and prosper you!"

A wail was his reply, and with that wail ringing in his ears to assure him that he did not pass unloved, he was hurried below to prepare him for his end.

The ropes of the grapnels were cut, and slowly the galleon passed away into the night, leaving the galley to replace what slaves had been maimed in the encounter and to head back for Algiers, abandoning the expedition against the argosy of Spain.

Under the awning upon the poop Asad now sat like a man who was awakened from an evil dream. He covered his head and wept for one who had been a son to him, and whom through his madness he had lost. He cursed all women, and he cursed destiny; but the bitterest curse of all was for himself.

In the pale dawn they flung the dead overboard and washed the decks, nor did they notice that a man was missing in token that the English captain, or else his followers, had not kept strictly to the letter of the bond.

They returned in mourning to Algiers—mourning not for the Spanish argosy which had been allowed to go her ways unmolested, but for the stoutest captain that ever bared his scimitar in the service of Islam, the story of how he came to be delivered up was never clearly told; none dared clearly tell it, for none who had participated in the deed but took shame in it thereafter, however clear it might be that Sakr-el-Bahr had brought it all upon himself. But, at least, it was understood that he had not fallen in battle, and hence it was assumed that he was still alive. Upon that presumption there was built up a sort of legend that he would one day come back; and redeemed captives returning a half-century later related how in Algiers to that day the coming of Sakr-el-Bahr was still confidently expected and looked for by all true Moslems.

CHAPTER XXXI

THE HEATHEN CREED

Sakr-el-Bahr was shut up in a black hole in the forecastle of the Silver Heron to await the dawn and to spend the time in making his soul. No words had passed between him and Sir John since his surrender. With wrists pinioned behind him, he had been hoisted aboard the English ship, and in the waist of her he had stood for a moment face to face with Lord Henry Goade. I amagine the florid countenance of the Queen's Lieutenant wearing a preternaturally grave expression, his eyes forbiddin rested upon the renegade. I know—from Lord Henry's own pen—that no word has passed between them during those brief moments before Sakr-elBahr was hurried away by his guards to be flung into those dark, cramped quarters reeking of tar and bilge.

For a long hour he lay where he had fallen, believing himself alone; and time and place would no doubt conduce to philosophical reflection upon his condition. I like to think that he found that when all was considered, he had little with which to reproach himself. If he had done evil, he had made ample amends. It can scarcely be pretended that he had betrayed those loyal Moslem followers of his, or, if it is, at least it must be added that he himself had paid the price of that betrayal.

Rosamund was safe, Lionel would meet the justuce due to him, and as for himself, being as good as dead already, he was worth little thought. He must have derived some measure of content from the reflection that he was spending his life to the very best advantage. Ruined it had been long since. True, but for his ill-starred expedition of vengeance he might long have continued to wage war as a corsair, might even have risen to the proud Moslem eminence of the Bashalik of Algiers and become a feudatory prince of the Grand Turk. But for one who was born a Christian gentleman that would have been an unworthy way to have ended his days. The present was the better course.

A faint rustle in the impenetrable blackness of his prison turned the current of his thoughts. A rat, he thought, and drew himself to a sitting attitude, and beat his slippered heels upon the ground to drive away the loathly creature. Instead, a voice challenged him out of the gloom.

"Who's there?"

It startled him for a moment, in his complete assurance that he had been alone.

"Who's there?" the voice repeated, querulously to add: "What black hell be this? Where am I?"

And now he recognized the voice for Jasper Leigh's, and marvelled how that latest of his recruits to the ranks of Mohammed should be sharing this prison with him.

"Faith," said he, "you're in the forecastle of the Silver Heron; though how you come here is more than I can answer."

"Who are ye?" the voice asked.

"I have been known in Barbary as Sakr-el-Bahr."

"Sir Oliver!"

"I suppose that is what they will call me now. It is as well perhaps that I am to be buried at sea, else it might plague these Christian gentlemen what legend to inscribe upon my headstone. But you—how come you hither? My bargain with Sir John was that none should be molested, and I can not think Sir John would be forsworn."

"As to that I know nothing since I did not even know where I was bestowed until ye informed me. I was knocked senseless in the fight, after I had put my bilbo through your comely brother. That is the sum of my knowledge."

Sir Oliver caught his breath.

"What do you say? You killed Lionel?"

"I believe so," was the cool answer. "At least I sent a couple of feet of steel through him—'twas in the press of the fight when first the English dropped aboard the galley; Master Lionel was in the van—the last place in which I should have looked to see him."

THE CURSE OF ABBREVIATIONS.

EDWARD W. BOK.

I asked Theodore Roosevelt once what one fundamental quality he believed was more glaringly lacking in the American character than any other, and which, of all other qualities, he would add if he had the power to do so.

Without a moment's hesitation, he answered: "A greater efficiency born of thoroughness. We don't know what thoroughness is."

I felt it was the Dutch ancestry in him that spoke, and, as a Dutchman by birth, it naturally struck a keenly responsive chord with me.

Each of us has our own notion as to the greatest deficiency in our modern life, and I doubt if any two men would instinctively name the same lack which is uppermost and really most deplorably vital in its absence in the American character.

But when you think it over calmly did not Theodore Roosevelt put his finger on the one dominant and vital curse, because that is what it really is, in our American life when he said "We don't know what thoroughness is"?

Now, the American's lack of thoroughness is not because he does not want to be thorough, but because thoroughness is not taught him as a child. On the contrary, the gospel of quantity and not quality is brought home to him the moment he reaches a point of understanding. He must learn so many words; he must do so many examples; he must be able to read so many lines. It is always quantity,—quantity from the start. He may learn these words and sums and lines as a parrot learns, so long as he learns them, and the boy who learns the largest number in the shortest given space of time is considered and told that he is the bright boy. The far more important fact of how well and thoroughly he has learned what he so glibly recites enters not into the question. As he progresses through boyhood, the same lack of thoroughness meets him everywhere, and sinks deep into his consciousness. He sees his father at the simple task of reading his newspaper; but he sees his father read not the newspaper, but the head-lines. The magazines, the boy finds, present everything in tabloid form; the most popular periodicals being those where the articles are shortest, and whose chief bid for public patronage is that they review, digest or epitomize the great happenings of the world. "We are a very busy people, he hears his father say, "we haven't time, you know, to read much. I like the writer who boils things down."

The boy sees his mother's housekeeping also all boiled down for her in predigested cereals, canned goods, and prepared foods. "All you have to do is to add milk and serve," says the advertisement. "Pour some hot water on our preparation, and there you are. "Put our food on the stove, heat it for five minutes and your meal is ready." Whether the food is really good, she does not know. She has been taught to believe in the integrity of advertisements. But what appeals to her most is that it saves time; it is a road to simplified housekeeping. No matter in which direction the boy looks, he sees a nation in a hurry, everybody is rushing to do a thing, not in the best way that it can be done, but in the quickest way. All are seeking short cuts to achievement. He sees automobiles madly speeding; people crushing and pushing into subway and street cars; long journeys annihilated on fliers; men speeding through the air and boasting of the minute and second they can cut from some previous record. So the boy naturally falls in with the rest. He speeds through school, rushes to college, races through his four years, and approaches the business of life with every fiber in his being attuned to haste.

When he gets into business he finds the gospel of quantity attuned to the nth degree. Every step of manufacture is gauged by the amount of a day's work and how far below or above it is compared with the quantity produced on the same day last year. If the "room" has produced more, the executive is praised: if the output is less by comparison, it is either received with silence, or he is asked why the production is falling behind. Rarely is the question asked: "Is the product better?" A man's efficiency is gauged and based on how much he can produce Never mind if our cloths can bear no comparison to English cloths; our looms produce so many yards to their lesser quantity. No matter if our automobiles cannot stand up on the road as long as those of foreign make; our boast is that we produce ten to their one. Naturally, the boys imbibes the spirit that everywhere envelops him—unless he thinks it out, and few do. But whee one does, invariably lie eises above his fellow-men. Quality has always "paid" in America wherever it has been tried. But it is not tried and maintained often enough. Quantity is an easier accomplishment, and so we go on madly producing quantity.

That is why in our education we are so deplorably lacking. The American wants to know, he wants to be intelligent, but he will not dig for it: he wil not go to the source of informationl "Why should I read that long-winded article in an 'encyclopædia,'" he asks, "when it is all here in this article which presents the essential facts?" But in the latter article it is not "all" there. He gets a smattering of the subject,—a smear, but that is all. The result is that as a nation we have an amazing quantity of general information, with an equal amazing amount of misinformation. The fundamental ignorance of the average American is staggering, as it must of necessity be where there is no desire to be thorough in the information acquired. We are keen to read a book we have heard about. We rush to get it: and then we hasten to read it and to get through with it, so that we can say we have read it. We are full of a desire to see a play that others are talking about. We rush home, jump into our clothes, speed through our dinner, bolt for the theater, go restlessly out between the acts, look at our watches to see how late it is getting to be, grab our hats, and we are out in the aisle before the curtain drops, rush home, jump into bed, impatient if we do not immediately go to sleep,—and we have gone through a day Next day or next week we go through exactly the same scramble to see another play or read another book,—and always a new play or a new book And this is our pace on the royal road to learning What is the result of it all? We acquire a certain facility, but it is superficial. Our knowledge does not go deep; its roots are close to the surface. We leave ourselves no time to think. It would seem sometimes as if thinking had gone out of fashion with conversation.

But the doer of things exclaims, "Consider what we are,—the greatest nation in the world." In what respect? Let him tell us He recites that:

We have the financial dominance of the world.

We have the commercial supremacy in bulk.

We have the tallest buildings.

We have the record for mass production.

We vie with the bird in the air and push the eagle out of its path with the aeroplane.

We dive under the water with the submarine and vie with the fish in speed and distance.

Space is as naught to us, we annihilate it with the telephone, the wireless and the radio.

We dig under the water and run trains below the bed of the river.

We tunnel under great buildings and millions ride like moles to the mart in the morning and back to their homes in the evenings. We pride ourselves on the fact that a man need not inhale a single breath of the oxygen of the air from door to door.

We speed over the rails sixty miles an hour and complain loudly if we are half an hour late in a journey which required a week for our forefathers.

We even obliterate the stars in that we write messages in the sky with each letter miles in length.

"Yes, son, marvelous," said a visitor from "Main Street" as he was shown all these wonders by his son in New York City, "marvelous what man does, isn't it? And yet," added the visitor, "he cannot make a worm!"

It is always difficult to preach to a man who has made a success, and so is argument difficult with a great nation of strength and power. But, after all, much depends on the interpretation of the word "great."

When we think of a great city we think of the number of population; not of the greatness of its people.

We pride ourselves that we are more interested in today than in yesterday.

"Yesterday," we jubilantly say, "ended last night." Which, according to the almanac, is true. But in our yesterdays lie our lessons. The present can only be rightly judged by the past. Experience does count for something. History is not "bunk," contrary to the maker of the Ford car, who, while he said it, forgot that he was making history himself, even to the extent of changing the American Sunday.

Man has done marvels, but in the doing of them his own undoing must be reckoned. We achieve always at a price; we specialize always at the expense of some loss. Man has created the mechanism of speed, but having created it, what is his actual gain? Has the span of life lengthened? After all, that is the end we all hope for and endeavor to attain: to live long. Has the machinery which man created slowed up his own pace? The frightful increase in heart-failure would not point to such a result. And certainly with the missing heart-beat, man can scarcely be happy. Has he earned for himself more repose, more quiet, more moments of rest? His life would not bear out such a gain. What, then, has he gained by the acceleration of his goings and comings? What profits it him now that he has gained the whole world by a financial, economic, and inventive dominance?

"But all this," says some one, "is national progress. Certainly you would not contend, would you, that we should stop this progress?" No, for the very simple reason that you cannot. But, I ask, do we honestly realize that all progress is really not progressive,—for ourselves, our mental poise, our serenity, and our contentment? We are breaking rapidly down every citadel of leisure. We regard leisure as something for the idler. We hail the man who rushes, and look askance at the man who believes in the truth of all the ages of "forward, but not too fast." The pressure under which a people work gives color to the national life, and certainly psychology teaches us that we cannot have ripeness of thought and mellowness of decision at a hair-trigger pace. Leisure is getting out of countenance in America, and in proportion as we permit this mistaken tendency our national thought will show the results. We must have leisure and repose in order to grow wise. It is the only soil out of which wisdom springs.

If we school ourselves to go somewhere in a hurry, we naturally have a place that we want to reach, a goal. And now that we are in such a hurry as a nation, where are we going? We are certainly all dressed up, all tuned up to go somewhere. Where have we to go? Where has our hurry led to? "To our dominance," is the answer, very well. Now, where? We have this dominance, let us concede. Now what? We have certainly been up and doing: we have been and are constantly in flux. In a ceaseless round, we travel. The East travels West; the West travels East. We pour throngs from one end of the continent to another. Even the American who never leaves home is constantly in transit: the city in which he lives having been made so large that the only way he can get from one part to another is to be in transit. We are eager; we are filled with exhilaration; we are engrossed; we are excited so that our nerves are at the bursting point,—even our voices are tense. We are athirst for further experiment and greater adventure. "More doing" becomes our watchword. We strive to make life what the cynic called it, "one damned thing after another." Moreover, we insist that each thing must be larger than what went before, and must follow close on its heels, lest we grow stale and ineffectual. Precedent? We are intolerant of it. Economy? We have a dislike for the word. Deliberation? "Old stuff," we call it: Now we must be catapulted through our days, never taking account at the end of a day, but only eager for the next. Tomorrow, tomorrow, is our cry

Suggest that we look over what we have done, and do that better; that we solidify what has been accomplished: that we make permanent what has been quickly and superficially created,—and we are told that such a method is going antiquated. "What we have done is good enough," or "it will do."

"Does it sell?" said a merchant to his son in a lesson in merchandising. "That's the only point there is: that is the acid test."

"But suppose it isn't well made, and it won't stand up?" asked the son.

"The buyer buys again, and that keeps up the market," was the advice.

"Shouldn't an article, however, be made the best it can be made?" persisted the son.

"So far as its cost will allow and there is a market for it. But the final test is 'Does it sell?' If it does, that ends it."

That does end it and has ended it in the case of many an American business man whose affairs have not gone according to his plans and who fails to understand why.

We have succeeded as a nation not because of our lack of thoroughness, but in spite of it. Here and there stand out evidences of how much farther we could go if the idea of quality nationally took first instead of second place with us. Naturally, the fundamental basis of engineering must be the most minute thoroughness and accuracy, but see the rank that American engineering has taken in the world. Wherever thoroughness has entered into the production of any article, it has opened for itself a market and maintained it. It is constantly argued in extenuation that as we grow older as a nation the lesson of thoroughness and its resultant efficiency will be borne more strongly upon us. But is it not time that we should begin to think of ourselves as a nation no longer in its infancy? America has outlived its period of swaddling clothes. It may not have reached its point of maturity, but it will reach that point with a far better reputation for solidity if, at this time of its history, it begins to think of how well instead of how fast a thing can be done.

I have been very successful in placing in the minds of a number of young people the kernel of thoroughness by the very simple method of teaching them the avoidance of all abbreviations in their letters, compositions or anything written by them. I have urged that each letter should be complete in and of itself, and that it should give out to the recipient the feeling that it had received careful thought and not, as many a letter now indicate, that it was "dashed off." For this reason, I have impressed upon them that there are no such states as "N. Y.," "Penna," "Mass.," "Md.," "Ill.," etc.; no such cities as "N. Y. City," "Kas. City," "Phila.," etc.; that they do not live on a "St." or "Ave."; that they do not live in the year "'24"; that there are no such months as "Jan.," "Feb." or "Dec."; that there is no such holiday as "Xmas"; that a professor is not a "prof."; a president not a "Pres't" and that they are not "Y'rs resp'y." In variably wherever I have gotten the lesson home, the young people, having had instilled into their minds the idea of thoroughness in what we call little things, have practiced thoroughness in their larger affairs. But there is no use of preaching this doctrine of thoroughness in writing to a son or daughter if the son sees abbreviations rampant on his father's business letterheads and practiced by him in his letters, or if the daughter sees her mother's letters riddled with similar abbreviations. We must practice ourselves what we preach to our children. The feeling will arise, particularly with the man of affairs, that a business house has no time for these "frills," forgetting that carelessness in correspondence is never a good advertisement for any business house and that one of the strongest commendations for a commercial house is the physical appearance and care shown in its correspondence. The letter emanating from a business house can be its surest advertisement of care and accuracy; but it can also be its surest revelation of haste and condemnation. Because an idea is simple we sometimes dismiss it as inconsequential; we forget what it signifies, and how great it can be in its potentiality. We flick a snowflake from our coat and yet, multiplied, that little atom can render helpless the most powerful engine conceived by the mind of man. We see a bird and we think of it as but an atom in the sky, overlooking the fact that a bird, multiplied, constitutes the most important economic factor in our lives and that without the birds the people would, in a space of five to seven years, starve to death and be effaced from the earth. So the seemingly small lesson of an avoidance of abbreviation may well be the harbinger of a system of thoroughness which would alter the entire fabric of life and make of the country within a generation a nation known for that quality of thoroughness which today it so sadly lacks.

The time for a greater national regard for thoroughness is here.

For it could so easily be, particularly in these days when all eyes are on us, that our best could be the world's best

OLD-TIMERS, EH? NOW, WHO WAS IT CALLED US THAT?

Down in Tampa, Fla., they're having their annual Old-timers' Reunion. But whoever in the world would say that Mrs. John Collins with her flapper make-up kit is an old-timer, even if she is 88?

And as for those two young fellows with white beards, they still seem to have a little steam behind the old wallop. M. Miley, on the left, is 76, and his opponent is B. C. West, 79.

KITCHEN BRINGS LADY HER LIVING

New York Woman Finds Great Demand for Her Home-Canned Goods.

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Mrs. Betsy Baker doesn't attribute her commercial success to her business ability, but rather to her lack of it.

"I know absolutely nothing about what is called the business world, and I never think of myself as belonging to it," she says. "But I do know all about a home and the old-fashioned arts of home-making."

So without leaving her home or neglecting her children, she carries on a unique business that brings her in a very satisfying income. She made 3,000 glasses of marmalade and jelly last year during the canning season, which she sold as fast as it was canned, and she has orders for many more this year.

She cans fruit and vegetables for busy women who don't have time or don't know how to do it for themselves.

She Fills Orders.

The woman who would like a nicely stocked preserve closet, but who works all day in an office, or has only a tiny kitchenette at her disposal, can simply decide what she would like canned, write her order to Mrs. Baker, and in due time it all comes to her done up in neat little jars.

"I started my canning-to-order business a few years ago to oblige a few friends," she explained. "They had eaten my canned fruits in my home and begged me to make up some for them.

"When my children were young, of course, I had no time for such a thing—for my family is always first with me—but as they grew up and I had more time on my hands than I knew what to do with, I began to fill such orders.

Now Big Business.

"And now it has grown into a big business. I take orders from all over the country. But I still use my own kitchen, and make everything with my own hands on my own stove. Because the value of my product is the fact that it is actually home-made.

"I take a great pleasure in doing this for others because I believe I am helping carry on the traditions of the old-fashioned housekeepers who never got the delicatessen habit and who took pride in a fine glass of jelly or preserves and a table groaning with home-cooked goodies.

"But I stock my own cellar first," she laughed. "I provide everything that my own family likes, first of all. I never want it said of me that I neglected my home for business—if what I do can be called business."

These are "Get There Days" Did You Get a Good Start This Morning?

If Not We Want You To Use Phospho-Cod Just Thirty Days and Get the Surprise of Your Life in the Improvement You Will Make.

These are the days of speed, the "Get There Days." Only a few centuries back it took months to cross the ocean—now it takes less than a week. Only a few years ago doctors were bleeding poor, starved bodies for almost every ailment flesh was heir to—fever patients were refused water—the sick and ailing were shut up in closed rooms with the windows sealed shut and all God-given air and sunlight carefully excluded. But thanks to modern science and a wise Creator, a few rays of intelligence are now filtering through, and while the knowledge of how to fight disease and death is but in its infancy, yet all intelligent medical men admit that prevention is by far the most effective weapon in the fight for better health, strength and physical perfection. A new Tonic Health Building Formula has been perfected which is accomplishing results that are making thousands glad. It has brought absolutely satisfactory results to many who were frail weaklings in search of health and strength who had spent years in trying first one thing then another. We have files full of letters and photographs showing the remarkable improvements of these people and telling of the satisfaction and help they have had from Phospho-Cod — this new Tonic Health Builder—and, best of all, it is not a secret or patent medicine as we freely give the formula to any one enquiring and publish it herewith and on every package. Phospho-Cod is the name we have given this formula and we make it from a Solution of Hypophosphites of Lime — Sodium — Potassium — Manganese — Quinine and Strychnia, together with Iron Peptonate, Blood Root, Wild Cherry, Glycerine and Rich Port Wine and a tasteless Extract of Cod Livers, which has no pleasant taste, grease or odor.

We Do Not Need to Tell the Well Informed Physician that this formula is remarkably efficient, for the ingredients speak for it and prove that it is the most effective Body Building, Blood Making and Nerve Vitalizing Tonic ever offered to run-down, ailing men and women. That is the reason we say that if you are not bubbling over with the joy of living we want you to use Phospho-Cod for thirty days and get the surprise of your life in the improvement you will make. It is our belief that with the good, rich, red blood and the powerful, steady, steely nerves others have reported from the use of this splendid tonic that we can rebuild your health as we have done theirs. — That we can build up your resistance to disease and all the numerous germs that attack the human body. — That you can become strong, vigorous and healthy as your Creator intended you should be. — That with increased health, strength and vigor you will become more successful and ambitious with a desire to enjoy life to its fullest. Maybe this doesn't appeal to you, and if that should be so, you have our apologies for having wasted your time in reading this ad. Also, we wouldn't want you to try our treatment, as we think you would not use it fairly, which would make it useless to you and harmful to us, because you could not recommend it. But if you are sincere and need help such as we have described, go to one of the dealers listed below and start Phospho-Cod today with our assurance and guarantee that it will do exactly as we claim, for what we claim, or you may return it and we will pay the dealer ourselves.

Many Have Crossed the Bridge of Sighs

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A colony of crooks has crossed the Bridge of Sighs—murderers, holdup men, gansters, thieves, burglars, wire-tappers, confidence men, bank robbers, bank clerks, bank presidents, doctors, lawyers; men and women who have preyed on the public in various guises, levied blackmail on the weaknesses and foibles of men or worked on their sympathies; bucket-shop, brokers by the bucketful. Some have crossed that brief span, the aerial connection between the Criminal Courts Building and the Tombs prison, with the last spark of hope dead in their bosoms, the courts done with them, the electric chair awaiting them. Others have gone buoyed up with the hope of a new trial, an appeal, a pardon; still others cheered by a light prison sentence, the thought of a few years up the river, and others heavily borne down with their convictions spelling the weight of long, weary years in exile—all of them with the brand on them of enemies of society, very few of them expecting that ever again will be open to them the door of honest endeavor.

When the Criminal Courts Building was constructed at Centre and Franklin streets, the old Tombs prison was still standing on the present site, bounded by Centre, Frankline, Leonard and Elm streets, the latter having been since changed to Lafayette, it was decided to put in a covered elevated archway, lighted with windows, across Franklin street to an entrance into the Tombs. It was the pathway for prisoners between prison and tribunal and set up in the name of humanity to keep the prying eyes of the curious from those charged with or convicted of crime. So many went back to the Tombs across the brief span to pay the penalty of wrongdoing, so many to pay the final penalty, that it became known as "The Bridge of Sighs," ever heavy with the sighs of the unfortunate.

The construction of the Criminal Courts Building was begun in 1890 and completed in 1893. It was first occupied in 1894, and in the thirty years intervening an army of criminals has crossed the Bridge of Sighs. One of the first to cross the bridge, convicted of murder in the first degree, was a woman. Her name was Marie Barberi, a comely Italian young woman, who had killed her lover. It seemed to the first jury that tried her just a case of plain murder, but as soon as the woman was convicted women took up the fight for her, invested her with the profoundest sympathy, which received plenty of publicity; first-class legal talent was engaged and Marie was acquitted.

No man ever grew more familiar with the span from court to prison and back than did Harry Thaw, who killed Stanford White on the roof of Madison Square Garden. Day after day and several times each day during his long trial he crossed and recrossed the bridge; and then when, after Dick Butler had kidnapped him across the border, he was sent back from Canada as an undesirable citizen, he again trod the familiar path twixt limbo and liberty.

Nan Patterson, the beautiful "Floradora" girl, accused of shooting Caesar Young in a cab, learned to count the steps across the bridge before she was freed from the charge of murder.

Albert T. Patrick, brilliant attorney, who cheated the electric chair after having stood within its shadow, seemed to have heard every sigh that was wafted over the bridge. The legal battle he fought for his life lasted six years, ending in a commutation of his sentence to death for murder in the first degree. His alleged victim was William Marsh Rice, a millionaire, of 500 Madison avenue, who was poisoned by his valet, Jones, who confessed that Patrick was the master mind. Patrick was Rice's attorney, and on the morning of the latter's death attempted to cash a sizable check drawn by the murdered man. Payment was withheld and Patrick and the valet were interrupted in an attempt to have the body cremated.

The murder occurred September 23 and Patrick was arrested a month later. His trial began January 20, 1902, and lasted three months, resulting in a verdict of murder in the first degree. Recorder Goff sentenced him to death April 7, 1902; but through reprieves, stays and appeals, motions and arguments, it was not until December 6, 1905, that he was resentenced, the execution being fixed for the week of January 22, 1906. He was saved by a commutation of life imprisonment and was ultimately pardoned.

Samuel J. Kennedy, a dentist of Staten Island, learned the meaning of the Bridge of Sighs by many tramps across it from cell to court and from courtroom to cell. He was convicted of murder in the first degree, of having enticed in October, 1898, a girl named Dolly Reynolds to a room in a Broadway hotel and killing her. The dentist got a new trial, at which the jury disagreed, and he was later discharged.

Roland B. Molineux remained long enough in the Tombs to become familiar with every sigh that went up from the bridge. He was convicted of murder in the first degree, of poisoning a woman through the medium of a patented medicine which he is alleged to have sent to her for a headache. Several years were consumed in his two trials and he was acquitted on the second, but afterward he was sent to a hospital for the insane and died there only a few years ago. At his death only little mention was made of the celebrated case, the trials of which had occupied pages of the newspapers.

One of the well-known legal luminaries who crossed the Bridge of Sighs many times, and finally for the last time to go to Sing Sing for four years, was "Colonel Bob" Ammon, lawyer and accomplice of 320 per cent, or "Get-Rich-Quick Miller," in the Franklin Syndicate, who showed the way along the dizzy path of rapid finance to Ponzi, the Italian "banker" of Boston, and who is said to have inspired the "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" stories of George Randolph Chester.

And another even better-known lawyer than "Colonel Bob" who crossed the bridge headed for Blackwell's Island Penitentiary was Abraham H. Hummel, of the famous theatrical firm of lawyers, How & Hummel. Howe took nothing but criminal cases, while "Abe" specialized in divorces, most of them having to do with people of the stage, they figuring in some proceedings of the case, and breach-of-promise suits. Abe's reputation, at best, was not to say savory, but justice caught up with him in December, 1905. In connection with the Dodge Morse case he was charged with conspiracy and subornation of perjury. It appeared that Dodge had been legally divorced and that Hummel had the decree set aside upon false affidavits, and then conspired to keep Dodge out of the State, fearing his confession which subsequently was made. The divorce lawyer was convicted on the conspiracy charge and sentenced to pay a fine of $500, the maximum penalty for the crime.

Hummel is in Paris breathing an atmosphere where sighs are probably unheard; many who passed out of the Criminal Courts to the Tombs are no more, but still there is, as there has been for the last thirty years, the daily procession across the Bridge of Sighs.

THE TURNOVER

It may be nice to wake up in the morn just after your slumber's been deep, but the niceness about it, as sure as you're born, is to wake—and then fall back to sleep.

A beautiful sight is the break of dawn and a thriller to all folks, it seems. But the thrill is much nicer if you can just yawn, and shortly fall back into dreams.

It may be the twitter of birds, understand, or the morning noise out on the street that wakes you, but honestly, isn't it grand to snuggle back under the sheet?

There's something that's fine in the early morn stretch and, though you may know you should rise, it's greater if you can just leisurely catch a little more rest for your eyes.

It's nice to get up, and its' nice to get out in the air when it's all done and said, but it's nicer to me, and I think you'll agree, if you can just turn over in bed.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

To Keep Your Locks Treat Scalp Rough

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 10.— If you want your locks to stay with you just treat 'em rough.

This was the prescription sprung before the fourth annual session of the National Hairdressers' Association here on Saturday by Dr, Rudolph Mertan, noted Boston specialist. He also brought hope to the baldheads with the announcement that where dome foliage has not been absent more than two years scalp exercises will bring it back.

"When hair starts to fall out you have to treat it just as if you were working in the garden," he said. "The dead hair must be cleared out like the weeds. Plucking will do it, and vigorous massage of the scalp with mineral-oil treatments will strengthen the erector muscles that control growth, stimulating the scalp, and a healthy crop of hair usually will result.

"There is no necessity of shaving the head after fevers or other diseases that start falling hair. Hair may lie dormant under the skin for from one to twenty-four months and still be revived into a luxuriant growth. The rougher you treat the hair the more vigorous the growth. As you yank the erector muscles resist and gradually become stronger through this exercise, and the hair gets the benefit.

"Bobbing the hair is a real boon to the girls. Shorter hair is combed several times a day. The short-tressed girl also is always tossing her hair back from her face. That's a sort of a massage. You'll notice the girls with bobbed heads are more conscious of their locks; that means more attention to the hair and a healthier condition.

"Hair is the most beautiful adornment of man or woman, yet it is the most neglected, and the bobbing style is a great start to correct this condition so far as women are concerned.

"With men it is different. This sheik fad that has become general among the flapper boys would be a great thing but for the fact that they use smelly vegetable oils to make the hair lie down or back. Vegetable oils become rancid within twenty-four hours, and the mineral brands are much better.

"But men are becoming more practical about their hair, at that. There are thousands of them who go hatless at every opportunity, and this is producing a better run of top dressing, because the hair gets the air and is relieved of the pressure caused by that bands."

Relatives and friends of soldiers who died in the World War and who have purchased tombstones and monuments to mark the last resting places of the hero dead will not be reimbursed for such expenditure by the Government. The Quartermaster Department will supply headstones for the unmarked graves of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines who served in any war, but does not in any case contribute toward an independent purchase.

Motor Facts

BY ISRAEL KLEIN

Looking backward over the record of last year in the motor industry, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce furnishes these facts:

World registration of motor vehicles in 18,023,584, with 88 per cent in the United States.

More than 3,000,000 persons were employed last year in the auto industry.

Thirty-five cities have reduced their motor fatalities.

Motor vehicles taxes in the United States in 1923 totaled $471,584,000.

More than 4,000,000 autos were produced in 1923.

More easily read license plates are suggested by Col. J. Scott Williams, one of Canada's war heroes, in the form of a rectangle higher than it is broad—about ten inches high by 8 inches broad.

Col. Williams would have a six-number plate, for instance, divided into two rows of three numbers each with the year between the rows and the state at the bottom. Every car would have a premanent number, with only the year changeable, and every state would have a permanent color.

Here's another "solution" for the traffic problem:

Restrict traffic in certain downtown districts during the rush hours to emergency vehicles and delivery cars!

It is the suggestion of Lieut. Frank Ervin, executive officer of traffic in the Portland (Ore.) police bureau.

And another idea, from an eastern source, is this:

Exclude from the congested area motor cars with even license numbers on one day, and on the next exclude the odd licensed cars;

European Grand Prix races at Lyons, France, next August, will develop some novelties in automobiling. One of these is the new Fiat 122 cubic inch engine, a two-stroke six-cylinder V-type motor, equipped with a supercnarger and developing 150 horsepower.

Superchargers are expected on other racers as well.

Improved production of gasoline has doubled the amount obtainable from crude oil. According to recent figures, gasoline is being sold to 12 times as many vehicles as in 1913, yet the production of crude oil has increased only three-fold. That is, six times as much gasoline is being produced.

And the gas of today is going much farther, with improvements in motors and carburetors and a better grade of fuel than has even been brought out.

WORN OUT MEN AND WOMEN SOON REGAIN STRENGTH

The nervous system is the vital force of your body; the force that gives energy to every organ and every muscle. So great is the power of the nerves that a tremendous shock, such as fear, may cause death.

A lesser nerve shock will pale the cheeks, make the knees tremble, cause the heart to beat wildly or alwe quickly regain lost strength.

To keep our vitality and strength we must nourish the nervous system. When we restore lost nerve power we quickly regain losto strength.

Nervous, exhausted men and women can soon regain their nerve force and as they rebuild their nerves they see the signs of returning vigor.

Wincarnis gives to the nerves the very elements they must have to be nourished back to energy. For fifty years this nerve restorative has reinvigorated those who were weak, thin pale and so discouraged that life seemed to hold no real happiness.

If you need more nerve power go to your druggist today and begin the safe Wincarnis treatment. A sixteen ounce bottle, which is a fourteen day Wincarnis treatment, is sold by all leading druggists for $1.50. Wincarnis is so effective that only three tablespoonsful a day need be taken.

Try Wincarnis and see the difference just a few days will bring.

FARM LIFE AND ITS PROBLEMS

EXPORTS GROW AS U. S. CROP OF CORN FAILS

Pork Will Be First Market Affected in Better Outlook Here.

LESS COMPETITION

Bacon Will Grow in Price as Soft Stocks From States Fall.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 10.—Most of the calculations which are made as to prospects of continuing high prices, or even higher prices, for wheat and other foods seem to be based on the reported wheat supplies of the world as now harvested or in prospect. A factor of tremendous importance to this country is often ignored, that is the deficit in the corn crop of the United States as compared with last year. Using rough figures, the United States is expected to harvest less corn by 500,000,000 bushels than in 1922 and in 1923. In each of those years the United States had approximately three billion bushels of corn. This y ar the harvest is estimated at not more than two and a half billion bushels of corn, and if anticipated frost damage to late crops occurs the value of the crop for feeding purpose will be reduced by more than the reduction in number of bushels would indicate. That difference in corn production means a direct reduction in the exportable surplus of food from the United States. The corn is not marketed as grain, but in the form of hogs. Translated into terms of pork, that reduction in the corn crop of the United States means a reduction of at least four billion pounds of pork.

Pork from the United States has been very cheap in Europe for the past year. Because of tremendous and unprecedented production of hogs due to the great corn crops of the past two years the United States sent abroad principally to Europe, during the past year a thousand million pounds of pork At the same time owing to industrial prosperity and low meat prices nearly two thousand million pounds of pork was forced into additional consumption in the United States, as part of the total consumption of eighteen billion pounds of meat in that country. The prospective reduction, now in sight, of pork production is more than the total of last years' exports of pork, and the additiona consumption of pork last year in the United States.

Better Outlook for Canada.

Doubtless Europe will continue to get some pork from the United States. Doubtless there will be certain economics in the use of food within the United States, due to higher prices, and various substitutions which shifts in food prices always call into play. But taking everything into consideration, the total exports of food from the United States are bound to be greatly lessened by the reduction in the corn crop.

We are frequently told that higher prices for wheat lead to substitution of courser grains in breadstuffs, and increasing use of vegetables. But it is equally true that the higher price of pork in prospect is likely to drive the European consumer from eating pork from the United States to a greater use of bread.

Lessened Competition.

There is another angle to the question of pork exports from the United States. It means lessened competition from the United States in the bacon markets of Great Britain, and improving prospects for Canadian bacon. In most of what is published about the British bacon market, Denmark is held up as the principal competitor of Canada, Danish bacon ranks first on the British market, except for some negligible quantities of Irish bacon. Canadian bacon comes second, selling for from five to ten shillings a hundredweight less than Danish bacon. Bacon from the United States ranks much lower, because of its fatness. Our attention is fixed on the Danish competition, because we want to compete on even terms in the restricted market for high-priced bacon But the United States sells more bacon in Great Brita'n than Denmark and Canada combined. The competition of the great quantities of bacon from the United States keeps down our price more than does the smaller quantity of high-priced Danish bacon. Remove that pressure from the United States and our prospects in the British market look much better.

Looked at from the broadest angle the maintenance of higher food prices on world markets is one of the principal things to which the West looks for a restoration of its prosperity. One of the biggest factors in the situation is the lessened production of corn in the United States.

FARMS IMPROVING.

The farmer's financial condition is improving, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Value of leading farm products has increased to 83 per cent. of their 1913 value, the highest in 47 months.

HAY STANDARDIZATION.

Federal laboratories are springing up throughout the country for the standardization of hay and broom-corn. Besides direct research, there will be co-operative work with many state agricultural experiment stations.

Mississippi and Texas lead in acreage of early commercial carrots.

California shipped 55,375 carloads of grapes in 1923.

Hay crop in the United States last year had an estimated farm value of $1,391,000,000.

Although Texas has the largest sheep ranches in the world and the greatest primary woolen market, the state has no woolen mills.

Water shortage and excessive heat this year has caused a decrease of 125,000,000 pounds in California's grape crop.

Annual per capita consumption of margarine in Denmark has increased from 33 pounds in 1913 to 42.5 pounds in 1923.

Menus For Church Suppers By Aunt Harriet

Please suggest menus and methods of serving at church suppers and other large gatherings.—The Marthas.

I do not advise elaborate decorations, for they take too much time and do not pay. Set the tables with the necessary china, glass and silver and, if you have got have ferns or flowers in the center of each table. Since food is so high in price, it is no longer placed on the table at such affairs, but is served from the kitchen, second helpings being granted if desired. This method does away with much waste.

If rolls are served, a roll and a pat of butter are placed on a small plate and served to each person. Apple sauce or cranberry jelly is served in mailll individual dishes. Pickles are placed on the plate with the rest of the food. A small piece of cheese is placed on the plate with a serving of apple pie. Many dishes can be prepared at home and either kept hot in a fireless cooker or reheated just before serving.

A nice chicken supper consists of brown fricassee of chicken, peas (fresh or canned, mashed potatoes, celery sweet pickles, rolls or waffles and maple syrup, lemon sponge pie, tea and coffee If you use a bread-mixer for mashing large quantities of potatoes you will find that the potatoes will be much lighter.

Another supper includes chicken noodle soup, stewed chicken, boiled rice or mashed potatoes, hot biscuits, molded vegetable salad, canned fruit, oatmea drop cookies, chocolate or coffee. Stew the chicken and use part of the broth for the soup. Remove meat from bones, separate the meat into small pieces, make a nice gravy with the remainder of the broth and add to the chicken. Split baking-powder biscuits, place on plates for serving, and cover with the chicken and gravy. Pass additional biscuits with this course.

For an oyster supper, serve oyster stew with crackers, then fried or scalloped oysters, creamed potatoes, cole-slaw rolls, lemon sponge pie, coffee and tea.

What kind of party can we give for a neighbor who is moving to another part?—Hostess.

A Parcel-Post Party could be made interesting. In your invitations, say that parcel-post mail for the East or West will be collected at a certain hour day and place. Ask the guests to bring packages in person, the packages to be properly wrapped, tied and addressed. These packages could contain joke gifts for the guest of honor, but one of the gifts might be a small address book in which each member of the club should write her name and post-office addres The guests could play games and, just before refreshments are served, the packages could be delivered to the person you wish to honor, who could then open them.

To seat guests at the refreshment table, use picture post-cards for the place-cards; or you could pack the refreshments in boxes of uniform size wrap and address as for parcel post and stamp with used postage stamps. Have some one carry the boxes to the front door, then knock or ring, and the hostess could answer and bring in the boxes announcing that a package for each guest had just come by parcel post.

Ask guests to adjourn to the dining-room where coffee should be served, with fruit gelatine or ice-cream for the last course. The dining-table could be decorated with a centerpiece made of crepe paper, to represent a mail-bag. In this bag, you could have letters addressed to the various guests, each "letter" to contain a suggestion as to a stunt she is to perform. These suggestions could also be used for a shower.

USE SULPHUR TO HEAL YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night.

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Mediterranean almond crop is estimated at from 30 to 75 per cent normal this year.

United States corn exports up to June 30 were less than a fourth those of the previous year.

Total grape crop of the United States is estimated at 1,859,000 tons.

Last year's world wheat crop was about 3,500,000,000 bushels, excluding Russia's supply.

FERTILIZER IN STRAW STACKS

Scientists Tell of Making Use of Canada's Waste.

TELL METHOD

WINNIPEG, Oct., 10.—(By Canadian Press).—In huge mounds of straw, dotting the stubble on either side of the railroad tracks for hundreds of miles, are tons of potential fertilizer. The big stacks, which in the ordinary course of events will be shortly burned as the easiest means of disposal, served as an object lesson for many members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, who recently passed through the prairie belt.

Great Britain has been operating for three years a successful process for making available the nutriment in wheat straw, and more farmers each year are capturing the humus stolen from the soil by the worthless straw, and are utilizing it for the production of more kernels of wheat. Why should the process not be introduced in Western Canada? Those who are familiar with it can see no possible objection.

The English technic was an offshoot of research of 15 years duration on soil micro-organisms at the Rothamsted Experimental station at Harpenden, England, and was carried out under the guidance of Sir John Russell, the director, who has completed a tour of the Western provinces with the British Association.

In discussing the straw problem, Sir John made the following observation: "The problem in the utilization of the straw is to decompose it so that the humus of the soil is freed again. The method which we were able to develop was a consequence of an investigation of the changes which take place in the decomposition of the straw in farmyard manure heap. As nearly as we can tell by chemical analysis, the artificial process duplicates the natural decay of the manure pile, and the product cannot be distinguished from the original humus of the soil.

Farmers have known for some time that raw straw is worse than useless as a fertilizer, Sir John pointed out. The Rothamsted workers placed this observation on a quantitative basis, however, and they found that crops were actually diminished when untreated straw was ploughed into the ground. "This is because the soil organisms decompose the straw, but in order to accomplish the breakdown, they absorb plant food, thereby robbing the grain of some of its nourishment," the scientist explained. "The bacteria absorb nitrates in particular. Appreciation of this fact suggested a solution of the difficulty. The microbes are fed their nitrogen separately, they break up the straw, freeing the original humus, and this can be put back into the ground."

The procedure adopted consists in building stacks by mixing with each ton of straw a few pounds of sulphate of ammonia, relatively inexpensive, and calcium carbonate, cheaply secured as powdered limestone, marble or chalk. The ammonia supplies the nitrogen factor, and the carbonate prevents the mixture from becoming so acid that the bacteria will not work.

"In from two to three weeks, with the English climate, we find that the straw has returned to humus," Sir John Russell, stated. "No inoculation is necessary. There are enough germs in the dirt mixed with the straw to start the process off. When the resultant was obtained practically the equivalent of the yield with barnyard manure as the added food. Similar results are obtained in using the product to replenish the humus of the soil in between successive crops of wheat. Nurserymen have been using the decomposed straw for some time with satisfactory results," Sir John said. Each year an increasing proportion of English farmers were taking advantage of the discovery. Thousands of tons of straw were being utilized every year.

"Burning is a wasteful way of disposing of straw," Sir John continued. "Other Dominions are inquiring into the process and I can see no reason why it should not be tested here. Sufficient time elapses between the dispatch of the harvest and the coming of cold weather unfavorable to the growth of the organisms, to permit the fermentation of the straw."

Burning of straw stacks is distinctly harmful to the soil in view of the fact that it destroys the humus in the surrounding soil, it was pointed out by Dr. H. E. Howe Washington, D.C., chemist, who preformed some of the first experiments on the use of straw for paper manufacture. A field exists for wheat straw in the paper industry, in Dr. Howe's opinion. The material has been studied sufficiently to make the mixture with newsprint practicable, he said. "Perhaps straw could be briquetted and used for fuel," he further suggested.

Those farmers moving from Canadian National points in the south to Canadian Pacific Railway points in the north are also asked to pay one-third of the freight charges to the junction.

A large number of farmers in the dry areas of the south took advantage during the harvest season of the arrangements made by the provincial department to provide labor for them in the harvest fields.

GRAIN CO-OP. IS WRONG DECLARES FRANK L. CAREY

President of Chicago Board of Trade Slaps New Movement.

FAVORS EXCHANGE

Co-operative Will Not Do Away With Canadian Competition.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—In face of continued development of the co-operative idea among farmers, and following upon the recent organization of a nation-wide co-operative grain exchange, comes a direct slap against this form of marketing administered by none more qualified than Frank L. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade.

His attack upon farmers' co-operatives, especially in grain marketing, accompanies a general defense and laudation of the grain exchange, as represented by the Chicago Board of trade.

"Grain farmers have been misled," says Carey. "They have been made to believe that their problems are the same as those of the tobacco grower, the fruit grower and dairy farmer. Nothing could be further from the fact than to tell him that his marketing system is no better than that with which the fruit grower or the tobacco grower struggled."

The grain exchange, he explains, has been credited by high authority as being the most economical distributor of sample foodstuffs in the world.

Federal Control.

"Today the grain exchange functions under government supervision," he adds. "Under existing laws the slightest trade infraction comes at once to the attention of the government. In no other industry are producer, distributor and consumer afforded greater protection."

Directing them practically at the American Farm Bureau Federation, which organized the American Co-operative Grain Marketing Company, Carey propounds these questions:

"To market the farmers' grain as economically as it is now marketed, would they not be compelled to set up a vast, extensive, marketing system similar to, and alongside of, the present system?

"Would they not have to engage just as many men to do their work?

Ready to Compete?

"Can they reduce the cost to a point below that which now exists and which is lower than obtains in the marketing of any other staple foodstuffs?

"Will not the crops of other surplus wheat-producing countries retain the same importance as they do now?

"How will this mysterious co-operative system differ from the machinery that now functions?"

And, he concludes:

"The grain exchange is here to stay. It is a guarantee of co-operative marketing. It assures the farmer a ready market for his grain, based not on promises but on the law of supply and demand.

"On the rocks of financial ruin may be found the wreckage of innumerable co-operative ventures."

Sixty-five per cent of the inhabitants of Texas still live on farms.

Foot-and-mouth outbreak this year cost United States $5,000,000.

People ate 14.6 dozens of eggs each in 1920 and 18.6 dozens each in 1923.

Egg production has increased one-third in the three years from 1920 to 1923.

At the beginning of this year there were 474,000,000 chickens on American farms.

The egg industry has been growing in the past four years on an average of 8.6 per cent annually.

When the weather begins to get warm in the spring the ventilators should be cleared out down to the first layer of straw, and the outside layer of earth removed when it has thawed through. With the pit in this condition the roots will keep until about the time that grain should be seeded. Later than this it is not advisable to keep them in a pit. The cost of pitting roots or potatoes in this manner exclusive of hauling is approximately 55 cents per ton.

WAITING FOR THE PRINCE

The E-P Ranch, near High River, Alberta, was all slicked up for the arrival of its owner, the Prince of Wales. But there was only one day of public fussing when the young prince arrived. That was on October 1, when the Alberta Shorthorn Breeders' Association held its annual picnic on the ranch.

Shorthorn breeders were invited, although the public generally was admitted. After the picnic at noon, there was a sale of Shorthorn bulls and heifers from the E-P and Earl of Minto herds.

Prof. W. L. Carlyle, who manages the Prince's ranch, is also president of the Alberta Shorthorn Breeders' Association.

BUSY PLOUGHS AT BAILIEBORO

Soil is Being Turned Over Quickly as Rain Soaks Earth.

FALL WHEAT UP

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 10 — The recent rains have come at a very opportune time to benefit the farmers. Last week's rainfall has been the first since the spring of the year that has actually soaked the ground. Although there has been considerable on and off during the entire summer, still there has not been sufficient until last week to properly soak the land, and make it possible to plough the heavy sticky clay land.

The principal movement with the farmers at the present time is the fall ploughing. Mostly all of the farmers in this district are now busily engaged with their ploughing, and anyone travelling the country roads will have no trouble seeing the busy farmers following their ploughs from almost daylight in the morning until dusk in the evening, and if the weather continues favorable during the next week scores of acres of the black earth will be ploughed throughout South Monaghan.

Almost all of fall wheat throughout this district is now showing a beautiful green color above the earth. It is thought that the wheat that was sowed during August, will be almost too big to stand the winter. Some farmers say that it is a much better plan to have fall wheat only just sprouted above the ground, than it is to have it with too rank a top.

The buyers are offering one dollar and eighteen cents for wheat at the barns, and are drawing it away in trucks.

WHEAT GOOD AT KEENE

Ploughing Nearly All Done—Potatoes Give Good Yield.

KEENE, October 10.—Nearly all plowing in this section is done and seeding is well under way. In a number of places the wheat is making a fine showing. Potatoes are being dug and are of a splendid quality and a big yield. Prices are ranging from 90 cents to $1.00 per bag.

Butter, creamery, 40 cents per pound; dairy, 33 cents per pound; eggs, 30 cents per dozen; chickens, 4 pounds and over 15c per pound; old hens, 14 cents per pound.

A baseball player was wrangling with his manager about terms. The player had refused to sign a contract for the amount offered by the manager and the latter somewhat peeved, asked:

"Well, tell me, on what basis will you play?"

"First, second, or third," replied the player.

This year's hay crop in Europe and America is expected to be as good as last year's.

Now Is Time To Cull Ewes

Early fall is the best time to sort out and sell breeding ewes that fall below standard.

Disposing of the bad ewes and mating the others to good rams will rapidly improve the flock.

Conformation is the most important point to consider in culling, for two-thirds of the ewes' annual return is from the lamb she produces. Blockiness, level rump, a well-filled leg of mutton, well sprung ribs and a wide muzzle are the points to be sought in a desirable conformation. If a ewe shows a spoiled udder or broken mouth, she should be sold.

Her wool producing ability depends on long fiber and lots of it to the square inch.

PURE BREDS ARE EASILY GRADED

United States Breeder Tells Of Difficulties In His Country.

BY G. M. ROMMEL.

Every farmer who keeps livestock should use purebred sires. How familiar that sounds! If you and I had a dollar apiece for each time that statement h been made during the past 25 years, we could spend our winters in California or Florida or Bermuda, our summers where the fishing is good and only drop in at the old farm once in a while to collect the rent.

You know how it works. Stop using a grade or scrub sire, put some money—not too much—into a purebred bull, say, and the first crop of calves come al nice and uniform—lovely roans, or white-faced reds, or polled, or black-and-white, or fawn-colored and they are one-half purebred. They look so much like their sire that you feel that you have your money's worth already—and you have.

Getting Rid of Bad Blood.

Then you buy another bull of the same breed or swap with a neighbor, and you get a surprise, for some of the hereditary elements which you covered up with the first cross have come out again where you can see them again and you do not like the looks of them. But you stick to it and say, "I am going to put those ugly thing out of sight for keeps" Your heifers are 3-4 purebred now and again you get a new bull to breed them to or you take them to a neighbor's bull, same breed all the time, and lo and behold!—these third-cross calves are nearly all alike; there may be one or two that show the old bad hereditary elements that you do not like, and you get rid of them, keeping only those that are up to your standard. The heifers from this cross are 7-8 purebred and those from the next cross are 15-16, and from the next 31-32, from the next 63-64, the next 127-128 and so on. With each succeeding generation those hidden undesirable hereditary elements show themselves less frequently, because you have been throwing them out in every crop of calves from the third cross upwards and each bull that you have been using has been a little better than the one before, and you yourself are becoming a more skilful breeder all the tim

Cold June weather retarded breeding in the mountain states. And lack of sufficient feeding has been another cause of loss.

CATTLE PLAGUE UNDER CONTROL

Outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease is Conquered.

WAS BIG BATTLE

WASHINGTON, October 10 — (United Press)—The livestock industry has little further to fear from the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in California, according to the Department of Agriculture.

The only place where the infection is still suspected is in the Stanislaus National Forest in Tuolumne Country, California. No new cases have been discovered or reported since August 16 and in that case only two animals in a herd of 80 were affected. Officials are hopeful that the prompt slaughter and deep burial of the entire herd destroyed the virus of foot-and-mouth disease before it could spread.

Twelve large herds which were given a thorough inspection on leaving the forest recently, showed no symptoms of the disease. As an additional precaution those herds and all others which are allowed to leave that area will be inspected frequently for several months.

Another precaution to be taken on the recommendation of the Bureau of Animal Industry will be the closing of the Stanislaus Forest by the Forest Service, to all livestock during 1925. This will inconvenience a few neighboring ranchmen, but the Forest Service and the Department of Agriculture believe this action to be necessary and in the interests of public safety. The value of the grazing in the area is small compared with the cost of supressing another possible outbreak. Department officials believe the infection, though able to live for several months under favorable conditions, has not been known to exist in the absence of living carriers for more than a year.

"Throughout the rest of California, the disease has apparently been suppressed," the Department reports, "and with every week that passes without a recurrence the winning of the strenuous fight against the plague is more hopeful."

MOVE FROM DRY AREA

Hundred Families Leave Drought-Stricken Southern Alberta.

EDMONTON, Oct. 10. —(Canadian Press).—Through the joint arrangement between the Dominion and provincial governments and the railways, about 100 families have been moved from the dry areas in the south-eastern part of Alberta to new locations in the foothill country and to districts in the northern part of the province.

Arrangements have now been whereby farmers living along the Canadian Pacific railway lines in the south may move to points on the Canadian Pacific railway by paying one-third of their freight bill to Calgary, the transfer point.

PLOUGHING LATE AT COBOURG SAY MANY FARMERS

Late Grain and Root Harvests Held Back Fall Work.

GROUND IS GOOD

Buckwheat Gave Record Yield on Large Acreage Sown.

COBOURG, Oct. 10. — Farmers state that the progress in doing the fall ploughing is about two weeks behind what it has been other seasons. With a late harvest and the root crop requiring attention, much later than usual, it has not been possible to get at the ploughing as early as other years. However, the work has not been held up because the ground was hard and dry as has been the case some seasons, but rather the reverse.

Market Prices.

There is not much change of market prices here from week to week. 40c. is asked for butter and eggs are selling from 35c. to 38c. Potatoes are $1.00 a bag and 20c. a peck. Tomatoes sell from 75c. to $1.00 a bushel, and 25c. to 35c. for an eleven quart basket. Pears are from 35c. to 50c. a large basket and plums from 60c. up. Hogs are selling from $9.25 to $9.75 live weight. Chickens are 25c. to 30c. a pound and ducks from 90c. to $1.00 each. All kinds of dairy and garden produce are very plentiful upon the market, eggs alone showing a decrease in the quantity offered, accompanied by a little stiffening of prices.

Buckwheat is a record crop in this section of the country this year, and on account of the late spring a larger acreage than usual was sown. The quality is good also.

Ship Pure Breds.

A shipment of pure-bred Holstein cattle, of excellent type, from the herds of M. Drumm, K. Haig and Bertram Hoskin was made from Grafton a few days ago, to make up government herds at Kingston and Orillia. These men are all well known Haldimand township breeders.

Norman E. Trimper

THIS MAN TELLS YOU HOW TO KEEP FIT!

Bear River, N.S.—"My back was so bad I could hardly work. I was always tired out and had no ambition; was nervous and dizzy, and everything seemed to worry me. I also had terrible pains in my right side. I felt badly for about eighteen months, and could not do my work as is should have been done. I tried several doctors, and also bought about $25.00 worth of put up medicines, but I found no relief until I took Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Doctor Pierce's Anuric (anti-uric-acid) Tablets. I have taken two bottles of the Discovery and four of the Anuric Tablets, and can say that I feel as well as I have felt for the last ten years. I advise any sufferer to give Dr. Pierce's remedies a fair trial. I cannot recommend them too highly for what they have done for me and shall be pleased to answer any one who cares to write me."—Norman E. Trimper, R.R. 1.

FIRST 100 YEARS OF METHODISM

Barbara Heck Was Founder Of Religion In Canada.

In view of the celebrations now proceeding in connection with the first hundred years of organized Methodist missions in Canada the following article from the Hamilton Spectator concerning one of the founders of Methodism in this country is of interest:

Interwoven into the history of this continent are bright threads of religion, spun by the noble souls who came to America to carry the message of the Gospel, and embroidered into a beautiful tapestry by the untiring hands of those brave saints whom we lovingly refer to as "pioneers." Canada and the United States each have, in the remarkable story of their evolution from savagery to modern civilization, many figures whose names will ever stand apart as national heroes. Among these there is one name that belongs to both, and which each may equally revere, a name which Christians everywhere should delight to honor. It is Barbara Heck—the woman who founded Methodism on this continent; in memory of whom there stands on the Prescott road, overlooking the St. Lawrence, a monument that is as firm and enduring as was the religious zeal of that noble woman whose name and portrait are engraved thereon.

Wherever the banner of the cross has been planted there has evolved a new era that invariably carried with it blessings innumerable. Frequently the name of those to whom Christians owe the most are lost, for it is a part of the religion of Christianity that self shall be submerged in the greater glory of the Gospel of He who gave Himself. Happily, however, the history of the spread of Christianity does contain for our guidance and as examples of the power of the Gospel, names that are an inspiration and an impetus to those who follow to take up the great work and keep alive the glorious traditions of the saints and martyrs who, in bygone ages, laid the foundations upon which we build our civilization and temples of worship. To this great host belongs Barbara Heck. She it was who, with her husband, Paul Heck, came as a young woman from Ballinigarry, Limerick, Ireland, in 1760, and [illegible] years after—assisted by Philip Embury—founded the first Methodist congregation in New York city. Meetings, records show, were at first held in Embury's house, but later, through the efforts of Barbara Heck the John street Methodist church was built.

Barbara Heck was one of those who, before leaving Great Britain for this new country, had been converted by the preaching of Wesley. She was as firm in her patriotic zeal as in her religion, and with other United Empire Loyalists moved to Canada. Shortly after her arrival in this country she founded the first Methodist church in the Dominion, the old Hay Bay Church. But she could not be buried there, for at the time of her death Methodism continued to be under the ban and so the grave is in the cemetery of an English Church. By the "Little Blue church," near Augusta, in the district where she labored, Barbara [illegible] is buried, and today a grey granite stone marks her grave. It is appropriately placed upon British soil in full view of and overlooking the republic of the south. At the top of the stone there is chiselled a facsimile of the Holy Bible; beneath, engraved in bronze, is a likeness of her in whose memory the monument stands. The inscription is significant and reads as follow: "Barbara Heck, born 1734, died August 17, 1804. Barbara Heck put her brave soul up against the rugged possibilities of the future, and, under God, brought into existance American and Canadian Methodism, and between these her memory will ever form a most hallowed link. In memory of one who laid foundations other have built upon."

During the tourist season thousands of people stop at the Little Blue church, others passing along that Ottawa road and the great St. Lawrence get only a glimpse of it. It is one of the hallowed spots of continental history, which brings a realization of how great are the rewards of faith. The faith of Barbara Heck established Methodism on this continent, and in so doing brought millions to a knowledge of the love of Jesus Christ—a glorious record of a saintly and zealous woman.

FAMILY MENUS

Breakfast— Baked apples, cooked wheat cereal, thin cream, creamed codfish on toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Corn pudding, creamed celery, whole wheat bread and butter, jelly, tea, milk.

Dinner—Baked white fish, scalloped potatoes, mashed turnips, romaine salad, whole wheat rolls, steamed date pudding, milk, coffee.

With the exception of the romaine salad there is nothing on these menus a child of four cannot eat. He should not be allowed a large portion of the dinner pudding but as this is a simple, easily digested dessert it can't hurt him.

Corn Pudding.

Four or five ears of sweet corn, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 cup milk, 2 eggs.

Grate corn or cut lengthwise through the center of each row of kernels, then cut a thin slice from tops of kernels and scrape out milk with blunt edge of knife. Beat whites and yolks of eggs separately. Beat yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add corn, flour, sugar, salt, milk and pepper and mix well. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry on a platter with a wire whisk. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake half an hour in a moderate oven. Serve at once or the souffle will fall.

INDIANS

Indians will vote in the presidential elections this year for the first time, under a new law. There are about 135,000 of them, or half as many as peopled this continent when the white man came with whisky, bullet and bright glass beads.

In a close election those 135,000 Indians might come very near to swaying the result. The speakers will soon be lauding the noble Red Man, on whose stolen domain we now live.

STUDY OF LATIN DECLARED TO BE FIRST AID TO THE POOR SPELLER

Classical League Declares Also That of 25,000 Language Errors 73 Per Cent. Were of Such Nature as to Be Remediable Through Study of Latin.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 10.—Study of Latin is first aid to the poor speller, according to the sixth instalment of a report on the inquiry undertaken by the Classical League into the teaching of the classics, made public to-day by Dean West, of the Graduate School of Princeton University.

"The universal value of ability to spell English words, of Latin derivation is unquestioned, says the report.

"The Lawler study, based on an analysis of 982,800 spellings made by seventh, eighth and ninth grade pupils, shows that of the 2,977 different words in the list chosen, 49 per cent. are of Latin origin, and that approximately 70 per cent. of the misspellings occurring two or three times in these Latin-derived words are remediable through the study of Latin."

The following are found to be the important objectives in the teaching of secondary school Latin:

Increased ability to read and understand Latin.

Increased understanding of those elements in English which are related to Latin.

Increased ability to read, speak and write English.

Increased ability to learn other foreign languages.

Development of correct mental habits.

Development of an historical and cultural background.

Development of right attitudes toward social situations.

Development of literary appreciation.

Improvement in the literary quality of the pupil's written English.

The report gives details of the questions and tests which enabled the investigators to settle upon the foregoing as the objectives which would underlie the planning of Latin courses. Some of the observations of the committee are as follows:

"The Walker study, in an examination of the reading material contained in leading newspapers and popular magazines, found 997 different Latin words, exclusive of 499 Latin words naturalized as English, with a total number of occurrences amounting to 4513.

"Thirty-eight different Latin abbreviations were found, some of which have been naturalized as English, with a total number of occurrences amounting to 11,245.

"The Thorndike-Grinstead study, based upon a count of more than 7,000,000 running words, shows that 52 per cent. of the 17,303 English words most commonly occurring in the reading material examined are of Latin origin.

The Charters-Ullman study of 22 per cent. of the errors made were due to failure to understand or to apply syntactical principles common to Latin and English, and these errors are of such a nature that an additional 73 per cent. of that they are remediable through the study of Latin.

POISE STARTS IN THE MIND

BY EVANGELINE WEED

Physical poise is an important quality of personality. To have poise is to have charm in manner, pleasing speaking voice, graceful attitudes of body, to walk properly, to sit properly. To have poise is to have confidence in speech, to have a conversational store of current subjects. But the first impression one has of another often is through the eye, so that physical poise is duly valuable to your personality.

1. What is the background of poise? Self-confidence. Poise, once you have it, inspires confidence in yourself, and yet to have poise you must have self-confidence. The two go hand in hand.

2. Where does poise start? In the mind first, of course, but physically it starts in the chest! Let your chest lead you. Did you ever see a man with a sunken chest who had physical grace, or even self-confidence? A sunken chest distinctly indicates an inferiority complex, a negative state of mind. Strong minds do not permit sunken chests.

3. How does one acquire physical poise? Hold up your head, and your chest. You will sit erect, walk erect and you will have an upright attitude that has its immediate reaction on your mental state.

If your head is erect, your chest out, your walk will never be a slouchy walk, nor will it be too soldierly; the weight of your body will be carierd forward on the ball of the foot, while the other foot is ready to swing forward; you will sit gracefully; you'll not flop into your chair, nor assume a lazy poise. An alert sitter is an alert listener. A good listener commands respect.

Once you are convinced that walking and sitting and all the other ordinary gestures of life are concerned in your personality it will be greatly improved.

NINE TO ONE LABOR WILL LOSE WAGERED ON BRITISH ELECTION

Clear Majority Over All Parties Required To Win Lone Chance.

LEADERS BUSY.

Conservatives Break First Into Strenuous Battle—Short Campaign.

LONDON, October 10 (United Press). — Insurance companies are reported as accepting odds of nine to one against the Labour Party winning a clear majority over all other Parties at the forthcoming elections.

It is understood that a substantial amount of business is being transacted on that basis, the terms involving a total loss on risks insured if the Labourites gain such a victory.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Correspondent.)

LONLON, October 10. — Facing the shortest general election campaign on record, and the shortest permissible under the law, party headquarters to-day were the scenes of whirlwind activity, none of them having closed their doors throughout the night.

Premier MacDonald and his Labour Cabinet, whose defeat in the Commons over a minor domestic affair may bring to a close Britain's first Labour regime after only nine months in office, continued drafting the Party manifesto for the election on 29th October.

Indications of the extent of the Labour campaign were given in the announcement that a candidate would oppose Lloyd-George in Carnarvon.

The Labourites, who have not yet chosen their nominee to contest the seat with the former Premier, have hitherto never fought Lloyd-George in his own district.

King George's proclamation issued dissolving Parliament and calling a general election, ordered the new Parliament to assemble on 18th November.

Conservatives Off First.

Campaign plans of the political leaders are now being made.

Ex-Premier Lloyd-George makes a tour of Scotland next week.

Arthur Henderson, Home Secretary, opens the Government's campaign at Burnley to-morrow.

Premier MacDonald speaks at Glasgow on Monday, and afterwards will tour the northern industrial centres.

The Conservatives made arrangements some time ago for a big autumn campaign, and several of their big guns opened fire last night.

The first big Metropolitan meeting of the Liberal campaign will be held in Queen's Hall next Tuesday, when the Liberal programme will be expounded by the Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, Right Hon. David Lloyd-George, and Sir John Simon.

Meantime, the Conservative ball was set rolling last night in the country by the Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain, Right Hon. Winston Churchill, and Sir W. Joynson-Hicks.

Bitterest in Years.

With Parliament dissolved, the utterances of politicians and the comments of the press indicate that the coming election on October 29 is likely to be one of the bitterest in recent years.

Sydney Webb, president of the Board of Trade, is quoted as saying that the campaign will be an especially "dirty one," and the angry tone already manifest in many declarations seems to justify the prediction.

One sign of the eagerness of Liberals and Conservatives to prevent another Laborite Government is the initiation of negotiations between the two older parties with a view to minimizing the number of three-cornered contests. Failure to arrange any such Liberal-Conservative agreement in the last election led to the return of a large number of Laborites by minority votes.

SAUCY HEADGEAR

A brimless hat that almost covers the eyes themselves is of black velvet with a wreath of flat gold roses.

ZR-3 READY FOR FLIGHT.

If Weather Conditions Are Favorable It Will Take Off To-morrow.

FREDERICKSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 10.—(United Press). — If the weather conditions are favorable, the ZR-3 will take off for the United States to-morrow morning, a director of the Zeppelin works told the United Press to-day.

The route we will follow has not yet been decided on, and will not be until late to-night, when the final weather reports are in. There are a number of courses that can be taken, and naturally we will pick the one promising most favorable flying conditions."

TOMBSTONE CORNER TAKES LIGHTER HUE

Charlotte and George Streets Brightened By Sweetmeats Store.

The corner that was identified for so many years with tombstones has at last turned to lighter things. The sweetmeats of life are finding a place for disposal where formerly everything had a tendency to remind one of a future existence. On the south-west corner of George and Charlotte Streets, Hawley's "Old Home" candies and light refreshments will be dispensed hereafter. The shop will open on Saturday of this week. The interior has been finished in a style that suggests a big pink and white candy. The woodwork is pure ivory white, and the panelled walls have intersections of beaverboarding painted in flat tones of pale rose. Above is a deep cream frieze, its sections centred with ovals showing pretty little landscapes, painted on the beaverboard. In the rear section of the store, where a small parlor will be maintained for the sale of pie, ice cream, coffee and tea, the same upper ovals are painted with large bunches of purple grapes. The entire work of the interior, novel and effective, is the work of Messrs. Harris and Boddy.

Pure white showcases, a long plate glass case directly in front of the Charlotte Street window, and a couple of ingenious little window cases, specially constructed for the front windows, are interesting items in the furbishing of the interior.

LARGE BARN BURNED.

Fenelon Township Barn and Crop Destroyed By Fire Yesterday.

LINDSAY, Oct. 10.—A serious fire occurred on Wednesday during threshing operations at Long Point, Fenelon Township, when the large modern barn on the farm of R. E. McNeish, together with a large part of the season's crops, was destroyed. The fire, which was started at noon hour by sparks from the engine, spread with considerable rapidity. The horses and stock were rescued. There was insurance on the barn, but it will not nearly cover the loss.

Government Department Will Foil Earthquakes

ROME, Oct. 10. — (United Press).—The Ministry of Public Works has organized a new department to superintend earthquake proof building construction, in the earthquake zones.

RUFFLED BLOOMERS

GAMBLING.

Almost 164 million shares of stock changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange between the first of the year and September 1. That's at the rate of over 240 million shares a year, and a good many observers are alarmed at the "gambling craze."

If they will consult old newspaper files, they will find that stock trading was on even a bigger scale in the years 1905 and 1906, and even as far back as 1901. Since the dollar in those years bought twice as much as now, there really was more than twice as much speculation as in 1924.

FRANC CONTINUES SLUMP.

Herriot's Announcement, Denying Inflation, Fails To Stem Fall.

PARIS, Oct. 10. — (United Press.)—In spite of Premier Herriot's announcement that the French government does not intend to resort to a policy of inflation, the franc continued on its slump, reaching 19.45 to the dollar to-day.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

Crystal beads hold up with points of light the first of two circular flounces on a frock of pale water-green Georgette made with a long body and worn with a scarf.

THE shades of pink from flesh to rose, raspberry and the more purplish cyclamen, fragile shades of green, such as leaf, lettuce and water, touched with silver or crystals, blue from the intense periwinkle to the softer madonna, white, silver and an occasional yellow are the colors young girls choose for their dancing frocks. Many of the new French models are made with a perceptible widening toward the hem in a circular skirt, in circular flounces or in godet flares. The effect of the long narrow body and the slightly wider lower part looks new and is very smart.

LECTURE ON AUTOMATIC STATIONS OPENS ENGINEERS' WINTER SEASON

D. V. Canning, B.Sc., of C.G.E., Gives a Comprehensive Survey of Rapidly Developing Field In Electrical Engineering.

ECONOMY IN OPERATING SMALL PLANTS

Equipment Performs All Operations Commonly Carried Out By Attendant—Of Great Service To Isolated Factories and Communities

D. V. Canning, E.I.C., B.Sc., opened the season for the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada last night with a discussion of the application of Automatic Electric Stations. The lecture, illustrated by three reels of motion pictures, was well attended by members of the Institute and the general public.

Mr. Canning, a graduate of McGill University and a Member of Switchboard Engineering Canadian General Electric Company, brought to his subject the knowledge gleaned in a long experience and close study. Automatic control of electric machinery has become of primary importance in the electrical engineering world, but in the short scope of a single lecture Mr. Canning expressed his inability to dwell on the detailed technicalities of the various types of stations. A brief resume of the development, and a description of the operation of one or two types of automatic station equipment, served to show the scope of the subject.

The necessity, which becomes intensified as years go by, for perfection of more economical methods of generating and distributing electric power, has led to the rapid development of automatic station control., and the modern scheme of social and industrial civilization has come to be so dependent on electrical power that a high premium is placed on reliability as a feature of the apparatus generating, distributing, and using such power. One of the principal features of automatic control equipment is its reliability.

The early automatic equipment consisted of a combination of relays, contactors, switches, etc., which, while standardized themselves, made up a complete but highly specialized system. The rapid development of automatic control systems, together with the operating data and experience with respect to its requirements that has accumulated, led to the development of equipments for different services where the system as well as the devices were standardized.

The growing use of automatic equipments has given prominence to certain features that have contributed to its success from both the economic and engineering standpoint. These features might be summarized as follows:

1. Operators are not required.
2. Standby loss is decreased.
3. Reliability is increased.
4. Protection is provided at all times.
5. Development of small water-power sites is made possible.

1. Hydro-Electric Generating Stations.
2. Railway Sub-stations.
3. Synchronous Condenser Sub-stations.
4. A.C. and D.C. Feeder Sub-stations.
5. Industrial Sub-stations.
6. Edison 3-Wire Sub-stations.

It will be interesting to note in this connection that the first installations of the various types were as follows:

1. 1912—Semi-automatic (remote control) 500 KW Edison 3-wire station, Detroit Edison.
2. 1914—Full automatic railway substation, Elgin-Belvedere Electric Rail, way, Union, Ill.
3. 1916—3,000 KVA condenser substation, Interstate Light and Power Co.
4. 1917—3-unit 1,500 KVA hydro-electric station, Iowa Railway and Light Co.

Probably the two applications of automatic control with which we are most familiar are its application to hydro-electric stations and to synchronous converter railway sub-stations.

The Hydro Station

The usual hydro-electric practice requires relatively large plants in order to make operating expenses a minimum. The result is, large power sites, large dams, storage reservoirs, etc. The automatic generating station permits of the development of each power site individually, or, in other words, the power is concentrated electrically rather than hydraulically. It is also possible to develop sites for automatic operation that would not be commercially feasible under the usual scheme. There is no engineering reason why automatic control could not be applied to stations of any size. With increasing size, however, labor cost per KVA decreases rapidly and at the same time the complications in switching tend to increase so it seems that the field for automatic stations will usually be limited to relatively small capacity.

There are two fields where automatically controlled generators are especially suitable. The first is in connection with large established power systems, and the second is their operation as isolated units furnishing power to factories or even small towns that are isolated from large systems.

In the former case the function of the automatic station is to utilize the water power available to the best advantage as dictated by the needs of the system. The flexibility of the automatic station is such that the greatest advantage can be taken of existing water conditions at the automatic station to relieve peak loads, etc., of even short duration on the main system.

The advantages of automatic stations for supplying power to isolated factories or communities are fairly obvious. In many cases an antiquated mechanical power system of some sort is depended on, which is attended by all the evils inherent in such systems, such as continual shut-downs from breakage, loss or waste of power, and high maintenance charges. The automatic system does away with these troubles and reduces maintenance charges to a minimum.

In connection with the relative capacity of automatic generating stations Mr. Canning said that the largest completely automatic station is that of the Adirondack Power and Light Co. at Sprite Creek, which consists of one 7,500 KVA waterwheel-driven generator. Propositions have also been made on the automatic control of stations as high as 25,000 KVA capacity. While these, of course, are not large stations, they are probably about the largest it will be practicable to develop. In general, developments run from 100 to 2,000 KVA.

In the initial stages of automatic hydro- electric station development it was thought that the induction type generator would prove particularly applicable to this class of work. The induction generator should be considered for high head plants, or for very small installations, but for slow speeds and installations of moderate size the induction generator is not suitable. With decreasing speed the cost of the induction generator increases rapidly and the excitation required from the line also increases, thus adding to the undesirable lagging load on the system. For example, a 500 Kw 90% power factor induction generator requires 242 KVA wattless energy, which must be supplied by the system.

For these reasons the synchronous generator is usually to be recommended for automatic hydro-electric stations.

The equipment is designed to automatically perform in proper sequence all the operations of starting, running, and shutting down, ordinarily performed by the station attendant in a manually operated station.

The main automatic features consist of the master starting switch No. 1 the master control contact No. 2, and the field contactor No. 44, the oil circuit breaker No. 7, and the various protective relays. The relays are connected in the circuit of the master control contactor coil, and when abnormal conditions occur they open the coil circuit and shut down the machine.

System Outlawed

(1) The starting indication is given by the master starting element. This may be a float switch, a time switch a manually operated switch, or any of a number of things may be used to give the starting impulse. The station may be arranged to start when frequency or voltage falls or it may be started by closing a control switch in a remote station or by energizing the line from a remote station.

(2) The master control contractor closes by a circuit through the protective relays.

(3) A solenoid operated valve on the governor is opened by the master control contactor and permits the governor oil pressure to open the waterwheel gates.

(4) The waterwheel accelerates and the exciter voltage builds up.

(5) At about 95% synchronous speed the generator is connected to the line without field. It should be mentioned that generators for automatic stations are provided with pole face windings so that they can be connected to the line as induction motors.

(6) As soon as the line breaker closes the field contactor is energized and field is applied. The machine is pulled into step by the acceleration of the waterwheel and the synchronizing capacity of the generator.

The speed is maintained constant by the waterwheel governor, and the generator carries its share of the load.

An automatic voltage regulator is usually used, which maintains the voltage constant at a predetermined value.

Protection is usually furnished against the following abnormal conditions:—Overspeed, underspeed, Alternating current overload, failure of generator field, hot bearings, overheated machine windings, excessive alternating current voltage, low oil pressure and exciter overvoltage.

Before the generator can start at all, all conditions must be normal.

To shut the machine down, the master control contactor is de-energized from one cause to another. The contactor and the governor solenoid is de-energized. This allows the governor to close the gates and the machine begins to shut down. When the gates are practically closed the main oil circuit breaker opens and the field contactor opens.

Some of the protective devices are not only arranged to shut down the machine but they also prevent it being started again until the station has been visited and the cause of the shut down remedied. The machine is shut down and locked out if:

(a) The equipment is subjected to harmful overload or short circuit sufficient to require inspection, adjustment, or repair before being placed in service again.

(b) A bearing should tend to overheat.

(c) The field of the generator should fail.

When the machine is shut down from any other cause than one of the three mentioned above it will restart as soon as the abnormal conditions has disappeared.

Automatic Electric Railway

From the Automatic Hydro-Electric Station we will pass on to a consideration of the Automatic Electric Railway Sub-station. This type of station is one of the widest fields for automatic control. Up to this year there have been more than 275 equipments for operation in every type of railway service sold by one manufacturer alone. They are used by more than 75 railway companies on interurban and both light and heavy metropolitan service. These installations include equipments for 600, 1200, 1500 and 3600 volts direct current, and cover both synchronous converters and motor-generator sets up to and including 2000 Kw units. The largest installation for railway service up to the present is the three-unit station of the South African Railways, which is equipped with three 3000 volt synchronous motor-generator sets, each of 2000 Kw capacity.

The automatic railway sub-station consists of an assemblage of contactors, relays and other devices especially adapted to automatic control service This equipment performs the usual functions of starting, shutting down and fully protecting the sub-station at all times, entirely independent of manual supervision.

The automatic railway sub-station is usually started by a load demand on that part of the system within its particular district. This method of starting is accomplished by a voltage relay, actuated from the trolley. The stopping indication is given by the operation of an underload relay when the load diminishes to an uneconomical point. Starting and stopping of stations may also be accomplished by means of one of several remote control systems or by a time switch.

The sequence of the various operations in starting and stopping is determined by the motor-driven master switch. The fingers and segments of this controller make and break circuits, actuating contactors and relays which act directly on the machine circuit. This type of control insures a fixed and correct sequence of operation and eliminates a large number of interlocks.

As an illustration, assuming a 600-volt normal trolley voltage, the automatic equipment will start the converter when the voltage falls to, say, 540 volts or below. This reduction in trolley voltage is occasioned by the heavy current demand of a car just entering the zone fed by this station The voltage relay acts, due to the reduction in voltage, and after a suitable delay to avoid starts due to current demands of short duration actuates the master switch. This actuates, in proper sequence, the operating coils of the A.C. starting, field, and running contactors. As soon as the machine reaches normal voltage the direct current line contactor is closed and the master switch stops. The substation then continues to furnish normal voltage until the current demand falls below some predetermined value. This will occur when the car or locomotive which has been taking current passes out of the zone fed by this particular station. Time delay features prevent the station from dropping out until an appreciable period has elapsed sufficient to take care of normal service stops for discharging and taking on passengers.

When the trolley voltage falls the voltage relay operates through a time delay starting relay No. 2 to start the station. After this device has operated, provided the various protective devices give correct indication, the master control contactor No. 4 is closed. This actuates the motor mechanism of the oil circuit breaker which closes the breaker thus energizing the A.C. bus. The protective devices again giving indication, the motor of the drum controller No. 34 is then energizing, and the drum controller directs the sequence of operations.

A segment of the drum controller closes the starting contactor No. 10 connecting the converter to reduced voltage taps on the transformer. At the same time, the field flashing motor generator, which is used to insure correct polarity, is started. When the converter reaches synchronous speed, as indicated by a relay connected across the armature of the converter, the converter field is separately excited by the closing of contactor No. 31 which connects the field to the field flashing generator. After sufficient time has elapsed to insure the establishment of correct polarity, the separately exciting field contactor is opened and the self-exciting field contactor is closed. The machine is now running at synchronous speed self excited but on the half voltage taps. The starting contactor No. 10 next opens, and the running contactor No. 16 closes almost simultaneously connecting the converter to full voltage taps on the transformer. The converter brushes are lowered by the motor operated brush operating mechanism. The machine is now delivering normal voltage with correct polarity. The direct-current line contactor No. 18 next closes, connecting the converter to the bus through a set of resisters known as load limiting resistors. These resistors are next short-circuited in two or three steps to cushion the machine on the bus. The controller has now reached the full running position and the motor circuit is opened, stopping the controller until the machine is ready to shut down.

Automatically Shuts

Under normal operation, the station shuts down when the load falls below a certain predetermined amount. By the use of the time delay feature the actual shutting down does not take place until after the load has remained below the underload setting for a certain definite time interval. At the end of this time interval the contactor No. 4 opens the oil circuit breaker No. 7, the running contactor No. 16, and the line contactor No. 18. The drum controller then returns to the "off" position, and the equipment resumes a position ready to respond to the starting indication resulting from the next reduction in the trolley voltage.

While the converter is starting and running it is protected against practically every trouble that could occur.

It cannot start if the phase rotation is incorrect nor can it start single-phase. If anything should happen to two of the phases while the machine is running a balanced current relay will immediately cause it to shut down.

In case the alternating current voltage is below 80% normal, the converter is prevented from starting, or, if it is running when this condition occurs it will shut down.

A device is provided to prevent the converter from starting if the D.C. brushes are down and also prevents the machine from being connected to the D.C. bus unless the brushes are down.

If the machine fails to be connected to the line within a definite time after the starting operation is begun, a starting protective relay shuts the station down until an inspection has been made.

Tha machine will shut down in case the shunt field becomes open-circuited.

Correct polarity is assured by flashing the field from a small motor-generator set. As an additional precaution however, a polarized relay will shut down and lock out the machine in case it comes up with the wrong polarity.

Reverse power and underload relays shut the machine down in case the load falls below a predetermined point.

Relays are provided to shut the machine down in case it tends to become overheated.

Protection is afforded against bearing overheating.

Protection is also afforded against the machine over-speeding.

Protection against D.C. overload is afforded by the load limit resistors These are normally short circuited two or three sections by contactors, one or two of which open depending on the magnitude of the overload. In case of heavy D.C. overload, the station is shut down until it can be inspected.

Reliability Shown

The reliability of the automatic substation is indicated by the detail records kept by the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railway. The records were kept for five sub-stations, and in a total number of operations of 90,617 there were only 119 cases of faulty operation of devices. 74 of these failures to operate correctly have been positively taken care of by redesign, so that it is reasonable to suppose that if more modern apparatus had been used the failures would have been only 45 in number. A later report covers 33,141 operations for one sub-station alone, with no failures and no appreciable wear or excessive maintainance on any of the apparatus.

A noticeable saving in automatic sub-station operation apart from the saving in operators' salaries, is the elimination of the running light losses. It is only human nature for an operator not to shut down his machine during relatively short periods of light load, whereas the automatic station is shut down during all such periods.

A very large saving in feeder copper and copper losses is effected by using a number of single unit automatic substations spaced close together compared to a few multiple unit stations spaced far apart. The improved trolley voltage thus obtained is another important consideration..

PUP BOARDS WITH UNCLE SAM

"C. O. D." is the name of this Boston bull puppy, and "C. O. D." is being held at the Chicago post office because the man to whom it was mailed from Bellevue, Ia., refused to pay the $25 charges on it. The Government must hold such packages for six months—but there is no law that provides funds for feeding uncollected mail. Miss Kathryn Sullivan of the Chicago post office made friends with "C. O. D." immediately.

SPIRITUAL.

The growth of materialism has far outdistanced the mental and spiritual development of man, warns Sir Max Muspratt, the celebrated chemist.

Strange words from a scientist. But he is right.

Nearly all of what we consider as economic and social problems are really spiritual problems. No solution, as long as we deal with mater effects instead of spiritual causes.

BREAD MAY RISE IN PRICE HERE

Flour Is Up To $4.75 a Barrel—Eat Cake Instead.

CITY PRICES.

A rise in the price of bread is the prospect that confronts the housewives of Peterboro, along with the women of the rest of the Province. The pendulum that sends the price of wheat sky-rocketing has its darker side turned to the housekeepers, when the staff of life goes up correspondingly. Flour is up to $4.75 a barrel, with prospects of further advances. Pastry flour, however, made principally from the softer Ontario wheat, remains stationary so far. The famous bit of advice tendered by a princess of France at the time of the Revolution when she offered the suggestion that the people unable to buy bread should eat cake instead might be repeated in these modern times if the price of hard wheat for bread soars any farther. Bakers who thought that the fluctuations in the wheat markets were only temporary flurries have been caught unprepared with small reserve stocks. Some of the flour mills are working night and day to fill orders pouring in.

An anticipated rise in price of two cents on the loaf is a far from comforting forecast for the immediate future. Canadian housewives may yet be driven to the expedient of using the something new in bread which its originators believe should prove popular, and which has just been announced by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is cocoa bread, which has a decided flavor of cocoa that is said to please most palates and to retain its freshness longer than ordinary bread. The experimental baking laboratory of the Bureau of Chemistry achieved the product by substituting eight to ten per cent. of the flour in any good bread formula with cocoa and omitting shortening, which is supplied by the cocoa. An equal amount of sugar and cocoa is used. The bread is dark brown.

The farmers in this district are getting $1.20 for their wheat, an advance of five cents on the bushel over prices of a week ago. Rye, barley and peas also have registered recent advances. Alsike is apparently a disappointing crop, prices showing a wide range in differing qualities, from $1.50 to $6.50 per bushel. The opening prices on buckwheat are from 70 to 80 cents a bushel.

An estimate of wheat production in the Peterboro district places the wheat output at 25 or 26 bushels to the acre, an increase of five or six bushels over last year's acreage of 20 bushels. Oats, with somewhere in the neighborhood of 30 bushels to the acre, barley, with the same amount, and peas, about twelve bushels, are not quite as good as last year's crops. Rye shows a big yield, averaging 20 bushels, and buckwheat is excellent, this year's crop of 40 bushels to the acre surpassing that of last season. Alsike, which suffered from the cold, wet spring, is estimated to yield an average of only about three bushels to the acre.

A great quantity of the grain is not yet on the market. The farmers are busy with second threshing operations, with fall plowing, root gathering and silo filling, and have not yet marketed the biggest portion of their crops.

From the fruit dealers rises the lament that housekeeping ladies are not buying fruit this year in anything near the quantities that distinguished the fall season of recent years. And this is not laid to the door of indolence, either. The cause, as the retail dealers will tell you, is the higher price of fruit, and that, in turn, is traced back to the inclement weather of the spring and summer. The law of the harvest that decrees, and carries out, the edict that an August sun will ripen the grain whether it be well filled out or otherwise, usually seems to see to it that the grain is in condition for ripening, but the same law doesn't work with fruit. Consequently, the price of fruit this year is on the upgrade, and women who bought so many peaches last year "that I thought some of them would turn into peaches," as one dealer expressed it, are not buying them this year, at least not so many of them. One peach alone, the Elberta, that sold for 75 cents a basket last season, costs $1.25 to $1.45 a basket this season. "There's a reason." And it looks as if the old-fashioned treacle might come into its own this winter. With a bare fruit pantry and a lack of honey resulting from the strike of the bees, also affected by the cold spring and requiring to be fed highly with sugar to keep them on the job at all, it looks like a slim winter, as far as the usual family dessert is concerned.

Another optimistic prediction that will be calculated to add to the comfort of the family providers is that of an imminent rise in the price of potatoes. However, this may be merely what the politicians politely term a roorback, and may have no foundation in fact whatever.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were married in Peterboro on October 6th, 1874 by the Rev. Mr. Fish and spent practically all their married life there until Mr. Anderson's retirement 3 years ago when he returned to his native city, Galt, to make his home.

Gathered around the table were their son Mr. Robt. Anderson, local druggist and their daughter Miss May Anderson, Peterboro; also Mrs. Robt. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. ORANGE BANQUET GREAT SUCCESS

L.O.L. No. 50 Has Most Enjoyable Gathering.

L.O.L. No. 50 held a most enjoyable banquet last evening with a large attendance of members and visitors.

In the early part of the evening the Royal Arch purple degree was conferred upon eleven candidates, the degree work being very efficiently and smartly done.

At 11.10 o'clock there was an adjournment to the banquet hall, where a most enjoyable repast had been prepared by the members of Vimy Ridge Ladies' Lodge No. 244.

Bro. F. E. Dunsford, Past Master of L.O.L. No. 50, was toastmaster and acted as chairman during the running off of the toast list in a fashion that added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Bro. W. Ford, bandmaster of L. O.L. No. 50's band, proposed the toast to The King, which was loyally honoured.

Bro. George Porter, of L.O.L. No. 80, Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter of Ontario East, proposed a toast to "The County Lodge" and Bro. E. F. Reid, County Master, responded. Both speakers were in good form and their references to the progress made in the county were thoroughly appreciated.

The health of "The City" was proposed by Bro. Roland Denne, of L.O.L. No. 50 and responded to by Bro. Mayor J. J. Turner, of L.O.L. No. 1175, their speeches being in a happy vein.

Bro. Chas. H. McGee, of L.O.L. No. 50, who was in his best form, eloquently proposed the toast to "The Visitors," Bro. W. Lockie, the county secretary, making a fitting response.

The honour of proposing the health of "The Ladies" fell to Bro. J. H. Spence, Grand Marshal of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, and Wor. Mistress Sister Manley, of Vimy Ridge Ladies' Lodge, No. 244, replied neatly.

Bro. Fred Sanderson, the well known Master of L.O.L. No. 457, made an eloquent speech in proposing the toast to "No. 3 District Lodge," and Bro. Fred Brown, District Master, replied in a suitable manner.

The members then returned to the lodge room for the completion of the degree work.

The occasion was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the lodge and reflects great credit upon those who had the arrangements in charge.

MINISTER SPOKE ON GOVERNMENT LIQUOR CONTROL

Rev. E. I. Hart Tells Of His Observations In Quebec.

EXPECTS VICTORY.

Says Man Who Votes Wet Is Signing a Blank Cheque.

The Rev. E. I. Hart of Montreal, made a striking attack last evening on the condition and results under government control of liquor in the Province of Quebec, when he delivered his address on Government Control Conditions in Quebec, to a large audience, in the Grand Opera House.

Mr. Hart said: "By what I have heard and what I have seen in my travels around this province of Ontario, we are going to have a splendid victory on the 23rd of this month when the vote is cast."

When the Jesuits came to Canada, the speaker said, they found the Indians and the white settlers much demoralized with drink. Every effort was made to do away with the horrible stuff, but everything failed. In 1734 the license act was passed and up till the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act whiskey was sold openly over the bar, but since then things have changed a great deal

In the year 1919 two thirds of the Province of Quebec was dry. The people then began saying that light beer and wines wouldn't do any harm, so they put that clause in force by a majority of three to one. The people did not see any harm in the light wines and beer at this time but the act wasn't in force more than a few months when the bootleggers came in and made millions through their smuggling and their slick way of disposing of their goods.

In 1921 the liquor traffic as put under Government control and since then things have gone from bad to worse, and the present state of affairs in Quebec is disgraceful, declared Mr. Hart. Five men of the government were appointed to look after the issuing of licenses for these booze sellers. They simply turned around and granted licenses to everybody who would pay the license fees, and some of them are now situated within a few yards of churches and hospitals, one licensed store being within 15 feet of a church. Legislatively the province has gone back 30 years in the last four years of government control.

Stronghold of Evil.

In the city of Montreal, with its many churches, and beautiful cathedrals we have the stronghold of the evil of the province, and the stronghold of the liquor traffic, and we cannot get rid of the evil unless we first get rid of this tremendous liquor traffic, said the speaker.

There are 90 government stores in the province that sell hard spirits and wines. The rule is that no more is to be given to a person than one bottle a day, but the people are not hindered in any way in getting as many as they want.

Picture slides of the different government stores and dens of vice were shown. Nearly all the people who inhabit these stores which are jammed nearly all the time, are young men, some of them undoubtedly getting their first drink, Mr. Hart explained. The stores are open from 9 in the morning until 6 at night and there have been as many as 20,000 persons pass through one of them in a day. Not only is liquor sold to sober men but it is also sold to those who had already had too much, without getting any more. Advertisements for these places and for different kinds of spirituous drinks are now seen on the billboards and in the papers. On one block in the city of Montreal there are nine buildings, and two of these are second hand stores, while four are licensed liquor stores.

225 Crawled Out.

Hull is far from being known for its beauty. In this city of thirty thousand people there are forty different stores where liquor can be bought. The speaked said that he stood in front of a store in Hull for one hour and counted 450 people coming out, half of them crawling out. Of these 450 people, 50 were women, mostly in their teens. Hull is classed as one of the worst places in the province of Quebec for the sale of liquor. "I never saw such painted faces and such hard faces in my life before as I saw in these places where the women were. Some grocery stores sell beer alone, but for every dollar's worth of groceries they sell about $12 worth of beer. You cannot cut out the red light district without doing away with the liquor. The slum area of Montreal is extending rapidly since government control was brought into being. The liquor traffic is the greatest menace to our boys and girls you can find, and it is not uncommon to see girls, merely in their teens, loitering about these booze joints. These places are steadily increasing and they will do the same in Ontario if government control is passed. The people of Quebec were not satisfied with having these government stores and other public places where spirits could be bought but now they have established four classy stores in Quebec city for ladies only. In these places wines can be bought. Brewery stock that was worth only $13 a share not a great many years ago is now valued at $160 a share. The National Brewing Company has trebled its capacity. At the Frontenac Brewing Company one night beer was given away free as an advertisement. Mr. Hart said he saw women by the hundreds in this place and saw one mother offer a drink to her child, under the 'teen age. "When people will come down so low as to offer spirits to a young girl of 12 it is time that something was done," passionately declared the speaker. Posters of different kinds are seen on every hand.

In the city of Valleyfield, which has a population of about 10,000 people there are two large stores that do an immense business, cleaning up about a million dollars between them each year. Mr. Hart expressed the opinion that the government is one one of the greatest bootleggers in Canada. There are three times as many auto accidents in Quebec as there were last year. Although the city of Toronto has three times as many cars as Montreal there were twice as many auto accidents in Montreal as in Toronto. "What is the cause of this?" demanded the speaker.

Any man who owns a car and desires to be able to ride in safety should vote for the O.T.A., he said. Crime has increased greatly since government control, and in Bordeaux jail 50 per cent. of the prisoners are bootleggers, blind piggers and dope fiends. In every place that government control has been tried it has been a huge failure and the man who puts his X opposite government control on the 23rd is doing the same as signing is name to a blank cheque that he doesn't know anything about, Mr. Hart concluded.

The meeting was preseided over by G. A. Gillespie, while the Salvation Army Band supplied several musical selections.

LEMON SAUCE.

One cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 lemon, few grains salt.

Mix sugar and cornstarch. Add boiling water slowly, stirring constantly. Add salt and boil five minutes or until mixture is clear. Add butter and lemon juice and remove from the fire. Cool and serve.

A few gratings of the rind of the lemon can be boiled with the sugar and water mixture if a sharper sauce is wanted.

This pudding can be reheated and used later in the week if there is any "left-over."

FISH SALAD.

Left-over fish may be used as the foundation for a salad or may be warmed up in drawn butter or white sauce to which an egg has been added.

Labor Government Provided Funeral Carriages Says Cynical Opponent Of Free Transportation

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—Just before dissolution in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, the financial secretary to the treasury, William Graham, announced that arrangements had been made under a new rule for granting free travel warrants to members and they would be enabled to return to their constituencies without paying railway fare.

This announcement led to the cynical remark that the Labor government had only preached its funeral sermon before the doctor was through with it, but had also provided for the mourning carriages.

The Clydeside member smilingly asked whether special provision had been made to care for the large addition to the unemployed that would be made shortly among parliamentarians.

CORSETS UNHEARD OF BY PERSIANS

Persian Says Oriental Custom Serves to Cause Gracefulness.

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Now we know where the Lucy Stone Leaguers get their idea of retaining their names and personalities after marriage from—Persia.

In that far-away land of veiled ladies, jealous husbands and enchanting rose gardens, women have always done that very thing, according to Madam Armen Ohanian, a Persian writer and dancer, who is making a tour of this country.

"The oriental woman has always kept her name and her property after marriage," this dark-eyed stranger told me, "and she always keeps her individuality—if she ever had any.

"The western idea that the oriental woman is a slave to her husband is erroneous," she went on. "If a Persian woman wishes to be divorced from her spouse, all she has to do is to go before a lawyer and sign her name to a paper, and she is free."

Veils Make 'Em All Equal.

We also misunderstand the psychology of wearing veils, she informs me. It is not the symbol of subjection, but rather an adroitly planned scheme to give every woman a fair deal, or at least an equal chance, in the matrimonial game.

"It is difficult to be as beautiful in reality as one may be in a man's imagination. With most of the face concealed, the man must use his imagination. There is a sense of mystery bred by concealment. With faces uncovered, as they are in certain parts of the orient today, there is less mystery, and consequently less romance.

"While there is a tendency on the part of oriental women to discard the veil, due to western influences, I believe they will resume it again. Women will realize how much they are losing from their lives when they deliberately destroy romance and break down those ancient customs upon which our eastern civilization is based."

Girl Babies Are Bandaged.

Madame Ohanian said that the beautiful figures of the young oriental girls are due to the custom of bandaging.

"As a baby sleeps, it is bandaged closely, so that its body is not allowed to spread and the small muscles are trained to stay in place," she explained. "The mother also carefully shapes the child's fingers and nose with a gentle massage. All during a girl's childhood she is carefully watched and trained into habits of beauty and grace by her own mother.

"That is the reason the oriental woman never wears a corset or any artificial support for her body."

Madame Ohanian says America is a much more congenial country for the oriental woman than Europe.

"In Europe, women really are the slaves of men, and of customs and conditions that are most favorable to me," she concluded. "Only in America do I find the women as free as they are in the orient. And no husband is so indulgent as the American."

GERMAN GOODS AND BRITISH INDUSTRY

Cheap Goods of All Kinds Flood the Market

LOAN TO HELP

Continental Works Eating Into Foreign Trade in All Directions

The latest unemployed figures for some big towns in England and Wales are:—

Liverpool and Bootle	50,000
Sheffield	23,861
Coventry	5,201
Birmingham	38,372
Wolverh'pton	6,300
Swansea	1,841

The removal of the McKenna duties has resulted in the British market being flooded with foreign musical instruments, watches, clocks, and, in a lesser degree, with motor-cars and cycles on a scale unprecedented in recent British trade records.

German traders are flooding English firms with circulars offering cheap pianos.

One Berlin manufacturer offers an instrument for as little as £83 and guarantees it to be of first-class mechanism.

During the last few days several German officials from the great Leipzig trade fair have arrived in London in connection with this campaign to support the numbers of German commercial travellers who are reaching England daily.

The Germans hope to use the money "loaned" them by Great Britain to enable them to undersell British firms and create more unemployment.

Typical extracts from the trade reports in the Engineer are:—

Midlands.—District overloaded with Belgian bars (iron) at £3 10s. below the home price.

Barrow.—The steel trade is in a very bad way.

Sheffield.—No one remembers when orders were on such a small scale. A large amount of Indian work has gone to the Continent. Manufacturers, asked why America could underquote for Manchester tram rails, referred pointedly to the heavy taxation in this country.

North of England.—Doleful accounts are given of almost every branch of industry.

Wales.—The coal competitor most to be feared is Germany. Last week's iron and steel exports were 9,533 tons, against 10,340 the week before.

South Yorkshire coal owners fear a slump in sales equivalent to two days' production out of every six if they are deprived of French and Belgian trade through German payment of reparations in fuel.

Official returns for last month show a drop in tonnage sent to Hull of nearly 100,000 tons of coal, compared with August of last year, while the total for the first eight months of this year was 1,399,000 tons less than that for January to August, 1923.

The number of Durham miners out of employment is increasing day by day and fully 9,000 are now idle. Twenty collieries in the county are closed or are closing, and at many more a great reduction of staff has been effected.

The following collieries in the Durham district are closed.

St. Helen's, Auckland, Bowden Close, Framwellgate, Sherburn House, Rough Lea, Dunston, Norwood, Hamsteels, Adelaide, Shildon, Esh, Hill Top, South Derwent "Willie," Westerton, Belmont, Brandon, Harperley Park, Garden House, Lumley Third.

In Northumberland the position is equally grave.

FAMILY OF 17 AT HUNGRY FARM

Best Fed People in Cambridge Despite Old Legend

Hundreds of years ago, so a legend relates, a poor farmer, his wife, and their six children were found dead from starvation in a tumbledown farmhouse on Glassmoor Bank, Whittlesey, Cambridgeshire. It was called Hungry Farm Ground.

Half a mile from the legendary ground is Hungry Hall Farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Boon, whose family of 15 children is regarded as the largest, happiest, and best fed in Cambridge.

There are 11 boys and 4 girls, and Mr. Boon confessed to a reporter that sometimes he had difficulty in remembering their names. Six of the boys are old enough to help their father to farm 200 acres.

"We settled here six years ago," said Mr. Boon. "The neighbors reminded us of the legend of Hungry Hall, but we don't reckon much upon it, do we?" he added, turning to his wife.

"There's no such thing as hunger in this house now," she replied. In fact, at that moment four large kettles were on the kitchen hob boiling water for the family teapot which holds nearly three-quarters of a gallon, while three or four daughters of the house, Lily, Elizabeth, Cissie, were bustling about the kitchen cutting plates of bread and butter for tea.

Apart from childhood's ailments the children have hardly known a day's illness. Mrs. Boon said she gave them plenty of meat, and suet and Yorkshire pudding. "Our oven is not large enough to hold all these dishes at once, so the meals have to be cooked in three separate lots," added Mrs. Boon.

When the smaller boys are older the 11 brothers hope to form themselves into a football team which may be known as the Hungry Farm eleven. They practise strenuously every Sunday morning in the paddock adjoining the farm.

THREE YEARS' GAS; FOUR MONTHS JAIL

For stealing 60,000 cubic feet of gas, Herbert Reade, a Grimsby motor-mechanic, was sentenced to four months' hard labor.

His gas supply was cut off three years ago because of an unpaid account.

By making a connection with the main Reade had since obtained an unauthorized supply for domestic and business purposes.

WOMAN FARMER STARTED FASCISTI

General Blakeney is Elected to Command Anti-Communist Body

100,000 STRONG

Organization Covering Britain Run from London Headquarters

The British equivalent of Mussolini is now Brig.-Gen. Robert Byron Drury Blakeney, retired, C.M.G., D.S.O. By the unanimous vote of the country and area commanders of the British Fascisti, the anti-Communist organization founded in London about a year ago, he has been elected its President. The office carries with it the complete command of the organization.

Until his election as President, Gen. Blakeney was Director of Units of the British Fascisti and an active member of the Grand Council. He has had a long and distinguished military career. During the war he served in Egypt and the Dardanelles, in charge of military railway transport, and after the armistice he became manager of the Egyptian State Railways.

But the founder of the British Fascisti, the one to whom the entire credit is given for conceiving the idea and inviting its preliminary organization is a shy young woman of twenty-nine. She is Miss R. L. Lintorn-Orman. Her father, Major Lintorn-Orman, formerly of the Essex Regiment, married the daughter of the late Field Marshal Sir Lintorn Simmons. Miss Lintorn-Orman is their only child and was brought up in the military atmosphere of Hawley House, the Hampshire home of her distinguished grandfather.

Now she lives at the Old Court Farm at Langford, in Somersetshire, in the heart of the Mendips and within a few hundred yards of Burrington Combe, where the famous "Rock of Ages" is still shown to visitors. There she farms her land and runs a dairy business, and it was there that her idea of a British Fascisti was born. The thought came to her, she said, when she was digging in her vegetable garden one day in May, 1923. It was shortly after the English papers had been full of the doings of the British Labor Party delegation at the Hamburg meeting of the Socialist Labor Internationale, which promotes the doctrines of class war and direct action.

Miss Lintorn-Orman first sent an advertisement to a weekly newspaper suggesting the formation of an organization to be known as the British Fascisti. This ran six consecutive weeks and brought in a few replies. These encouraged her enough to get out her first pamphlet outlining the purpose and structure of the organization she was forming. Two weeks later she had the enrolment forms printed.

No subscriptions were asked from members, nor have been so far the small sum is charged for the "E. F." badges, which most of them wear, has paid part of the office expenses of the organization. The remainder has been contributed by well-to-do sympathisers and supporters throughout the country.

At the beginning a room was lent the organization in a house in the West End of London and from there the British Fascisti was run for many months. Today, so large, it is claimed, has the organization grown, that the whole house is now taken over and dozens of volunteer workers are employed there.

Officers of the British Fascisti say that hundreds a week are joining and the total membership is now more than 100,000.

LORD AYLESFORD DEAD IN ENGLAND

Family Seat on Outskirts of Shakespeare's Forest of Arden

The famous Aylesford peerage case, which came before the House of Lords in July, 1885, is recalled by the announcement of the death of the Earl of Aylesford at Packington Hall, Coventry, at the age of 73.

His claim to succeed his brother, the 7th earl, who died at Big Springs, Texas, in January, 1885, was disputed by the 7th earl's widow, who claimed the title on behalf of her four-year-old son. Her claim failed, the House of Lords deciding that the boy was not the son of the 7th Earl of Aylesford.

The late peer is succeeded by his 16-year-old grandson, the child of Lord Guernsey, who was killed in action in 1914.

Lord Aylesford's Warwickshire seat is on the outskirts of Shakespeare's Forest of Arden, and the herd of black deer that roam the park are reputed to be the descendants of those mentioned in "As You Like It."

Lord Aylesford had another quaint association with those times, for he was Lord Warden of the Woodmen of Arden, the oldest Company of Archers in the country.

RUTLAND VILLAGE LONGEVITY RECORD

In the village of Pickworth, Rutland, which has 150 inhabitants, there are 4 people over 70, 5 over 80, and 2 are 90 or over. Their ages total about 900 years.

In the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. William Sargeant, who have been married 63 years and brought up 13 children, there has not been a death for over 50 years, and in the same row of five cottages only 8 people have died in 56 years.

Mrs. Ann Healam, who is 92, is the oldest parishioner, and J. W. Taylor is still a busy farmer at 90. His sister, Mrs. E. Dixon, is 87. Mr. and Mrs. W. Wyman, who are 79 and 75, have been married 53 years, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Christian about 50 years.

Pickworth has an inn but no shop. It lies in a sleepy hollow 4 miles from a railway station.

Duchess Runs Her Own X-Ray Hospital; Gives Free Treatment

On the road from Woburn to Leighton Buzzard, in Bedfordshire, stands a hospital built 20 years ago by the Duchess of Bedford for the treatment of surgical cases. A reporter who visited it yesterday was told that the duchess assists in the operating theatre and herself does all the radiography, having installed an X-rays plant four years ago. Local doctors are allowed to bring patients for X-rays examination, and all cases are dealt with free of cost, the institution being run at the duchess' expense.

One bed is kept vacant every night in case of a motor accident in the district.

Operations, when necessary, take place twice a week; three were performed one day recently, the duchess being present.

Church League to Work for Abolition Of the Word "Obey"

A campaign in favor of the alteration of the marriage service will be conducted at Oxford by the League of the Church Militant during the Church Congress that begins there at the end of this month.

Among the changes urged are the omission on the part of the woman of the promise to obey, the alteration of the last prayer before the final blessing to read: "that this woman may be loving, amiable, and faithful to her husband," the omission of the promise by the man to endow his wife with all his worldly goods, and an exchange of rings between man and wife, instead of merely the giving of a ring by the man to the woman.

NON-SWEARING CLUB BUILT BY FINES

Miners of New Brancepeth, Durham, who formed a non-swearing club, have built a club hall with the money paid in fines by members each time they used bad language.

The club has become a popular institution in the village and its membership has grown rapidly.

At the opening of the hall, the Rev. G. S. B. Mack, commenting on the fact that the president of the club is a colliery manager, said: "If I were a colliery manager I would swear like a blooming trooper."

MIXED COMPANY AND MUCH SCRUPLE

Heard at Pontypool (Mon.) Police Court:—

The Chairman: I cannot sit in this case, as I have shares in the company prosecuting.

The Clerk: I cannot advise the Bench, as I am also a stockholder.

Defendant: I've no objection to you gentlemen acting.

Solicitor (prosecuting): Perhaps he has more objection to me. I am also a shareholder in the company. (Laughter.)

BIGGER DOLE AND MORE DRUNKENNESS

The Chief Constable of Dudley said there had been a remarkable increase in drunkenness in the town since the unemployment pay was increased.

The Chairman of the Magistrates said if these men were pioneers of a new order there must be propaganda to get the amount of unemployment pay reduced again.

The Chief Constable added that in each instance offenders were out of work.

DR. HADWEN HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

A remand was granted at Gloucester Police Court when Dr. W. R. Hadwen, the anti-vaccinationist and anto-vivisectionist, was accused of the manslaughter of a ten-year-old girl, who died from diphtheria. Bail was allowed.

Dr. Hadwen's professional treatment of the girl and his diagnosis were called into question at an inquest, and the jury returned a verdict which the coroner explained was equivalent to "Manslaughter."

FISH BUNKERED ON GOLF COURSE

Seaching for a lost ball on the course of the Royal Duff House Club, on the banks of the Deveron, a Banff (Scotland) golfer found a pool containing about a dozen live flounders some 50 yards from the river.

Part of the course was inundated during recent floods, and when the main waters receded the fish were left behind.

Nine Burned To Death In Farm Fire In Scotland

Five women and four men were burned to death in an outhouse at Killinford Farm, near Dundonald, Ayrshire.

They were potato diggers, and were sleeping in a loft, the only approach to which was by a staircase at one end. The men were in the front of the loft and the women behind a partition.

When the alarm was given the fire had been burning a long time, and the place was full of smoke. Some men and one woman succeeded in escaping from the burning building, and it is supposed that the others were overcome by the smoke.

FISHING DISPUTE ON NORFOLK BROADS

Campaign to Free Waters to Anglers Has Sequel at Norwich

George Attoe refused to pay a fine of 1s. imposed on him at Norwich for "unlawfully attempting to take fish from Wroxham Broad," and protested against the heavy costs, £5 4s., in which he was mulched.

He claimed that as the water had an ebb and flow the public had the right of free fishing in the broad, which is claimed by Major W. Trafford. "No man, whether a Trafford, or anybody else," said Attoe, "dug the hole for the water to go in."

The case against Attoe, and three other men, Alexander Anderson, of Norwich, W. E. Bowers, of Warwick avenue, London, and Arthur Lilley, of Lincoln's Inn Fields, is of national interest in connection with the campaign to free the Norfolk Broads from restrictions on anglers and yachtsmen.

The prosecution said that the men refused to pay the fee of half-a-crown a boat which was demanded. Nobody claimed property in the water, it was pointed out, but only in the land on which the water rested, and because this was private the fishing was also private.

There was a tradition that about the thirteenth or fourteenth centuries that there was an actual combat on the shores of Wroxham Broad between men-at-arms from St. Benet's Abbey and from a monastic institution at Wroxham who claimed the right of free fishing.

The same penalties were inflicted on each of the four men.

BISHOP'S NEPHEW TO WED SHOPGIRL

The tiny village of Tenbury Wells, partly in Worcestershire, partly in Shropshire, is excited over a romance which has developed in its midst.

The vicar, Rev. E. F. Winnington-Ingram, nephew of the Bishop of London, is to marry in a month or so's time Miss Gladys Armstrong, a young assistant in the village ironmonger's shop.

Miss Armstrong, who is 21, lives in a simple cottage near the church. Her father is a gardener, and is vicar's warden. She sings in the church choir. Mr. Winnington-Ingram is 42, and is tall and athletic. He announced his engagement from the pulpit. It is likely, however that the marriage will take place in his present parish.

Miss Armstrong is described as having auburn wavy hair, a beautiful complexion and blue eyes. She is fond of games, particularly of golf, which the vicar plays well. Recently she took part in a Tenbury Pageant part of which the vicar wrote.

HOAXING THE NATIVES.

Frank Millar, alias Marcham, was committed for trial at Wokingham, England, charged with obtaining money and credit by fraud. It was stated that while at an inn at Waltham, St. Lawrence he posed as Captain Lord Millar, treated the villagers to wine and cigars, and told the landlord he was "overworked through attendance on the Prince of Wales."

Doctor in England Can Certify Death Without Seeing Body

"People cannot buy cigarettes after eight o'clock at night, but they can be certified as dead at any time by a doctor who has not seen their dead bodies," commented Dr. Edwin Smith, the Hackney coroner, referring to the new form of certificate to be issued to medical practitioners.

He expressed astonishment at the introduction in it of a modification which, he said, left untouched the fundamental defect of a doctor being able to certify a death without seeing a body after death.

"The removal of such an anomaly," he added, "would only come about when a real or supposed case of burial alive occurred."

King's Archives of Century-Old Documents Being Put in Shape

Private documents which contain valuable historical information and have accumulated for centuries are being arranged and tabulated in the Round Tower at Windsor Castle, where the Royal Archives are kept.

The Rev. Albert Lee, of Windsor, who is the first man to hold the appointment of Recorder of the King's Archives, is directing the work.

Only a few people besides the King know the contents of the documents.

Mr. Lee is an authority on literary and antiquarian subjects and has also written books for boys.

WELSH RECTOR IS OLDEST IN BRITAIN

The Rev. Christopher Cook, rector of Mamhilad, Pontypool, and the oldest beneficed clergyman in Britain will shortly celebrate his 100th birthday.

Mr. Cook was born in September 1824, and has held the living of Mamhilad since 1852.

His father served as a naval surgeon in the Battle of Trafalgar, and died at a great age; his son is vicar of Rowelstone, Llansillo, and is 75 years of age.

The rector has not preached for some years, but he is diligent and regular in his attendance at the services of the church. He is surprisingly vigorous, enjoys his pipe and does a certain amount of gardening.

SUNDAY MOTORING ATTACK BY PEER

Lord Trevor, of Brynkinalt, opening a Foreign Missions Exhibition at Welshpool, declared that the English Sunday was being desecrated.

It was said, he added, that working men must have some pleasure, but it was the upper classes that were setting a bad example.

The Church was too tolerant, and should set its face definitely against all this indecent Sunday pleasuring.

If they went on the roads on Sunday, they saw thousands of people tearing about in motor-cars, and the sparse congregations in the churches could hear little but discordant motor horns outside.

NEVIL MASKELYNE IS FOUND DEAD

Nevil Maskelyne, eldest son of the founder of the famous "Theatre of Mystery," was found dead in bed in his flat at London.

When his daughter went up to awaken him she found he was dead.

For some time Mr. Maskelyne had been receiving medical attention in connection with heart trouble, and it is understood that this was the cause of death. He was 61 years of age.

STUD GROOM IS HOST TO MARQUIS

John Thompson has completed 60 years' continuous service with the Cecil family at Burghley, Stamford. For 50 years he has been stud groom, and at 81 he still carries on his work.

To celebrate his diamond jubilee of service, Mr. Thompson and his daughter entertained the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter, and their sons and daughters, to tea.

An amateur water diviner, Mr. Thompson found the first spring from which the town of Stamford is now supplied with water from Lord Exeter's waterworks.

REFLOATS YACHT IN NOVEL WAY

When his yacht sank in nearly three fathoms (about 18 feet) of water at Scapa Bay, Orkney, Donald Robertson dived down to her repeatedly, removing her ballast bit by bit till she was clear of it.

The vessel then rose to the surface and was brought safely to shore.

MAN WITH LIMP AN ARTFUL BEGGAR

Made Hundreds by Claims for Alleged Accidents

JAIL SENTENCE

Pleaded Guilty to Attempt to Defraud Railway Company

A man who has received hundreds of pounds as the result of claims for alleged accidents was sentenced at Old Bailey to eleven months in the second division.

The accused was Martin Conway, (34), laborer, who pleaded guilty to attempting to obtain money from the London Electric Railway Company by false pretences.

Conway, it was stated, said that he had tripped over a grating at Tottenham Court road Tube Station, and hurt his knee. He refused an offer of £25. An official recognised him as a man who had made a previous claim.

Inquiries showed that he had made a claim against Bovis (Limited) for an alleged accident two days after the other alleged accident and had been paid £7s. 6d. for five weeks.

On June 10 he called to collect one of these sums of £1 7s. 6d. He was then leaning heavily on a substantial stick, and declared that he was in such pain that he could not go upstairs for his money.

He afterwards limped into a bus, but on arriving at Edgware road he jumped off the bus while it was going, put the stick under his arm, and went off to lunch.

In February, 1921, he made a claim against Sir Robert McAlpine and Sons for an accident to his knee, and was paid £100.

In February, 1922, he started an action against the London Electric Railway Company for an accident in Trafalgar square. The company paid £125 into court, which Conway immediately took out.

In June of the same year Conway said that he had had an accident while working with the French Asphalte Company and that his knee was injured by an instrument while he was at work. That company paid him altogether £250.

On November 16, 1922, he claimed against Messrs. Carmichaels, alleging that he had injured his head while working for them in Wardour street. He received £400 from them. It was only fair to say, stated counsel, that in that case there was evidence of some injury to his head.

Mr. St. John Macdonald, defending, said that the accidents were all genuine, although it might seem a remarkable coincidence.

WEMBLEY POLICE AS MONEYLENDERS

"Robert", Opens His Purse to People in Distress

So often have the police at the British Empire Exhibition assisted visitors in temporary financial embarrassment that their reputation for generosity has rapidly spread, and at all hours of the day and night people in distress call at the station with pitiable tales of lost purses and missing railway tickets.

Indeed, so numerous are the calls made upon them that the police are having to harden their hearts to escape bankruptcy. There is, of course, no fund helping those who lose their purses or tickets, and any loans that may be made have to come out of the pockets of the police themselves.

While scores of gratified letters have been received from visitors returning the borrowed money, at the same time so great has been the number of those who have allowed the matter to slip their memories during the last few weeks that the necessity of refusing all applications is being seriously considered.

BOHEMIAN LONDON OF 50 YEARS AGO

"Old Odell's" Memories of the Late Night Age

WOMEN BARRED

Postmen Carried Bells and Cops Had Stove-pipe Hats

"Going home with the milk is an extremely interesting pastime. I know, for I have specialized in it, but conditions have changed sadly!"

E. J. Odell—"Old Odell," of the Yorick Club and the Savage — made this remark. He is ninety, and his reflections are interesting.

Mr. Odell is the last of the Bohemians, and has a fund of reminiscences of a different age from ours. As he stroked his long white beard he drew contrasts from the "merry old days" that have gone.

"Yes; everybody seems to want to go to bed early now," he went on gloomily, "and the few people who don't seem to take part in a night life that is artificial and lacking in real gayety/ies. The night life we used to have didn't lead to murders. Women did not figure in it as they do now.

THE LAST BOHEMIAN.

"Ever since I was 74 I have been home by eleven! In other days that would have been more or less the starting point of a night's companionship. They call me 'the last of the Bohemians,' and 'the King of Bohemia,' and it is true that I never used to go home while I could find company.

"Not that we were wealthy! Two or three generations ago folk were more often in debt than out of it.

"Some people seem to think the old days were quiet. There was not so much rushing about; the railways were novelties for a long time; motor-cars were as unknown as aeroplanes, and we lived by gaslight. But there could be any amount of excitement if you met any garrotters.

"They were the ruffians who would waylay you late at night. The cure was provided for it in the end—the cat o' nine tails.

WHIPPED BY GUARDSMEN.

"In conformity with the custom that had persisted from mediaeval days the duty of flogging devolved on the common hangman. 'Poor old Calcraft,' as he was called, was a feeble old man, and so the lash had no terrors for the wrongdoers.

"Two garrotters grinned at the prospect until they suddenly discovered that in place of the old hangman two stalwart Guardsmen had been deputed to carry out the flogging. When the soldiers peeled off their short tunics, rolled up their sleeves, and gave a flick of the lash, the big man frantically protested that he was consumptive and the little man howled like a wild cat.

"But they got their punishment, and after a few other offenders had been dealt with in the same way garrotting died out.

THE POSTMAN'S BELL.

"I remember when policemen had tall beaver hats instead of helmets, and wore white trousers in summer. They had bob-tailed coats with leaden buttons. Instead of using a whistle they relied on the watchman's rattle.

"Postmen carried a big bell to give householders warning of their approach."

Mr. Odell has had only one experience of picture theatres. The bright light and the flicker hurt his eyes too much.

"There was poor pay for the actor in the old days," he said, "and the manager was an autocrat. If an actress left the theatre with paint on her face she was fined a guinea, and if she repeated the offence she was dismissed."

HARD WORK THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

Co-Partner Scheme is Success, Lord Leverhulme Says

Lord Leverhulme, chairman of Lever Bros., presiding at the sixteenth annual co-partnership meeting contended that co-partnership had proved its efficacy.

What impressed him on a recent visit to the Continent, he added, was that the nations recovering most rapidly were those that relied less on politicians and more on hard work.

He could not see any recovery traceable to treaties or Acts of Parliament to compare for one moment with recovery by the hard work of labor and management, and by capital. Recovery was greatest where those forces were in harmony.

It was announced that the total number of ordinary co-partners up to date was 17,727, and the nominal value of Co-partnership Certificates issued and outstanding £2,348,049.

The average holding per co-partner, including this year's allotments, was £132, and the total amount of co-partnership dividend paid on 1 January was £184,103. The average amount of dividend per co-partner paid on January 1, was £11.

SUDDEN DEATH OF SIR T. HOLDERNESS

While walking back to the Walton Heath Golf Club from the 18th green, with Lady Holderness and a friend with whom she had been playing golf, Sir Thomas Holderness, a former Parmanent Under-Secretary at the India Office, collapsed and died almost immediately.

Aged 75, Sir Thomas Holderness had been in the service of the Government of India for half a century.

NEW STEEL HOUSE GOES UP QUICKLY

Lord Weir's Model Does Away With Building Material

COSTS $1,500

Mass-Production to Start After Authorities are Satisfied

Mass-production, standardized steel houses for the working class is Lord Weir's solution of the present housing problem in Great Britain. Lord Weir is a big Glasgow iron and steel manufacturer, was Scottish controller of munitions for a year during the war and later held important administrative posts in the British Air Ministry.

From the time of the armistice election onward the cry "homes for heroes" has been an election slogan for all three parties in this country and each succeeding Government has passed a "housing bill" which, however, has failed to produce enough houses. In Lord Weir's city of Glasgow alone there is a shortage of 60,000 dwellings.

Now Lord Weir has erected near his factories there a three-room workingman's house of steel which, he says, can be built, after mass-production has been started, for $1,500, exclusive of the cost of the land and sewerage and which can be erected in a day after the concrete foundations are completed.

Lord Weir's scheme provides for the almost complete replacement of brick and mortar by steel construction and by his process of factory standardization the building operations will not require the services of the highly-skilled men in the building trades needed to erect an ordinarly constructed dwelling.

In addition to the saving of time and money effected by the employment of unskilled or semi-skilled labor, this substitution, he says, will meet the building difficulties of the past caused by the post-war shortage of skilled labor. Even the plumber will be dispensed with as the piping in these houses will be made in standard lengths and screwed instead of soldered together.

EASY TO ASSEMBLE.

Externally the experimental house built in Glasgow looks much like the ordinary, small working class home. The framework is of wood, to which is bolted steel plates. All the factory produced pieces of the house are numbered so that the assembling job is a simple one. Between the exterior and interior sheets of steel there is a felt lining which is damp-proof and will tend to act as an insulator against changes of temperature within.

The outside steel shell is painted, while the interior one, forming the inner walls of the house, is lined with beaverboard. The roofing can be slate or one of the various patent fireproof substitutes on the market. Included in the total building cost of £1,500 are the kitchen and other grates, electric light fittings and bathtub.

John Wheatley, M. P., Minister of Health, has visited the experimental house and given it his tentative approval, as have also various municipal housing officials and several Scottish Members of Parliament. But Lord Weir is not content with this first experiment and is calling upon women connected with labor organizations to advise him regarding an improved labor-saving design and the details of the interior equipment before putting the house into mass-production.

The present house took almost a week to build, but Lord Weir is shortly giving a "while-you-wait" demonstration before government and municipal authorities, when he expects to have the job done in a few hours.

CLYDE EVICTIONS ARE SUSPENDED

Conference Arranged by David Kirkwood Arranges Two Week's Truce

The expected evictions of 250 families from their homes in Clydebank have been cancelled, as the result of a conference held in Glasgow. All proceedings for the eviction of tenants have been suspended for two weeks. R. Gilmour, chairman of the Property Owners' Association, met David Kirkwood, M.P., and others at the North British Hotel, and as a result of their discussions four findings were arrived at, as follows:—

1.—Mr. Kirkwood is to ask all tenants who are in a position to pay the rent to do so.

2.—All tenants in arrears, including those against whom decrees of ejectment have been obtained, are to be asked to approach their factors with a view to the settlement of rent.

3.—All cases which cannot be settled by the above means to be referred to the tribunal for decision.

4.—All proceedings for eviction to be suspended for two weeks.

The tribunal set up during the week-end consists of representatives of both sides, in addition to the Provost of Clydebank.

As the result of this settlement—which came as a last-minute surprise after what appeared to be a deadlock—it is believed that at last a satisfactory solution of the problems which have disturbed Clydebank since 1921 may be found.

TOAD AND BALL RIDDLE IN GOLF

While W. Loveridge, the Shipley golf professional, was playing on the Cleveland course, Redcar, his ball, driven from the 11th tee, came to rest in long grass apparently on the back of a toad.

When Loveridge approached the toad jumped clear, and the ball fell into a hole. Loveridge pushed the toad away, but it jumped back on the ball, pressing it so deep into the hole as to make it unplayable.

The point arose whether a penalty stroke should be incurred for lifting, but it was decided that the ball having been moved by an agency outside the game the rule should not apply.

Because no light is provided in casual rooms at Bodmin (Cornwall) Workhouse, tramps are said to bring their own candles to light themselves to bed.

TEACHERS ASK SUSPENSION OF SUMMER SCHOOL

County of Peterborough Institute Sees Over-supply of Teachers.

INSPIRING ADDRESS.

President Mrs. Jackson Pictures High Calling Of Teaching Profession.

The members of the Peterborough County Institute, in annual conference here, were highly favoured yesterday with an address from their president, Mrs. H. B. Jackson. Every teacher was inspired with the vast field of opportunity which was opened up to them in the guiding of young Canadians.

The president pictured the innocence of the face worshipping the teacher.

"Here," he stated, "is the opportunity to teach the duties of citizenship—as overcoming selfishness; need of co-operation and love for our antive land." To further impress the necessity of instilling proper ideals, she cited the case of that in the German schools after the Franco-Prussian war. Such ideals resulted in untold destruction to the world as well as indelible disgrace upon the misled people. The boys and girls of to-day will be the leaders of to-morrow. Thus where they lead, depends on the teaching they receive.

Every subject in the school curriculum presents a field where seeds may be dropped. Incidentally repressing carelessness and encouraging thrift, honesty and integrity are fundamental in building up Canada.

Democracy in concrete form might be learned in school, taking the form of democratic control of school society. On one regretful point, warning was given, that being the training of the mind more than the heart.

Mr. Wendt favoured the audience with a very inspiring report from O. E. A. He especially urged the members to become members of the federations.

Close Summer Schools.

In view of the over-supply of teachers in Ontario, the Institute passed a resolution suggesting to the Department of Education that the Summer Model Schools be closed (which hitherto had enabled teachers for the outlying districts to receive training) in order that properly qualified teachers may receive positions.

In the afternoon Mr. Lees very ably outlined the new course of study. He placed great stress on mastering the course in detail. His optimistic outlook was contagious. Rumours, which of late have been disseminated by the press, regarding the omission from the course of study of the so-called fads and frills, in reality, cultural subjects, were exaggerated. "Such a course, said Mr. Lees, "would surely be impoverished."

Favors Home Work.

Mr. Lees led his hearers to believe that, although home work is largely abolished, still he would advocate a sane assignment of home-work for two reasons. Firstly, that home-work forms a strong binding force between school and home—a condition fundamental to successful teaching, and secondly, that sane, broad-minded parents would not object to such an assignment.

HUNTING MOOSE AND DEER.

For many years hunters from Ontario have realized that the very best hunting grounds are located in the vicinity of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Hunting clubs, as well as small parties, appreciate the necessity of arrangements made in advance. Canadian Pacific agents are qualified to give you accurate information as to where deer, moose and big game can be found. They are plentiful in the French River district to Sudbury from French River; along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Sudbury to Chapleau, and also in the Maritime Provinces, as well as in the district around Sharbot Lake.

Ask any Canadian Pacific agent for a copy of the Hunters' Pamphlet or write W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, C. P. R. Building, Toronto. 10,17,24,31

BRIGHTER

Pig iron production again increased during March. It has been advancing steadily for five consecutive months.

Iron output is the leading weathervane of general business, excepting possibly soft coal production. Both forecast the future.

Times look promising for at least six months. For a national election year, there is unprecedently little nervousness and apprehension—among business men. Politicians have an epidemic of St. Vitus dance, and with good reason.

ALTROCK'S COACHING SAD

He lasts Just a Third of an Inning on Sidelines.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.— Nick Altrock failed to last the full nine innings. The veteran funmaker drew a regular assignment when he took his place on the coaching lines at first base in the third inning yesterday, but have lasted just one-third of an inning.

It all happened when Nick failed to give Walter Johnson the right signal after the Senators' pitcher had opened the inning with a single off the left field wall. Johnson was trapped easily between the bases.

Nick however, did not fail to get Bucky Harris's signal and hastily gave way as coach to Nemo Liebold.

AT THE ROYAL.

ROYAL CROWDED TO DOORS LAST NIGHT

Squib's Honeymoon and Andy Gump the Main Attractions

Seats were at a premium last night at the Royal and by all indications will be for the balance of present program at least. Betty Balfour so well known for her clever work in many British comedies was never seen to better advantage than Squib's Honeymoon her last adventure of the series. The laughs come thick and fast and there are times a lump comes in your throat and you nearly reach for your handkerchief. The story as nearly as we can remember without making any notes is as follows:

Squibs, having relinquished the management of the Squibs Milk Co., Ltd, to Miss Fitzbulge, Father and Honeybunn, applied herself to the business of getting married to Charlie Lee. The latter started rehearsals of the wedding ceremony with Honeybunn as the bride and Father as the parson. Came the wedding eve, and the conjunction of Squibs' desire for a last hectic night of spinsterhood and Father's anxiety to learn "Yes, We Have No Bananas" had very funny results. The wedding morning was a horror of hustle to all except the bride, but the best man was the least of all interested in the elusiveness of the ring and other items necessary for the complete equipment of a bashful bridegroom. However, apart from the shock experienced by Father in the sudden discovery that several policemen had invited themselves to the wedding (to cheer Charlie), the whole party got away without further mishap and the village turned out to do the honours.

After the wedding, Squibs and Charlie went through a wild whirl of happiness in cutting the cake and bidding adieus in the few minutes that remained before departing to catch the honeymoon express for Dover, Calais, Paris, and romantic realms beyond.

So they arrived in a country where the railway porters and officials do not speak Cockney and funny things sometimes happen to honeymoon couples For instance . . . . well, of course every honeymoon is a great adventure—in more senses than one!

The wedding scenes are beautiful and impressive with far more attention to detail than is usually found in productions of comedy trend, and the honeymoon is one mix-up after another. Two performances are advertised for Saturday night at 7 and 9 o'clock.

"HAPPINESS" LOOKS LIKE ANOTHER PRIZE

Robert E. Sherwood, famous movie critic of the New York Herald and Life, classed Laurette Taylor's "Peg O' My Heart" as one of the best pictures made during 1923. Mr. Sherwood's selections were made with a great deal of discrimination and have been looked upon as accurate criterion.

Now Mr. Sherwood declares he is looking forward in keen anticipation to include "Happiness", Miss Taylor's latest picture, to be shown at the Royal Theatre, Monday, on his list of perfect pictures for 1924.

"Happines" was adapted to the screen by Hartley Manners from his stage play of the same name.

AT THE CAPITOL.

J. WARREN KERRIGAN HAS TITLE ROLE IN GREAT PIRATE DRAMA SOON TO COME TO CAPITOL.

J. Warren Kerrigan, famous for years as one of the greatest of screen stars, covered himself with new glory in his great work in "The Covered Wagon." But hardly had he finished with his work in this great epic of the plains, than he was signed up to play the role of the Pirate Captain in Sabatini's celebrated romance, "Captain Blood," and now he is gathering new laurels galore for "Captain Blood" is being greeted as a screen play every bit as big and, perhaps, even more thrilling than was "The Covered Wagon." The dashing, hard-fighting Captain Blood of Sabatini's story, with his hordes of swachbuckling buccaneers, is a role that was just made for Kerrigan and he does the best work of his long career in this picture. "Captain Blood" tells the story of an English doctor wrongly accused of treason, who is sent for life as a convict and slave to Barbadoes. Rebelling at the hideous treatment he receives on the island as a slave, he leads the slave-gang in a revolt, and by a piece of clever strategy he captures a ship and sails away to freedom. Barred from home and England by his conviction for treason, he and his comrades are forced to become pirates. In the months to come, they develop into the most notorious of all the pirates that roam the seas and are hunted by the fleets of two countries. How Captain Blood fell in love with the Governor's daughter, and later, won his pardon, must be seen on the screen to be appreciated. The great novelty of this picture lies in the terrific sea battles between the Pirate ship and some French men-o'-war. This is the first time that actual ships were ever used in a sea fight for a picture, and to make these scenes necessitated building six old-time ships. The picture is alive with thrilling incidents and is rich in the romance of days when an English sailor was good for three ships of any other nationality. By special arrangement the Capitol has arranged to present 'Captain Blood' the first three days of next week, commencing Monday. Regular prices will prevail for this great attraction.

HIS BEST IS "TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES," DECLARES NEILAN.

Famous Director Realises Dream to Film Thomas Hardy Novel.

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles" is his greatest screen production believes Marshall Neilan, who filmed Thomas Hardy's classic novel for Metro-Goldwyn. Not only its greatness as a novel, but its peculiar fitnes for adaptation to picture, assures its qualities as a photo-play aside from the direction or acting, Neilan declares. "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" is the Capitol offering to-day and to-morrow.

"A great many people who are acquainted with past and present literature regard Thomas Hardy as the greatest living writer," Neilan states.

Ideal for the Screen.

"Certainly 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' is his greatest work. It is unusually well fitted for the screen. It is, without question, the greatest story I have ever attempted to film, and it is more easily adaptable to the screen than any other novel with which I am familiar.

"Hardy has a grasp and an understanding of life which no other modern writer has. His stories are made realistic by their simplicity, and the manner in which they are told makes them excellent screen material.

"In my opinion, Blanche Sweet, as Tess, and Conrad Nagel as Angel Clare, are perfect in their parts. I truly believe Miss Sweet has given a fine performance in 'Tess' than in 'Anna Christie.'

His Best, He Says.

"I think 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' is one of th biggest stories ever written. It is the greatest picture I have ever made—of that I am sure.

"Miss Sweet and I have been planning and hoping to make a picture of 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' for three or four years, and at last we have gratified our ambition with results that are satisfying to us, at least.

"Incidentally, it is the first picture we have made together since we have been married."

AT THE REGENT.

BARKER'S LATEST SCORES A BIG HIT.

"Broken Barriers" Has Rousing Story and Real All-Star Cast.

"A gallery of favorites" and a rousing good story make Reginald Barker's new production for Metro, "Broken Barriers," which opened last night at the Regent Theatre, one of the most entertaining pictures of the year. Rarely, if ever, have we seen such a collection of stars in one picture.

James Kirkwood plays the part of Ward Trenton, in love with Grace Durfrand (Norma Shearer), but unable to obtain a divorce from his wife (Winifred Bryson). Mr. Kirkwood and Miss Shearer are the individuals around whom the plot revolves, but there are many side angles which require exceptional acting, and they certainly get it.

Mae Busch appears as a friend of Grace Durland. She is in love with Tommie Kemp. The latter role is taken by Adolphe Menjou, and he once again demonstrates that his great success in Chaplin's "A Woman of Paris" was no mistake. Then there are George Fawcett, as the girl's father; Robert Frazer, Ruth Stonehouse, Winifred Bryson, Robert Agnew, Vera Reynolds, Edythe Chapman, Margaret McWade and George Kuwa. You can't beat that cast!

The story is a powerful pictorial discussion of the divorce question—its worth, its uselessness and the part it plays in the philosophy of the younger generation. When Trenton cannot get a divorce, Grace is all for defying convention, but the former realizes they are playing with fire. The girl, however, says she will never give him up.

She changes her mind the next night when she learns from her brother that he has become embroiled in an affair with a flapper friend. She goes to say good-bye to Trenton at a party given by Tommie Kemp. In going back to the city, Tommie, who is intoxicated, overturns the automobile. He is killed, while Trenton is badly injured. Mrs. Trenton's decision, after she learns her husband may be an invalid the rest of his life, clears the air for the couple, and the picture ends happily.

"Broken Barriers" is a Louis B. Mayer presentation through Metro.

Dramatic and Thrilling Story with Popular Star will be seen here To-night and To-morrow.

What police and social workers say is one of the finest motion picture stories of criminals ever screened comes to the Grand Theatre to-night and to-morrow.

It is "White Tiger," a Universal-Jewel special production. The star is Priscilla Dean, and the author-director Tod Browning, the same star-director combination responsible for that amazing under-world screen play of two or three years ago, "Outside the Law."

Miss Dean has in "White Tiger" the role of an underworld queen of the society brand. She is one of three famous or infamous, international crooks, who operate in the exclusive circles of society and turn up their aristocratic noses at jewels worth less than fifty or a hundred thousand dollars.

Properly speaking such a story is not an "underworld" story in the final sense, and yet as police records show, the underworld is in its final haunt, the headquarters and the training ground of the society class of criminals so it all amounts to the same.

For the other two players to complete the trio of million dollar thieves Universal engaged Wallace Beery of "The Flame of Life" and "Robin Hood," and Raymond Griffith. Matt Moore is the leading man, having the one "straight" character to play in the story. There are only four principals and the dramatic strength of each role consequently should be greater than in the larger casts.

One of the most interesting situations in "White Tiger" shows the trio of international thieves quarrelling among themselves, unwilling to trust each other, and at the same time believing an honest meddler, whose only purpose is to draw the girl from her path of crime, to be a crook, waiting for his chance to demand a "divvy."

SENATORS DEFEAT NEHF, M'GRAW'S ACE, AND FORCE SERIES TO LIMIT FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE 1912

Washington Win Sixth Game 2 to 1 With Rushing Recovery of Fighting Spirit.

ZACHARY'S CURVES AND FLOATS BAFFLES

Peckinpaugh's Injury Aggravated and Will Keep Him Out of Deciding Game.

HITS WERE BUNCHED

Nehf Held the Senators to Four Hits—Fans Lined Up Early for All-Night Wait.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Launching a spectacular comeback just when their hopes seemed to be at their lowest ebb, Washington's battling Senators captured the sixth game of the 1924 world's series Thursday, from the New York Giants, 2 to 1, and forced baseball's championship struggle to the limit for the third time in history and the first time since 1912.

President Coolidge, establishing himself as a dyed-in-the-wool fan by watching his second game of the series, joined in the tumultuous enthusiasm of a victory-frenzied crowd of 35,000 that saw "Bucky" Harris, the dark-haired young manager of the Senators, come through with a pinch hit that clinched one of the most thrilling triumphs of the series.

Harris, with two out, and the count two strikes, and three balls, slashed a single to right in the fifth inning, that scored Peckinpaugh and McNeeley, with the Senators' only runs, and broke up a sensational southpaw battle, between Art Nehf, Giant ace, who had won the first game and Old Tom Zachary who came through with his second triumph of the series.

Two Senators Hurt.

It was a costly victory for the Senators, however, for in a dramatic ninth inning when the Giants threatened a rally, two stars of the Washington infield were injured on the same play, and Roger Peckinpaugh again was lost to the team and will not be able to play in the seventh and deciding game at Griffith Stadium today.

Peckinpaugh, veteran shortstop whose return to the game for the first time since Monday, had plugged the gaping hole in the Senators' inner defence and put new life into the entire team, aggravated a leg injury in fielding Meusel's hot smash over second base. He made the stop and throw to Harris that forded Kelly and checked the Giant rally but there was a fresh cry of alarm from the stands when Joe Judge was hit in the groin by Harris' low throw and fell to the ground in pain.

Peck pulled up limping and finally had to be half carried from the field, but Judge recovered sufficiently to continue the game and Taylor, substitute infielder, who himself is just recovering from an injury to his throwing hand, which was swathed in bandages, went to third base to finish the game for Bluege, who moved over to Peck's place at short.

"Peck" Brilliant.

The fresh injury to Peckinpaugh, aggravating the pulled tendon or "Charley Horse" which forced him out of the series last Monday, was particularly tragic, not only for Washington's championship hopes but for Peck himself, who celebrated his return by playing in spectacular fashion. The veteran fielded brilliantly, starting a double play that stopped the Giants in the fourth, besides helping to quell the final charge of the McGrawmen in the ninth, while he had a perfect day at bat, starting the winning rally and scoring the first Senator run.

His absence, already keenly felt in the defeats which the Senators sustained in two out of the three games at New York, will severely handicap Washington's final bid today for the club's first world title.

The Senators were outhit yesterday, seven to four, but they made them count and won because of the never-say-die spirit instilled by Harris, that has kept them in the thick of one of the game's most sensational championship battles.

Fighting Spirit.

Undiscouraged by the second defeat of their great pitching star, Walter Johnson, in Wednesday's game, Washington came back with a rush that upset the best laid calculations of McGraw, accomplished the downfall of Nehf and aroused in the capital city last night, an outburst of enthusiasm that has been unprecedented this season, even in the club's first pennant victory.

No better proof of this high spirit could be given than the tremendous rush at Griffith Stadium's box offices after the game for tickets for today's deciding battle. Thousands left as early as the seventh inning to get the favored places in line while additional throngs stormed the ticket windows and formed lines that were blocks long last night.

Zachary, after a shaky first inning, when the Giants scored their only run on Frisch's double, and a fielder's choice by Young, who scored on Kelly's long single, weaved a magic spell over the Giant bats that volleyed and thundered base hits Wednesday. Instead of Johnson's fast ball, on which they thrived, the Giants had Zachary's slow curves and tantalizing floaters to contend with yesterday and they made no effective headway against them. After the third inning, when Frisch doubled for the second time, with one out, and got to third on Young's infield tap, only to be stranded by Kelly, the Giants failed to get a runner to second base. In the sixth inning span, only four reached first base, and Zachary was always dominant in the pinches, aided by some great defensive work which Sam Rice featured with three spectacular running catches in right field.

Prevented Home Run.

One of Rice's catches checked the Giants' spurt in the first inning and robbed "Irish" Meusel of a home run. Kelly, who had just driven in Young, was on first with two out when Meusel drove a long hit to right centre. It seemed headed for the bleachers there, a favorite mark for "Goose" Goslin, Senator slugger, but Rice, running backward, jumped and speared the liner with his gloved hand a few feet in front of the stands.

Betwen the third and the ninth when the Giants made their final threat "Hack" Wilson was the only man to reach first. He singled in the fourth, with one out, only to be doubled up when Jackson hit to Peck. He got another one-base blow in the seventh with one down, but this time Jackson and Gowdy were unable to advance him.

Young fouled out to start the ninth but Kelly singled and was replaced on the bases by Southworth as McGraw marshalled his forces for a last stand. Meusel smashed one of Zachary's curves over second base. Peck got it on the run but his injury became apparent as he stopped and limped after making the throw to Harris. There was a double play in sight but Harris' throw hit the dirt, escaped Judge's glove and hit him on the leg. Meusel was safe, but after the Senators had re-organized their forces and given first aid treatment to their casualties, Zachary struck out Wilson to end the game.

Nehf Impregnable.

Except for their fifth inning rally when they bunched two of their four hits, the Senators found Nehf impregnable. Nehf left the game in the eighth in favor of a pinch hitter and "Rosy" Ryan, a right hander, got through the eighth without damage.

Washington missed a fine chance to score in the first inning, however. It was due chiefly to a bad bit of base running by Harris but the young manager fully redeemed himself for this fault, in the eyes of the fans when he came through with his winning blow in the fifth.

McNeeley walked on four straight balls to start the first and was forced by Harris, who started to steal second before Nehfs windup and was caught easily at second base. Rice followed with a long single to right and Goslin was safe when Kelly kicked his bounder around a play on which Hrris would have been able to score, but Judge closed the inning by striking out.

Peckinpaugh singled in the second, but was stranded, while with two out in the sixth, Bluege walked, stole second, and Peckinpaugh was purposely passed, only to have "Muddy" Ruel, who has been the batting bust of the series, again fail in the pinch.

FIRST RUGBY GAME.

P.C.I. and Peterboro Juniors at Exhibition Park Saturday.

The P.C.I. will play the Excelsiors Peterborough Junior O.R.F.U. team to-morrow afternoon at the Exhibition grounds. This should be a good workout for both teams and the fans should size this opportunity to get a line on ball teams.

Max Sloane has a squad of hefty youngsters who feel at home in rugby uniforms and who are practising faithfully almost nightly at the Central Park. Here is Sloane's list of players: Ward, Mulholland, Brown, Turner, Cowan, Ashmore, Salmon, Adams, Dundas, Fleming, Ridpath, Marchen, Dinsdale and Milloy.

The Excelsiors contrary to rumour are entered in the O.R.F.U. and will meet the winner of the Toronto group. The coach would welcome any fellow under twenty-one by September 1, who wants to get into the game.

Coach Carl Browne has had his Collegiate squad working away regularly at the Oval and the players are getting to the pink. A week ago Saturday they beat North Toronto, schedule last Saturday with Harbord. Mr. Browne has some plays this year that will open the eyes of the bystanders and which are guaranteed to set the opposition dizzy.

PHELAN SOCCER FINAL SATURDAY

KICK-OFF AT 3.30

Charity! charity! will be the object of the Phelan Cup re-play final on Saturday afternoon to all local soccer fans when the two contestants —Thistle and Quaker Oats will again endeavor to settle who shall have custody of the silverware for the 1924 season.

The hour of starting has been arranged for 3.30 prompt, with the amicable Jack Clark again handling the whistle. The venue has been changed to the spacious and ideal Nicholls' Oval which will be groomed and marked off by the genial caretaker, Mr. Kitney, who also makes splendid arrangements to accommodate the players with a dressing room.

Last Saturday these two teams put up one of the best cup tie games ever wintessed in the city. It was a thriller from the kick-off to the end. In the first forty-five minutes the elusive Quaker Oats centre forward put his team in the limelight with his classical play, while Richmond, the local sharp-shooter, gave an exhibition of soccer manipulation against Bain's citadel that carried everybody to a high fever of excitement, and his two goals were of a high order. The local soccer fans who take the game in on Saturday at the Oval will not be disappointed.

Taking the teams individually, Curtis the Thistle goal keeper, is a local boy who received his tuition from Will Jones. Anderson and Rae at full backs have been partners all season and the former played his first game with the C.G.E. team as right half, while the latter trotted out for the Comrades first. Also his centre half man Jackson, being an old Comrade player, and two new comers, Ross and Carmichael supporting right and left, they having had splendid junior experience in Scotland. The forward line honor belongs to "Wag" Hotston, who has been playing for years in the city and came into prominence first with the church league team ten years ago, that won the Burnham shield. Next comes Burgess with experience in war-time soccer and player for the Owls and Thistles. The rest of the line up have only become attached to the team the last two seasons.

The Quakers collectively speaking, contains some of the old Gordon Cup finalists of two seasons ago. Bob Willshaw, after the war, turned out for the Caledonians and has been attached to his present team ever since along with his brother Jim. Then comes Frank Honor, as always a Quaker player. Metcalfe made his initial appearance as a Machine Gunner and was in the team that defeated the great C.G.E.. Joe Mayette is a local East City boy who can always be depended upon to give his best. The rest of the team are all new faces to the Quakers team, and in Scott and Gardner they have two dandies while Bain, who gave such a great exhibition of goal keeping was considered the elite of goalies in junior circles around Glasgow and west of Scotland.

With all this talent on view the spectators should see a clean, fast game at the OVAL.

BEER BY THE GLASS.

Vancouver's Ballots Gave a Majority of 78 For This Measure.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 10. (Canadian Press).—The recount of the beer by the glass plebiscite ballots held in the city on the day of the provincial election, June 20, was completed today, the result indicating the city was definitely for beer by a majority of 78. There were 16,498 votes for, and 16,420 against.

SYMPATHY OF FANS ALL WITH JOHNSON

Crowd at Polo Grounds Pays Veteran Washington Pitcher Remarkable Tribute.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Even in defeat Walter Johnson was idolized by the fans who crowded into the Polo Grounds for the fifth game of the world's series yesterday. Not until the last man out in the ninth inning and the last ray of Washington hope had faded did the multitude cease to urge the Senators to rally and win—not so much because they wanted to see the Giants beaten, nor because they wanted a Washington victory, but because they wanted Walter Johnson to reap the reward due him for eighteen years of faithful service.

Johnson, the pitcher, had won the admiration of the throng, Johnson the man had won its respect and even the hardest-hearted fan in the stadium and the most ardent supporter of the Giants must have felt a lump in his throat as the Washington ace wearily plodded from the pitcher's box to the clubhouse. His gait was slow and his shoulders drooped, but even then the crowd stood and cheered him as he passed, admiration for the pitcher somewhat lessened, but respect for the man as great as ever. The saddest chapter in baseball history had been written.

What few Giant rooters there were in the stands when the game started were won to the cause of the great pitcher before the game was well under way. As the innings passed and the Senators' bats failed to drive in the runs that would give the pitcher something to work on, the cheers grew greater and greater in volume as defeat appoached.

Fans' Pleading is in Vain.

"Win it for Walter," was the cry that went up from thousands of pleading spectators. But the Senators failed to hit and the tired arm of the big pitcher failed to still the thundering attack from the Giant bats.

As the crowd filed out the victory and the defeat were forgotten in the downfall of the idol. Few discussions as to the Giants' chances of conquering the Senators again and winning the World's Championship were heard. The hum of conversation that arose all had to do with the downfall of Johnson. Everyone seemed saddened. There might have been compensation had the great pitcher lost after a struggle, as he did in the first game of the series, but yesterday he was hammered and hammered mercilessly, the hits ring ing off the Giants' bats with the sharp crack that means a ball hit squarely. Any pitcher might have done as well, but no other pitcher would have received the ovation accorded the Washington moundsman under the same conditions.

For the fifth time in this series the capacity of the stands, bleachers and pavillion were taxed to the limit There were thirty-two fewer persons present yesterday than there were on Tuesday, but only because the games were closed earlier. A total of 49,21, the second largest crowd that ever paid to see a game in the Polo Grounds, passed through the admission turnstiles and some 3,000 others saw the contest in capacities that did not require the purchase of tickets.

There hasnt' been an empty seat anywhere at any game so far and each battle has found hundreds of spectators overflowing into the aisles and standing at the back rail of the stands, catching glimpses of the proceedings at intervals. The tenseness of the series, the exciting finishes of each game and the intercity aspect have brought greater interest to the world's series of 1924 than to any other in the history of the game.

Rooting Again is for Visitors

Again a New York crowd lifted the banner of the invaders and turned against a New York team. The Senators were backed yesterday by perhaps even a greater number than cheered them on in Washington. There were some 12,000 more persons in the stands than saw any of the games in the national capital, and probably less than that number yelled for a Giant victory.

At one time, when the men of John McGraw started a rally, there was a rhythmic clapping, which traditionally means the pleading of the multitude for a run. But the outburst was faint and short lived. On the other hand, when ever a Washington rally got under way it seemed as if every person in the park urged the Senators on.

Never before has a baseball team been received at home as the Giants have been during the present series. The psychology of the crowd may be explained in many ways. The New York fan has seen the mighty Giants conquer all National League teams for the past four years and has seen the team win two of the last there worlds' championships, while Washington is playing in the world's series for the first time in history. The Giants are more or less under a cloud, as a result of the charges against two of their number, which caused their banishment from the game. Washington has a Walter Johnson, respected and admired throughout the country, and he stands for the Washington team.

THE GAME SUPREME.

Washington Infield Suffered By Injury Of Redoubtable Pekinpaugh.

WASHINGTON, Oct 10. — (Canadian Press)—It's only a ball game but when Washington and New York met to-day in the seventh and deciding contest of the World Series, the pulse of the nation beat with balls and strikes. An informal half holiday was celebrated before the score boards and loud speakers of streets and corner stores in cities and villages throughout United States and Canada.

President Coolidge who set the pace for an excited and willing fandom yesterday and slipped out to the ball yard, arranged to leave state matters behind him for a few hours this afternoon.

Harris and McGraw compelled to trust to youths of untried capacity in to-day's deciding game. "Curly" Ogden carried the Washington Standard and McGraw picked his starter from a swarm of uncertain twirlers The line-up follows:

Washington—McNeely, cf; Harris, 2b; Rice, rf; Goslin, lf; Judge, 1b; Bluege, ss; Ruel c; Taylor, 3b.; Ogden, p.

Senators — Lindstrom took McNeeley's hopper and got him at first. Harris went out on strikes. Barnes tossed out Rice who hit a weak, rolled to the pitcher.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Opening Battery for Senators:—Ogden and Ruel; for Giants Barnes and Gowdy.

and Innings:—

Giants —Terry hit a hot grounder to Harris who threw him out. Bluege robbed Wilson of a hit back of second and nailed the batter with a fast throw. Taylor took Jackson's grounder and made a wild throw to first. Gowdy singled into left field, Jackson halting at second. Barnes struck out.

No runs, one hit, one error.

Senators — Goslin struck out. Frisch made a leaping catch of Judge's hot liner. Bluege went out Jackson to Terry.

3rd Innings:—

Giants—Taylor threw out Lindstrom at first. Frisch bunted and was safe at first. Young popped to Judge. Kelly forced Frisch, Bluege to Harris.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators — Taylor fanned, Ruel went out, Barnes to Terry. Mogridge struck out.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

4th Innings:

Giants—Terry struck out. Bluege threw out Wilson, making pretty play on his puzzling drive. Bluege also got Jackson at first.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Senators—McNeely fanned. Harris got him run into the left field stands. President Coolidge and whole crowd arose and cheered. Wilson came in and made shoe string of Rice's seeming hit. Terry took Goslin's grounder and beat him to the bag.

One run, one hit, no errors.

BERLIN, Oct. 10—(United Press)—Owen D. Young has reached that enviable position where he can name his own salary, and has fixed the amount he shall receive while serving as temporary Agent-General of the Reparations Commission.

His salary as he named it will be —nothing. However, the co-author of the reparations plan is anxious to return to America and resume his duties as counsel for the General Electric Company.

"I don't want to stay away too long," he said laughingly, "for I see my company's stock has gone up in my absence, and they might find out they could do without me."

MORE EVIDENCE IN HOME BANK TRIAL

Account Gibbs Breaks Down In Cross Examination By Gordon Waldron.

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press).—In the trial of Clarence F. Smith, Home Bank director, this morning H. J. Trihey, K.C., of Montreal, appeared in his gown to take an active part in the defence. He was welcomed for the bar by Judge Coatsworth. Thomas Gibbs, who was assistant chief accountant of the Home Bank, broke down and wept when under cross-examination by Gordon Waldron, after he had exclaimed: "I wish I had never seen the Home Bank." Gibbs had just told of refusing to make certain entries for the statement of information from which the annual report of the bank was made.

Gibbs said he objected to putting the Western Canada Pulp and Paper Company security down as a bank asset. O. G. Smith, the chief accountant, put in this item after Gibbs had refused, and it was contained in the annual statement. As well as telling Smith that this account was bad, the witness said he may also have told Mr. Calvert. He said that he felt his position keenly and that since the failure he had received numerous letters blaming him. It was at this point that the witness broke down.

"Had you any suspicions as to the stability of the bank?" asked Mr. Waldron.

Between sobs the witness said that he had because he didn't like the look of certain securities, including the Ogilvie and Manufacturers' Holding.

"You told nobody your suspision?"

"No, because I was bound to secrecy by rules of the bank, and I was loyal to the bank."

BOB STURGEON MAKES RECORD

Added Half Inch to High Jump Mark of Rev. M. O'Brien in 1909.

RESULTS OF EVENTS

Robert Sturgeon set up a new record for the Senior High Jump in the P.C.I. Field sports yesterday afternoon when he bettered by a good half inch M. O'Brien's feat of 4 feet 11 inches which has stood unbeaten since 1909. It was the last event of the jumps and as yet no one had come within speaking distance of the records set up when Sturgeon stepped in to clear the bar for his supreme effort. He cleared the 4 feet 11½ inch mark easily but failed after three close ties when the pole was raised an additional inch.

The jumps were held on the ground to the east of the school and many competitiors were out. The events were fairly well broadcasted and every inch was keenly chased after. Carl Woods won two events the running broad and the running hop-step and jump. Harry Cheu who shone in the races took the distance in the standing broad and came up well in most of the events. Woods was second in the high being an inch below Sturgeon's record

The pole vault will be held next week and this promises to be an event in which a new record will be hoisted. The road race will also be held next week.

The standings.

EVANS RESENTED SLUR ON JOHNSON

American League Umpire Challenged Fan Yelling "Take Him Out."

NEW YORK, Oct 9.— A cry of "Take him out" when the Giants were making it rather uncomfortable for Walter Johnson in the eighth inning of yesterday's game almost caused a battle in the press section at the Polo Grounds. The words hardly had been uttered when a verbal barrage was fired at the offender from all sides. Bill Evans, the American League umpire, who was two seats behind the cause of the disturbance, took out time from his press duties to come to the defense of Johnson.

At one stage the argument grew so warm that near-by noncombatants rushed in to keep the gladiators apart. Evans explained later that the remarks had hurt him so keenly that he simply forgot himself.

"It hurt to have some one shout that old line at a great player like Walter Johnson," said Evans, "I realize it was rather unprofessional for me to step out and assert myself. I can stand for anything they call me when I'm out there, but it seemed a shame to raz a man like Walter, who was in there giving everything he had Win or lose, Johnson is a great player and deserving of all the honor that is showered upon him."

BILLY EVANS SAYS

The player who makes the most noise on the ball field isn't necessarily the most courageous.

Very often the exact opposite is the case. The silent men of the diamond are often the gamest.

In the pinch, the silent athlete is usually the most dangerous.

Everett Scott, star shorstop of the New York Yankees is one of the best posible examples I could offer to substantiate such a truth.

"Silence and Fun" is what his teammates call Scott. He doesn't say much, but when he speaks his lines carry a punch. He has a keen sense of humor.

Since 1916 Scott has been doing his bit without even pausing for a second breath. Since the opening of that season he hasn't missed a major league ball game.

Scott believes in action rather than words. He always gives his best. Has been a marvel in the field, and while not a great hitter, is always dangerous with men on.

The Washington club has such a player in Osee Bluege, clever third sacker.

Bleuge performs along the lines of Scott, is blessed with ability in about the same direction, being a much better fielder than batsman. Like Scott, he does his best work at the bat in a pinch.

With Washington in the world series, don't overlook Bluege.

True, there is much more color to the player who has a breezy line of chatter, the player who gets into an occasional argument with the empire, the player who talks back to the fans as they "razz" him.

Such a player, perhaps, draws more money at the gate, but he is no more effective because of his eccentricities. Often they take something away from his work.

While the fan likes to see the colorful player in action, still some quiet performer with great natural ability is often the more popular hero.

Take the case of Walter Johnson, star pitcher of the Washington club. Johnson does his work in a methodical sort of manner. He never criticizes his teammates or the umpires. He accepts all happenings as the break of the game.

Yet, it is questionable if baseball has ever produced a greater idol than Walter Johnson. His name will live forever in the memory of every baseball fan and all lovers of clean sport.

Walter Johnson typifies all that is fine in the athlete. He is great, yet modest. Success has in no way changed him. Just the same today as the outstanding start of the game as when he broke in, a rank busher.

Any athlete not possessing the gift of gab need not feel that he is working under a handicap.

There is Walter Johnson for instance.

ROSENEATH WINS CLARKE TROPHY

Defeated Hastings Team In Final Fixture By Score Of 12 To 5.

HASTINGS, October 10. — Roseneath baseball team won the Clarke Cup by defeating the Hastings team in the second game of the home and home series in Hastings on Wednesday afternoon. The score ended 12 to 5.

A large crowd was in attendance to witness one of the most exciting games of the season.

The game started sharp on time at 3 o'clock, the visitors having the first innings, and before the local boys could bring themselves together their opponents tallied six runs. From this on to the end, the game could be called a good brand. Stevenson pitched an excellent game and had it not been for a few overthrows in the field the score would have been different.

Chas. Davidson of Campbellford, handed the game satisfactorily except for two runs which the local fans feel they were robbed of. The result of this disheartened the players considerably.

Varco of Roseneath was on bases and was fair in practically all decisions.

The Hastings baseball club extend congratulations to the Roseneath team on winning the cup, for their excellent sportsmanship during the season.

The score was:

Hastings	022000001—5
Roseneath	602111001—12

The line-ups:

Roseneath: Davey, Montgomery, Bates, Moore, B. Thackery, Dr. Armstrong, R. Thackery, Leach, Turner, Shearer.

Hastings: Pitcher, Stevenson; Catcher, N. Scriver; short Stop, J. Collins; 1st base, Herrington; 2nd base, Cruickshank; 3rd base, P. Lemoire, Centre Field, Lambert; Right Field, Keogan; Left Field, D. Lemoire.

Spares: Dodd and Howard.

Belief Is That Conservatives Will Form Next Government In Britain.

STRATFORD, Oct. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—The Right Hon. H. A. L. Fisher, minister of education in the Lloyd George Government, who is touring Canada, stated his belief here last night that the Conservatives would form the next government in Britain. "The Conservatives had the largest group in parliament just dissolved." he said, "and I do not look for any great change in the coming election."

If they returned with the same grouping the King would, in all probability, send for Stanley Baldwin to form a government.

WEDDING BELLS.

GREENE—ELLIOTT.

Stirling Methodist Church was the scene of a pretty wedding at noon on Thursday, when Mildred Evelyn, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Elliott, was married to Mr. George W. Green, eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. G. Walter Green, of Peterboro. Rev. C. W. Barrett performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in her dress of white crepe de chene, embroidered in beads; the tulle veil, fashioned in cap effect, was garlanded with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaids were Miss Hazel Elliott and Miss Gladys Green, who wore dresses of almond green pleated georgette and silver lace, trimmed with gray squirrel, and wore silver bandeaux. They carried pink tea roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Dr. John C. Green, and Mr. D. Kenneth Anderson, of Peterboro. Messrs. Thos. Solmes and Walter French were the ushers, and Mrs. D. M. Halpenny played the wedding music. During the signing of the register, Mr. Gerald Clute sang "Because."

Following the marriage service, a dainty wedding luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Green left on a motor trip to New York City and other places in New York State. Upon their return they will reside in Peterboro.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome sealskin coat, trimmed with squirrel. The young couple received many valuable gifts.

WOULD CREATE NEW DEPARTURE IN LIQUIDATION

No Application Yet For Company To Assume Home Bank Assets.

WILL BE SCRUTINIZED.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—No application has been yet received by the Secretary of State for the chartering of a company to take over the assets of the defunct Home Bank, and it is understood here that such action, when taken, will create a new departure in the liquidation of banks.

The Companies Act, under which the charter is reported to be applied for, is altogether silent on the subject of winding up of banks. It contains no specific permission for such a course, nor does it contain a specific prohibition. The application, when received by the Department of State, will be scrutinized to see whether it comes within the four corners of the Act, and if it does so, it is believed that the charter will be granted. The functioning of the company, after it is chartered, is not under the control of this branch of the Government and its operations will be guided by the regular laws in relation to liquidation and any other business transaction which may grow out of the arrangements. The amendment made to the winding up act last session, of which Liquidator G. T. Clarkson is reported to be taking advantage, provided for the transfer of the assets of any concern in liquidation "for such consideration as may be approved by the court."

STRIKING ATTACK.

Sir Hamar Greenwood Re-enters Lists In British Politics.

LONDON, Oct. 11. — (Canadian Press).—At the opening of the campaign for what universally is described as an "unwanted" election, perhaps the most striking incident is the extraordinary attack on Premier MacDonald in the Intellectual Laborite Review, the new Statesman organ of the Independent party.

Paying a tribute to Mr. MacDonald's remarkable gifts as a Parliamentarian, the article says he has been the best Foreign Secretary Great Britain has had in a quarter of a century.

Yet the article proceeds to say that Mr. MacDonald as Prime Minister has been an utter failure.

The writer then trounces Mr. MacDonald because "he missed no opportunity of insulting or deriding those who placed him in power.

"Mr. MacDonald lacks generosity. As Prime Minister he seems too thin skinned to live."

Sir Hamar Greenwood re-entered the lists of British politics last night when he was nominated "Anti Socialist and Constitutionalist" candidate for the division of East Walthamstow, one of the outlying London districts.

TWO CARS WRECKED AND TWELVE PERSONS HURT

Six London Collegiate Students In Smash—None Serious.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 11.—Twelve people were injured when a gaily bedecked motor car, laden with eight joyous young passengers from Komoka, on the way to the collegiate field day sports, crashed into a motor car with four occupants on the Pipe Line Road yesterday 150 feet west of the city greenhouses.

Both cars were completely wrecked, seven girls and one boy being rushed to Victoria Hospital by ambulance and by High Constable Wharlon, who drove up to the scene of the accident just one minute after it occurred.

Dr. Pritchett, of the hospital staff, said the injuries received were not of a serious nature and that most of the young people would be able to leave the hospital last evening. They were suffering from shock and cuts about the head received from flying glass. Hattie Culver, of Byron, is suffering from concussion. Mary Crone had her collarbone broken and Hazel Frank is suffering from injuries to her head.

Both machines were badly wrecked, and the lack of serious injuries is considered hardly short of miraculous. Miss Mary Mathewson, driving the car containing the students, kept her head during the accident, and, though injured, prevented more serious results.

TONG WAR NEAR IN CHINATOWN

New York Police Shut Off District As Hip Sings Prepare To Battle On Leongs.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Time rolled back thirty centuries in Chinatown when four thousand members of the Hip Sing Tong prepared to battle to the death with nine thousand On Leongs.

Anticipating a bitter tong war, the police barred that area of crooked streets from sightseers.

Besides a cordon of uniformed men thrown around that section of Pell and Mott and Doyers streets twenty-five picked men from the Special Service Squad waited throughout the night in the shadows of darkened doorways, listening for the first shot.

The trouble started months ago in Pittsburgh. It shifted to Cleveland. But the spark snapped on Wednesday night when Lom Hang, a restaurant man and a member of the Hip Sing was shot to death by an On Leong.

Clan Vs. Clan.

That put tong against tong.

Only an hour before Lom Hang fell, Tom Fong was shot by a detective. Fong, standing in the middle of Pell Street, had suddenly pulled a pistol and started shooting. Lee Yan Doo, a merchant, was struck by one of the thirty shots fired in that battle.

The gravity of the situation was shown by the attitude of Johnnie Keyes, "Mayor of Chinatown." Sitting in his Mott street cafe at dusk—back from the door, so no shots would reach him—he said:

"Both the Hip Sings and the On Leongs are my friends. But tonight I wouldn't take anybody through Chinatown sight-seeing.

"Why not? Well, a stray bullet might hit one of them."

Deserted Even in Day.

Mott and Pell and Doyers, so alive with gambling humanity when peace reigns, were deserted even during the daytime. But peering through shaded windows could be seen little groups of Chinese, who had doffed their American clothes and returned to their native garb—the sign of warfare.

The few white men who ply trades there—and they are mainly beggars and shoestring hawkers—huddled together in the Rescue Society's quarters on Mott Street. None would venture forth.

Knelt and Canted.

A Chinese chop suey resort, where top prices are charged affluent Americans, was barred. Through the curtains on the second floor landing a strange sight was seen. Forty Chinese—all clad in flowing robes — were bumping their heads on the floor where American feet had stepped the fox-trot twenty hours before. From them a monotonous sing-song arose.

A four-story rookery on Mott, where Pell Street ends, was seemingly empty at 3 o'clock. From that hour until 4 o'clock no one entered or left it. At 4.10 detectives in the street saw human forms, all in Chinese garb, crowding into the second floor.

And from them, even through the closed windows now curtaining them from view, came another sing-song. It was a meeting of the On Leongs. They must have used underground passages to get there.

LABOR'S NEW BOSS?

Ramsay MacDonald is losing his hold on Britain's Labor party. So, at least, many London politicians think. And John Wheatley (above), Radical Minister of Health in MacDonald's Cabinet, looms as his most probable successor, they say.

BODIES HIDDEN UNDER CEILING

Gruesome Discovery Of Three Infants' Bodies In New York Attic.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11. — Electricians wiring the two-family brick house at No. 714 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, on Thursday, discovered the bodies of three infants hidden between the ceiling of the upper floor and the roof.

The bodies were wrapped in newspapers dated 1916, 1918 and 1922.

Elmer C. Lagerholm, of No. 290 Flatbush avenue, was wiring the upper floor when he smelled an offensive odor above the ceiling. He called his brother Harry B. Lagerholm, working with him, and they investigated.

Hidden in the darkness of the space between the ceiling and the roof were three large parcels. The men drew them out and took them to the light. They immediately reported the gruesome nature of their discovery to Captain McCluskey of the Grand Avenue police station, who hurried detectives to the place.

Family there Long.

The occupants of the top floor of the Lincoln place house, it is said, lived there for eleven years.

They are Anna, Gertrude and Alice Hennessy, and their brother, William. Anna, the eldest is 39, and is a school teacher. The brother is 20. A Mrs. Anderson lives below.

The space between the roof and the ceiling of the apartment could have been reached from the outer hall of the house through a trap door. Anyone gaining entrance through the street door and familiar with the plans of the building could have gained access to the hiding place.

Perhaps Dead at Birth.

The three bodies were taken to the Brooklyn morgue. From the size of the bodies it is believed death came at birth. If it is possible to hold autopsies the truth or falsity of this supposition may be established.

Lincoln Place is a short highway of snug and pretty homes, the residents of law abiding type. The coming of the police to one of the houses is an extremely rare event.

Last night detectives were questioning the neighbors in the hope of getting a clue to the person who disposed of the three dead infants.

PRINCE IN WINNIPEG TILL SUNDAY MORNING

Greeted By Main Street Crowds—Next Move Is To Chicago.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Winnipeg last night is the honored host of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who arrived here at six p.m. from Calgary over the Canadian Pacific Railway. Through dinner hour crowds which thronged Main Street and accorded him a very hearty welcome, the Prince proceeded at once to the Fort Garry Hotel, where he occupies the Royal suite, until his departure on Sunday morning for Chicago via Duluth.

Shortly after his arrival the Prince was the guest at dinner of Sir Augustus and Lady Nanton. A dance followed, attended by many of the city's younger set.

No formal programme was arranged for His Royal Highness today, but it was thought he would play golf and possibly visit again the Squash Racquets Club. In the evening he will dine at Government House, and later attend a dance in his honor, given by Mr. and Mrs. George Galt.

GERMAN LOAN IS OVER-SUBSCRIBED

Assistance Of Many Financiers Asked To Help Will Not Be Needed.

NEW YORK, October 11. — The $200,000,000 German loan, under the Dawes plan, of which more than half will be launched in the United States on Tuesday, has been oversubscribed by $100,000,000, it was announced last night.

Despite the fact the official announcement of the flotation will not be made known until to-day many banks and corporations originally expected to put over the loan have been notified that their assistance will not be needed. Financiers point ing to the huge over-subscription as a record in international finance, said that the public—the man on the street—rather than the big financial institutions, will take the great bulk of the bonds.

Before the books are opened on Tuesday morning for subscriptions, it is stated by prominent bankers here that the United States' $110,000,000 allotment of $200,000,000 allied German loan under the Dawes plan would be oversubscribed. It is stated that inquiries already indicate an over subscription of about one billion dollars; the bonds will bear seven per cent. interest, but priced as they are at 92, the actual yield will be 7.75 and they will run for 25 years.

It is generally understood that the Italian banks, headed by the Bank of Italy, will underwrite 1,500,000 pounds of the German loan.

Raspberries Gathered in Port Hope Garden; Blue and Yellow Violets Bloom At Niagara

PORT HOPE, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—J. W. Uglow, of Lakeshore Road, yesterday harvested 36 boxes of raspberries off a comparatively small patch of bushes. The fruit has been shipped to Montreal.

VIOLETS BLOOMING.

NIAGARA FALLS, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)— Men working on the banks of Chippawa Creek yesterday found large patches of blue and yellow violets blooming. This is claimed to indicate a mild winter.

MORE RASPBERRIES.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. T. M. Martin, first avenue east, yesterday morning gathered a quantity of luscious ripe raspberries from her garden, thus emphasizing the North Bay claim as "Niagara of North."

There is nothing unusual about the above. Mr. J. H. Callander, 575 Weller street, and many others in this city and district, have had raspberries for weeks and are still picking them. They are an ever-bearing variety.

A $10,000 WEDDING

It cost William J. Glason, actor, just $10,000 to marry Helen Storey of San Francisco. His wedding ended the famous Broadway anti-marriage compact made a year ago between Glason and two fellow-actors. The three, all deserted by their wives, posted forfeits of $10,000 each for any who should wed again within 10 years.

HORSE RACES WERE BIG FEATURE AT WARKWORTH'S SPLENDID FAIR

Classified Race Run Off In Two Sections Because Of Numerous Entries—Blewett's "Major Hal" Ran Away With Free-For-All In Three Heats—Big Attendance Friday.

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITS EXCELLENT.

(By Staff Reporter.)

Cars of various makes may come and go, and automotive admirers may declare that the day of the horse is at an end, but a wayfarer at Fall Fairs might have excellent reasons for doubting such a statement. What the Fall Fair would be without the horse is difficult to imagine. It probably wouldn't be at all. At these district affairs, the horse, whether he be a heavy draught animal or one of the slim-legged racers, is one of the main objects of comment and interest. Yesterday, at Warkworth, the little hamlet in the hills where all the countryside, despite the fact that its nearest railway station is ten miles away, gathers for its annual Fair, the biggest item on the afternoon's programme was the horse, for the Warkworth races are one of the biggest drawing cards in its yearly Fair.

Warkworth's seventy-fourth two-day annual exhibition passed into history yesterday with a record of being one of the most successful Fairs in the annals of the directorate. The week's postponement of the usual dates worked no hardship to the Fair this year, for the weather was all that could be desired. Short sleeves and light dresses were suitable apparel for the fair sex yesterday afternoon, and a warm autumn sun shone down on a crowd that reached an attendance mark of nearly five thousand.

Warkworth's Fair this year, although the annual event in this district is always successful, seemed to be better than ever. It was one of the very best of the long list of such exhibitions in this section of the country, from the point of view of a general all-round Fair, both in varied exhibits and in the quality of entertainment offered its patrons.

Good Races.

The races were particularly good. The aggregation of swift goers gathered at Warkworth yesterday afternoon was worthy of a racing card at Peterborough or any of the bigger centres. The directors have the reputation of extending excellent treatment to horsemen, and their Fall Fair profits in the quality of the racers that are brought to try their luck on the splendid wide dirt track. The enthusiasm manifested in the efforts of the various horses manifests itself somewhat uncomfortably here, as far as the horses themselves are concerned. The different races were run off yesterday on a track that was thronged with devotees of the sport of kings, the animals coming head on almost on the toes of their admirers.

The spirit of co-operation that seems to imbue the directorate of the Warkworth Fair Board was evident everywhere, not least in the way the patrons of the sport of kings cheered their favorites as they came down the crowded stretch.

A feature of yesterday's events on the track was the form displayed by Laura the Great, entered in the second division of the classified race, which was run off in two sections, on account of the numerous entries. With her veteran owner, James Timlin, of Cobourg, in the gig, the black mare got away on a bad start in the first heat, running a good way behind her competitors. In the three following heats, she showed her heels to the quartette laboring behind her, and was plainly a favorite with the crowd. In the second division of the classified race, the score stood as follows: 1st, Laura the Great (Jas. Timlin of Cobourg) 3-1-1; 2nd, Betty Azoff ((. Elmhirst of Indian River) 1-2-2-3; 3rd, Prince R. (Charles Fife of Indian River), 2-3-3-4. Butcher Girl, owned by W. J. Stacey of Wooller, 4-5-4-2, and Bourbon Boy, owned by J. Langdon, of Colborne, also ran. Time: 2.39 1-2, 2.39 1-4, 2.39 1-2.

The first division of the classified race ended as follows: 1st, Just Jack (R. Elmhirst, Keene), 1-1-1; 2nd, Lillian Patch (S. Watson, of Cobourg), 2-3-2; 3rd, Mr. Healey (S. Blewett of Peterborough), 4-2-3. Mamie Brino, owned by George Barry of Haliburton, 3-4-4, also ran. Time: 2.15 1-2, 2.49 3-4, 2.49 1-4.

Two Peterborough horses took first and third money in the free-for-all, and another won second money in the 2.20 event. The free-for-all was won by Major Hal, S. Blewett's horse, 1-1-1, and Frank Montgomery's Bessie Brooks came third, 2-3-3. Second place went to Herman E., owned by Dr. Benson, of Belleville, 3-2-2. Time: 2.19, 2.19, 2.19 1-4.

In the 2.20 race, first place was won by Polly Stout (R. Elmhirst, of Keene) 1-1-1, second by Bub (E. Jones, Peterboro) 2-2-4, and third by Mack R. (C. Armstrong of Have-

MACDONALD FAILURE AS PREMIER SAYS INDEPENDENT LABOR'S PAPER

Best Foreign Secretary in Quarter of Century, But as Prime Minister Responsible For "Absurd Political Predicament"—Flouted Liberals Who Maintained Him In Power.

INJURED HIMSELF BY VANITY.

LONDON, Oct. 11. — (Canadian Press).—At the opening of the campaign for what universally is described as an "unwanted" election, perhaps the most striking incident is the extraordinary attack on Premier MacDonald published in the intellectual Laborite review, The New Statesman, organ of the Independent Labor Party. If the attack faithfully represents the feeling of any large section of the party and is not the outgrowth of some personal feud, it is considered as implying a serious crisis within the ranks of the party.

Paying tribute to Mr. MacDonald's remarkable girfts as a Parliamentarian and Foreign Secretary, the article says some of the highest officials in the Foreign Office consider he has been the best Foreign Secretary Great Britain has had in a quarter of a century and that if he is not mourned elsewhere, he certainly will be mourned at the Foreign Office.

Failure As Premier.

Yet the article proceeds to say that Mr. MacDonald alone is responsible for having brought the country into the present "absurd political predicament"; that, while he has been an immense success as Foreign Secretary, as Prime Minister he has been an utter failure.

The writer then trounces Mr. MacDonald because "he missed no opportunity of insulting or deriding those who placed him in power." This reference is to the statement that Mr. MacDonald consistently refused "to eat out of Mr. Asquith's hand."

Complaining of Mr. MacDonald's intense personal feeling against Mr. Asquith and his flouting of 4,000,000 Liberal votes, the article continues: "But Mr. MacDonald lacks generosity. He is jealous of those whose personal competition he fears. . . . As Prime Minister he seems too thin skinned to live."

Aloof From Colleagues.

With much more in the same vein the article complains of what it terms Mr. MacDonald's ridiculous "amour propre, vanity and aloofness from his colleagues," and says:

"If he could sink his vanity and prejudices and admit the possibility of there being other men besides himself, he might be in power another year or two."

The article on the whole seems to lament Mr. MacDonald's refusal to co-operate with the Liberals. On this point, however, The New Statesman is not considered in political circles to represent the general view of the Laborites.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE.

Second Alarm Sent When a $12,000 Fire Threatens Toronto Block.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—A spectacular blaze, which caused a reflection that could be seen for a considerable distance, broke out in a five storey brick building owned by McBridge Brothers, produce merchants, Church street, last night. The flames were shooting out of the top floor of the building when the first sections arrived, and it was feared the entire block would be imperilled and a second alarm was sent in. The loss by fire and water was estimated at $12,000, mostly covered by insurance.

Plebiscite Bulletin

Oct. 11, 1924 PETERBOROUGH No. 19

Government Control and Revenue

MR. A.: "If we had Government control it would give us a substantial revenue, and it would, perhaps, help business, too. Goodness knows, taxes are high enough. I hear that in Quebec they are practically running their whole good-roads programme with money derived from liquor revenue. If we could get control of ——"

Mr. C.: "We have control now. Prohibition is the only real control."

Mr. B.: "Surely, Mr. A., you are not going to take the booze side of this question."

Mr. A.: "No, no, no, Mr. B., I am against liquor, but I am a business man, and I have my taxes to meet, and here's a chance of raising revenue from those willing to provide it."

Mr. B.: "But, Mr. A., you don't raise revenue from liquor; you only collect it. Revenue can be raised only out of wealth created or extracted. There is the product of the forest, mine, soil; or labour is applied to raw material, and its value enhanced. That added wealth is all that can pay revenue. The liquor traffic under any auspices adds nothing to the wealth of the community, but rather destroys it. You cannot raise revenue from liquor; you can only collect it."

Mr. A.: "Well, they are collecting it down in Quebec."

Mr. B.: "How much do they collect?"

Mr. A.: "I don't know, but it is up in the millions."

QUEBEC'S BIG LIQUOR BILL.

Mr. B.: "I can tell you. The people of Quebec paid to the dispensaries in 1922 for liquor purchased $19,698,773, and for beer, purchased from license-holders, $27,527,255, a gross outlay of $47,226,028. The gross revenue received from the sales of liquor was $3,772,825, leaving a net loss of $43,215,213."

Mr. C.: "Say! That is, the Province of Quebec paid a commission of 1,145 per cent. for the collection of this revenue—whew! That's got the Home Bank financing beat a mile."

Mr. A.: "That certainly doesn't look like good business."

BUSINESS FAILURES IN QUEBEC.

Mr. B.: "It isn't good business and the proof that it isn't is shown by the fact that there are far more business failures in Quebec than in Ontario."

Mr. A.: "What is your proof?"

Mr. B.: "Here are the figures, according to R. G. Dun & Co., for the past three years:

Business Assignments.

Quebec ..... 3,319 Ontario 2,172

"That is 1,147 more for wet Quebec than for dry Ontario.

Excess of Liabilities Over Assets.

Quebec ..... $36,613,992. Ontario ..... $16,068,997.

"Failures in Quebec represented more than twice as great a monetary loss as in Ontario. And the worst showing of all in the Province of Quebec is for the years 1922 and 1923, when their liquor system was running in its full glory.

"Hence Government control is unprofitable for revenue and equally so for business."

War Material Captured.

Dynamite Bombs and Ammuition Seized At San Jose de Las Lages.

HAVANA, Oct. 11. — (United Press). — Six hundred dynamite bombs, and one hundred thousand rounds of ammunition and other war material have been seized at San Jose de Las Lages in connection with political disturbances.

Simultaneously Mario Menocal, Conservative nominee, issued a manifesto "to the people of Cuba" at San Diago de Cuba, charging President Zaiaas with deliberate hampering of the Conservative campaign.

The President had consistently refused to allow the facts surrounding the tragedy at Camaguey last Sunday, when eight were killed and many wounded in political rioting to be made public, Menocal said.

RUGBY NEWS.

The Excelsior Junior O.R.F.U. team met the P. C. I. team in an exhibition game to-day. This marks the first appearance of the junior team that will represent Peterboro this season and nothing strenuous was attempted. For although the Excelsiors have been working out each night under the coaching of Max Sloan, they are far from being in condition. There are still opportunities for any ambitious juniors to try out with this team and anyone who has not reached the age of 21 before Sept. 1st, and is desirous of playing Rugby, will be welcomed at the practices at Central Park at 5.15 each evening.

Some of those who are turning out and who played for the same team last year, are "Pete" Mulholland, Jack Turner, Johnny Ward, Bert Cowan, Lionel Browne, John Ashmore and Dinsdale.

Ira Dundas and Johnny Marcker are making their official debut into the Rugby game this year, while Stan Fleming and Jack Ridpath who are out with the team this year have played considerable Rugby before. Salmond of Bracebridge is also playing his first Rugby.

HORSE RACES

lock) 5-5-2. Cy Winger, (W. Elmhirst, Indian River), 3-4-3, and Roy Mack (C. Watson, of Cobourg), 4-3-5, also ran. Time: 2.22 1-4, 2.21 1-2, 2.19 1-4.

In the third heat of the 2.20 race, Roy Mack had a bad tumble, throwing his driver, but recovered in time to finish the race.

Prize money for the races totalled $400. Judges in the stand were J. F. Richards and A. Alliston, of Cobourg, timers J. R. Battisby, of Campbellford and R. T. Dunlop, of Frankford, starter J. W. Kingsley of Cobourg. The genial president of the Fair, J. F. Freure, to whose enterprise and activity much of its success was due, also officiated in the box.

The special award of $5, given by Rev. J. B. Ferguson, for the best roadster single horse in harness, once around the track, had five entries, and was a well-contested event. It was won by William Taylor of Burnley. Thomas Cobbledick came under the wire first but was sent back for running.

Tug Of War.

The tug of war, an event that proved extremely popular with the crowd, came to grief before a final decision was reached. A group of strong men from the township of Percy contested with a group from Seymour, battling valiantly at either end of the rope. In two trials, a win apiece was recorded. A third attempt fizzled out, as one side began to pull before the judge's signal to start was given. A final heat of the last race intervened, and by the time this was ended, the Percy battery had melted into the throng. Seymour laid claim to the prize money on the ground of default of the final test by their opponents.

In the ring, judging went on all afternoon. There was a good exhibit of horses in every class, with no particular section outstanding in number of exhibits or in quality, with the exception possibly, of several fine teams. Miss Helen Shaw, of R.R. No. 8, Peterboro, won three first awards, for the open class, for the best lady's turnout, and the J. F. Freure Special of five dollars for the best lady driver.

The Baby Show.

An item in the afternoon's programme that proved of much interest to the fair sex and a generous sprinkling of their masculine attendants also, was the baby show, the audience for this portion of the entertainment filling the large tent provided for the purpose. From the ten babies on view, Aileen Wilce of Castleton received first award of $5.00, Jean Cobbledick of Warkworth the second of $3.00, and Barbara Telford of Brighton third of $2.00.

Little Jean Cobbledick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cobbledick of Warkworth, also captured the $25.00 prize given by H. L. Walker for the most perfect baby under one year of age, whose father, mother, brother, or sister is insured in the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The judge was Dr. Wade of Calgary.

Prohibition posters in profusion adorned the interior walls of the baby show tent.

Although there was no Midway at Warkworth yesterday, there was an abundance of amusement in the thirty or more booths and tents set up in long parallel lines facing each other in the field encircled by the race track. There were refreshment booths and games galore, including the gentleman with the dusky poll exhibited through a large opening in a sheet, and the many booths that go to show that the shadow of the kewpie never grows less. A vendor of watermelons had his load directly behind the tents, and was doing a good business.

Good Stock.

In the excellent buildings provided by the directors, for Warkworth has some of the finest buildings in this district on its Fair Grounds, there was a good showing of stock and poultry, with the ladies' work housed in the main building. In every section, there was a big increase in the number of entries which totalled this year over 3,800, an increase of about 1,600 over last year's total. Exhibitors from as far away as Renfrew and one from New Westminster, B.C., were entered.

Poultry were housed in strong wire coops placed on stands in two large tents. There were about 700 birds, with every class well represented, strength leaning possibly to Leghorns and Rhode Island Reds. The number of extra large birds was noticeable in many of the classes. The largest showing of water-fowl of any year ,with a total of nearly 200 fowl, was shown, Pekin and Rouen ducks being in the minority.

Large exhibitors in the poultry section were H. Curtis of Warkworth, H. S. VanAllen of Stirling, A'yea & Son of Colborne, and James Coyle of Warkworth.

Mr. VanAllen and G. Hutchinson & Son of Warkworth had most of the water-fowl also.

A few rabbits pigeons, and guinea fowl added to the interest of the show. A colony of ducks, the overflow of the exhibit, were coralled between wooden crates outside one of the tents.

In the main building, where music from the Heintzman Company's section added to the attraction of the exhibits, there was on display upstairs a truly remarkable collection of ladies' work, in sewing and embroidery of every description. Every class was represented, from plain sewing on house dresses to the most intricate and dainty stitches in fine tatting and crochet, in an exhibit not surpassed by the display on view at the big Peterboro Fair. The collection, which had hundred of pieces of fine embroideries, also included such things as a collection of stuffed and mounted birds, a display of snapshots, of burnt wood pieces and punched brass, a novelty in carved pieces of white wood lettering representing the Lord's Prayer, mounted on a black base, pressed leaves, a very artistic selection of reed work in piano and bridge lamps and fancy small baskets, and a nice lot of paintings.

Large Exhibitors.

Among the exhibitors of paintings were Miss Annie Irwin of Port Hope, Mrs. W. J. Lawson of Hilton, and Mrs. S. A. Lockwood of Belleville. In the fancy work line, Mrs. L. Jamieson of 544 Harvey Street had on exhibit between fifty and sixty pieces. Other big exhibitors were Mrs. R. Logan, Renfrew, Mrs. W. A. McColl of Wooller, Mrs. W. J. Lawson of Hilton, Mrs. S. A. Lockwood of Belleville and Mrs. W. F. Osborne of Rossmore.

Mrs. W. A. McColl of Wooller was also a big exhibitor in the collection of preserved fruits and jellies that formed an attractive portion of the downstair showing, along with Mrs. W. J. Lawson of Hilton, Mrs. A. Masters of Wooller and Mrs. C. T. Maycock of Warkworth. Mrs. McColl also exhibited butter and honey and grains. In the grain section, in which a large showing was on view, other big exhibitors were S. D. Terrill of Wooller and James Herrington of Brighton. Messrs. Terrill and Herrington had big exhibits of roots, along with W. J. Lawson of Hilton and Peterson Brothers of Warkworth.

The baking, displayed under cover on long tables, made a noble showing. Mesdames S. L. Terrill of Wooller, L. Evans of Norham, C. Maycock of Warkworth and G. Adams of Hilton had large exhibits.

A notable showing of apples was one of the outstanding features of the fruit and vegetable section. There was a small exhibit of cut flowers, and C. W. Palliser, florist, had some fine roses and cyclamen on view.

Musical Contest.

At the Heintzman section, with W. W. Weaver in charge, lady players under eighteen years of age were contesting for prizes offered for the playing of two selections each. The first award of $5 went to Miss Ola Goodfellow of Percy Township, the second of $3 to Miss Lulu Mitchell and the third of $2 to Miss I. Bowen.

On the grounds during the afternoon, music was supplied by the Wooller Band and the Scotch musicians of the Arlie Marks Stock Company. Outside of the main building, the Women's Institute of Warkworth was disposing of some of the raffia and reed handicraft of the workers in the Institute for the Blind in Toronto. Peterboro's blind man, J. R. Brownlee, had a sale of his work on the grounds also.

In the long building adjoining the main edifice were housed the cattle, about 250 head, with Holsteins in the lead, and all classes except Ayrshires well filled. Peterson Brothers of Norham had the single herd of Aberdeen-Angus, the "Angus duddies" of the old Scotsman. Big exhibitors of Shorthorn cattle were Chas. Bedford of Campbellford, Jewel and Atkinson of Roseneath, Wm. Mitchell of Warkworth and Lorne Evans and Peterson Brothers of Norham.

R. Honey and Sons of Dartford had a big herd of Holsteins, and A. H. Ward of Dartford showed these also. Grade cattle were exhibited by Garnet Kerr of Campbellford and Peterson Brothers of Norham.

In the trim, open-sided buildings devoted to them, sheep and swine were shown, with the surplus of the sheep showing, of which there were about 150, in the pig section. Swine numbered about 100, in Tamworths and Yorkshires, with biggest exhibitors in R. Honey and Sons of Dartford, Wm. Greenley, G. Hutchinson and Sons and Runciman Brothers of Warkworth, and Peterson Brothers of Norham.

Sheep were shown by J. G. Honey of Roseneath, Runciman Brothers, G. Hutchinson and Sons of Dartford, Wm. Rose of Meyersburg and Geo. Holdsworth of Cobourg.

To Ring Or Not to Ring.

Evidently the controversy over the proper advertisement, as to whether swine should be "rung" or "ringed," which agitated the minds of the Warkworth Fair Directorate early this year, was settled, for item number twenty-two of the regulations, in prominent black type, asserts that "all hogs must be rung or otherwise not judged."

Large exhibitors of horses in the heavy classes were Wm. McGee & Sons of Hastings, Merrill Brothers and Fred Richardson of Dartford, and Wm. Ross of Meyersburg. Large exhibitors of carriage horses were W. J. Lawson of Hilton, S. P. Hagerman of Belleville, Geo. Poole and Geo. Cummon of Warkworth, Willard Pollock of Morganston, N. Henley of Colborne, and F. Richardson of Dartford.

Judges in the various sections were as follows: For light horses, Wm. Maher of Cobourg; heavy horses, Wm. Cruse of Bewdley; dairy cattle, R. Holtby of Port Perry; beef cattle, George Holdsworth of Cobourg; sheep and swine, R. J. Garbutt of Belleville; poultry, C. A. Wilson of Whitby; grain, seeds and roots, Wm. Smith of Brighton; fruit, B. Scripture of Brighton; ladies' work, Mrs. Collier of Picton; domestic science, Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Wm. Glover of Warkworth; dairy produce, Frank Wilson of Colborne.

Officers for the 1924 air Board are:

President, J. F. Freure, vice-president; G. Poole, 2nd vice-president; W. A. Kelly, secretary-treasurer; J. A. Armstrong, the latter an energetic and busy official; directors: Dr. Allen, H. L. Walker, H. Watters, Wm. Ross, John Condon, C. H. Curtis, H. Skinkle, F. White, R. Honey, W. Atkinson, W. H. Nelson, F. H. Moore, W. S. Nelson, C. Hutchinson, H. Aylesworth; auditors: H. L. Walker and Dr. Allen; Honorary Board: S. Black, G. Runciman, W. R. Losie, R. Walsh, P. S. Ewing, and W. Stewart; Committee for ladies' work: Mesdames T. Allen, Twiddy, and C. Maycock.

The oldest living ex-president of the fair, Mr. Samuel Black, aged 93 years, was an interested spectator at the fair yesterday afternoon.

One of the smallest patrons who attained prominence by separating himself from his family was a small three year old boy lost all afternoon, and crying through most of it. His plight was broadcasted from the judges' stand where a kind hearted member of the governing board forsook his supervision of the track to try to comfort the lost baby, but a broadcasting of his situation through the megaphone failed to find a parent or parents up to a late hour.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Each winter found the Man family cellar well laden with canned fruits and marmalades and jells and goods of all sorts "put up" by Mrs. Mann.

In the preservation of foods by canning the most essential things are the sterilization of the foods and the utensils as well and the sealing of the cans against germs.

It is not the oxygen of the air that plays havoc, science has shown, but bacteria and microsopic organisms.

Cotton is now used to some extent in plugging both cans and bottles, for the bacteria cannot pass through sterilized cotton.

Thus if cans are opened in later months and the contents found to be spoiled it will have been due to lack of care either in sealing or cooking.

When fruit is preserved with sufficient sugar the necessity of tight sealing is much less, as the thick sugary sirup is not favorable to bacterial growth.

Charge Settell With Theft.

Less Serious Than Forgery—Cheque Was Genuine.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—When E. C. Settell, former secretary to Sir Adam Beck, is arraigned at Hamilton on Monday in connection with his action in cashing a $29,925 cheque and then making for the border, the charge to which he will be asked to plead will be that of theft.

Looking at the peculiar set of circumstances, wherein the cheque which Settell cashed has been determined to have been a genuine one, the Crown has decided that this is the proper course to take. It is a much less serious charge than forgery, but more serious than false pretenses. The maximum penalty is seven years.

MAXWELL-CHRYSLER COMPANY GROWING

Twenty-five New Distributors Added In Recent Months.

Mr. John D. Mansfield, general manager of the Maxwell-Chrysler Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., of Windsor, is on a six weeks' trip through Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, making a survey of business conditions. He left Windsor on October 3.

Since Mr. Mansfield became general manager of Maxwell-Chrysler last April that organization has grown at the fastest rate in its history. Twenty-five new distributors have been added in recent months, in addition to numerous dealers throughout the Dominion.

At the start of his trip the company had more requests for distributor and dealer franchises for Maxwell-Chrysler cars than at any previous time, he said.

Despite conditions not as promising as those of a year ago, the company reports unusually good sales, particularly in its Maxwell division. Chrysler sales have been impeded by inability to meet the demand for it ever since its first announcement ten months ago.

THE WORLD'S SERIES.

It is difficult to think of a sporting event that has aroused such intense interest throughout the length and breadth of this Continent or that has been marked by such an unanimity of sentiment in favour of one of the contesting teams as the World's Series between the New York Giants and the Washington Senators, so gallantly won yesterday by the latter.

It is certain that ninety-nine out of every one hundred people who evinced any interest in the series—and there were people who do not know the difference between a base on balls and a sacrifice hit who were keenly interested in the result—were fervently hoping that the Washington team would be victorious.

The fact that the Senators for the first time in their history were participating in the World's Series had much to do with the popular support given them, but even more potent was the desire that Walter Johnson, one of the greatest and cleanest of baseball stars, should have a World's Series victory as a climax to a long and honourable career.

Johnson had his cup of bitterness in two of the games when he went down to defeat, but fate reserved his crowded hour of glory for the closing innings of the decisive battle when the old master made his last stand and emerged with the laurels of a wonderful victory on his brow.

Even those who do not follow baseball will thrill in common with the enthusiasts who do at this dramatic, last-moment triumph for the veteran pitcher.

It was a great series, and a wonderful climax, capped by victory for the people's favourite.

THE PLEBISCITE CAMPAIGN.

A puzzled citizen was heard to declare yesterday that after listening to the arguments of a prohibition advocate he was inclined to believe that he should mark his ballot for Government control, whereas the remarks of Moderation League supporters were enough to convince him that he should vote in favour of the retention of the Ontario Temperance Act.

His opinion is passed on for the benefit of both camps.

Undoubtedly much that is being said by both sides, when measured with the yard-stick of logic, will fail to meet the test.

That is accounted for by the fact that on each side in this issue are people who are extremists one way or the other.

They have heard or read or imagined a stock lot of arguments that they retail freely but that are of little real value in convincing the many undecided voters who are endeavouring to come to a final conclusion as to their duty on October 23rd.

It is just as futile to attempt to picture the Ontario Temperance Act as an almost perfect piece of legislation as it is to describe Government control as a panacea for all the evils of intemperance.

There is much to be said for and against both policies, and for the benefit of the many who are anxious to use their ballots to the best advantage, it is to be hoped that something more illuminating will be produced than the "drink and gasoline" poster of the prohibitionists or the "time for a change" placards of the Moderation League.

SYNTHETIC THINGS.

France has given the world many priceless gifts, including Bernhardt and the Grand Guignol Theatre, says the Montreal Star. But nothing she bestowed has held such high promise for humanity as synthetic gasoline, which her chemists believe they will shortly be able to produce on a paying commercial basis. It is true that the synthetic pearl, "Parisian pearls," has saved the day for many a dowerless Dowager and penniless Prince, and the synthetic ruby, sapphire and emerald have enabled many a gay butterfly to cast the illusion of riches about her. But just think of synthetic gasoline at, say, ten cents a gallon! When that day comes, the Tin Lizzie will be doomed. Errand boys will ride in baby limousines, and even the scavenger will career about our streets in a petrol-driven vehicle.

Palm oil and castor oil are principal ingredients of the synthetic "gas," it seems. The childhood of the universe may find cause for great rejoicing at this fact. But we wish the great French chemists would direct their attention to the conversion of synthetic gin into synthetic gasoline also. Since the decision across the border that good Hollands was bad for good Americans, there has been an unconscionable quantity of synthetic gin cast abroad and some of our good Canadians have occasionally imbibed it—accidentally—with disastrous results. Now, if the synthetic gin were convertible into synthetic gasoline, the prohibition agents would have work ready to their hands and the troubled waters of the Hudson and other rivers would not be rendered malodorous by the pouring upon them of the millions of gallons of synthetic spirits captured daily by the prohibition enforcement armies of the U. S. A. It is a bright idea, when you come to give it a thought.

A LIVING DEATH.

A man serving a life sentence dies at an average of 10 years after the penitentiary gates clang behind him. So claims Warden Whitman of Joliet (Ill.) prison.

He predicts: "If Leopold and Loeb are alive 20 years from now, they will have accomplished the miraculous."

How many readers would prefer the death penalty to life imprisonment? Monotony is about the worst thing in life. The worst is loss of liberty. That is, on the basis of physical predicaments, not including catastrophes of the emotions.

The tiger in his circus menagerie cage has it easy compared with the cell inmate who has no hope of release.

Unlike the tiger, the man has the power to think, which intensifies the incarceration.

Days in the prison workshop; nights in a cramped, barred cell. This is not life. It is a living death.

People who are against capital punishment put forward many logical, emotional and otherwise convincing arguments.

It is, admittedly, barbaric for the Government to take human life. An interesting debate could be arranged, as to whether it isn't even more barbaric and cruel to lock a man up until death releases him.

Small wonder, the average life of a "lifer" is only 10 years. Existence is monotonous enough, at times, even when we have our freedom. On the other hand, there is no such thing as real freedom.

We are all prisoners serving a life sentence imposed by customs, regulations, the system of economics and the inexorable laws of nature.

The problem of getting enough to eat and to clothe, warm and shelter ourselves is a life sentence in itself for the average person.

We boast of freedom. But the only liberty we have is political. Industry, customs and superstition still have us jailed. Their slave-master power is, fortunately, slipping, though very slowly.

BETTER FEELINGS GAINING.

Shafts of sunlight are breaking through the clouds which have been heavy over Europe since the Armistice, says the Ottawa Journal. When Germans, even the most socialistic of them, can applaud the League of Nations as happened Sunday at a great meeting in Berlin, inference is reasonable that a better feeling than for years past is gaining way on the Continent. The discussions at the Council of the League of Nations are evidences that kindly feelings, or at least sensible ones, regarding each other are growing among most of the European peoples. They are not so proud and stand-offish as they used to be, with regard to each other. No longer are their relations dictated by pompous and arrogant chancelleries dominated by traditions of caste and pride; everybody has become more democratic and more accommodating; international affairs are getting the benefit of a great deal more of frank talk, and a great deal less of political pride and etiquette, than was the usual case prior to the great war. In short, the present idea in Europe seems to be, to a greater degree than ever previously in the world's history, that there is necessarily a good deal of inter-dependence among the civilized peoples of the world, and that in any case talking is better than fighting.

How much did any one of the chancelleries or councils which governed the various European powers before 1914 know or care about the internal problems of any other nation than that which they directed, or how much were they interested in the condition of the masses of their own people other than as these afforded revenue or political or military support? The rulers of the European peoples lived in a little upper world of their own. That has changed; the new men or councils who hold power in most countries are representative at least of broader strata of humankind, and are broader-minded and less thin-skinned in their discussions and dealings with each other. From this fact alone, even if there were no League of Nations, a considerable hope would appear of the permanent peace of the world in future.

THE DISTRESSFUL ISLE.

"English parties may come and English parties may go, but the banshee of Ireland will haunt you still!" Thus spoke Tim Healy to the British House some 40 years ago, and today, with a Labor Government in the seats of power, his words are coming true. Ireland, in fact, is back in the old vicious circle of 1913, with Sir James Craig in Sir Edward Carson's old Ulster role of beating a warlike drum, and with Mr. Cosgrave in John Redmond's predicament of being threatened with extinction by extremists.

In 1916 John Redmond, Joe Devlin and John Dillon met Sir Edward Carson and Bonar Law in Lord Beaverbrook's Cherkley Court and talked far into the night. They were seeking a settlement of the age-long feud between North and South, and it has been told how the conference broke down over a single parish just as dawn was stealing over the Surrey hills.

Today, again, it is the question of the boundary. The old actors, the Redmonds and Carsons, the Dillons and the Bonar Laws are gone, but the old issues, the old hates and fears, grounded in centuries, in history, legend and tradition, are as potent to divide.

What the outcome of it all will be no one can tell. Britain, carrying out an article of the Treaty which Lloyd George and Birkenhead made with Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith, has appointed a commission to determine the boundary between the North and South. But Ulster has declared that "what we have we hold" and says that she will not be bound by what the commission decides. Sir James Craig talks of leading an Ulster army to keep Ulster intact. And while Sir James thus puts on his armor in Belfast, and there is ominous tapping of the Orange drum, Dublin accuses London of bad faith and says that the boundary commission must transfer large slices of Ulster to the Free State.

The Free State leaders stand on the Treaty, the wording of which seems to be on their side, but, on the other hand, so reasonable a statesman as Lord Grey holds that Ulster was given pledges before the Treaty was written which the Treaty could never revoke. The truth would appear to be that, desperately anxious to make peace in Ireland in 1922, statesmen on both sides used language which is now coming home to roost in a most disturbing way. Mr. Lloyd George, as usual, with the fatal facility of using comfortable language which is one of his characteristics, was perhaps the worst offender.

The boundary commission will function. But what will happen when it gives its verdict? If the Free State gets the decision it wants, Ulster will fight; which means that if Britain wanted to enforce the commission's decree she would have to send troops to coerce Ulster—a somewhat unthinkable contingency. If, on the other hand, the commission favors Ulster, then almost certainly Cosgrave will be overwhelmed by Sinn Fein—and the South, declaring that Britain has violated the treaty, will pronounce a Republic. In that case Ireland would be back to where she was when Collins and Mulcahy were in the field, and England would be faced with two alternatives: the reconquest of Ireland, or the recognition of an Irish Republic, with a safeguarded Ulster left out.

Twenty or ten years ago such a thing would have been thought inconceivable. Not so today. There are millions of Englishmen, scores of the soberest of English statesmen, who view such a possibility with equanimity. They would not welcome it, they would accept it regretfully, but they would accept it.—Ottawa Journal.

A THOUGHT.

HOW TO JUDGE MEN

George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, gives this advice on sizing up men:

"Look in a man's eye for honesty;
Around his mouth for weakness;
At his chin for strength;
At his hands for temperament;
At his nails for cleanliness;
His tongue will tell you his experience and prove or disprove his statements as it runs along."

It is interesting to try this test out on our friends and others that we know. So many times these physical characteristics check up with the qualities of a man that it is not necessary to ascribe every man's success to "pull".

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10. — Additional sailors and marines were landed from American destroyers in the harbor here to-day as advancing Kiangsu troops again threatened capture of the city.

General Lu Yung Hsiang's defeated Checkiang soldiers threatened to invade the foreign quarter during the day and a number of them were disarmed by the international guard.

Brisk fighting continued about ten miles outside the city, with attacking forces centering their fire on the great arsenal which has been General Lu's chief source of military supplies.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 11. — With receipts of less than 6,000 cattle at the Union Stock Yards this week, a cleanup of offerings was possible, together with accumulations of left-overs for the past two weeks. All classes of butchers, including cows, were up 2 cents from the previous week's low price and the advance was held till Thursday. Export steers were an exception and here the buyers claimed that this week's purchases were lower from 10 to 15 cents a cwt. A lower British market, they say, necessitated cheaper prices at this end.

For two loads of steers $7.10 a cwt. was paid, but the average was not much better than $6.75 and some fair steers were bought at $6.25 a cwt. Steers were taken from $5.40 to $6.00, heifers $6.00 to $6.25, cows $4.75 to $5.75, and a few bulls at $4.00. With two boats to fill next week upwards of 1,400 will be needed for export, and this week's firmness in butchers may strengthen the heavier classes of cattle.

Choice handyweight butchers sold at $6.50 to $6.60 this week, good butchers up to $6.25, mediums $5.50, and good common at $3.75 to $4.25. Some heavy butchers not of the right beef type sold from $5.20 to $5.75 a cwt. Butchers' cows were in quite good demand and the best sold at $4.25 to $4.50. Good cows brought $4.00 and medium cows $3.50 to $3.75. Common cows sold from $2.50 to $3.00 a cwt. Almost all the bulls on sale were bolognas and sales of these ran from $2.50 to $3.00. A small number of heavy finished bulls brought $3.75 to $4.25 a cwt.

A large trade was done in stockers and feeders this week, and prices were steady to a little firmer. Good loads of 900 to 1,000 pounds Ontario feeders sold at $5.30 to $5.50. Stockers, 800 pounds and over, brought $4.25 to $4.50 and yearling steers went at about $3.00 a cwt. Milchers and springers are moving quite freely and choice black and whites are as high as $90.00 each. A fair average good milker sells from $45.00 to $50.00. Next week unless the market is again swamped the commission men think they will be able to keep this week's rise in the prices of butchers' cattle.

The calf market has been steady to firm all week with occasional choice veal calves up to 12 cents and all good calves 10 cents. Good, medium quality light calves sold at 9 to 9 1-2 cents and common calves 6 to 7 cents. Heavy calves, 250 to 350 pounds, are difficult of sale, even though well finished, and have to be sold at 6 to 7 cents a pound. Grasser calves are generally 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Lambs have not varied very much in the week. The top on choice ewes, except show lambs, has been 12 1-4 cents and the low 11 cents. The latter price was about the week's closing figure. Lambs up to and over 100 pounds each are only bought at a discount of a dollar a cwt. or more. Choice handyweight sheep and black-faced breeding ewes are not in sufficient supply and 8 cents a pound is being paid for these.

A steady advance of 75 cents a cwt. has brought the f.o.b. price of hogs up to $10.00 a cwt.

The week's run was less than 3,000 and dealers are looking for a firm market until there are signs of larger shipments.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 11.—There was very little demand from foreign buyers for grain here yesterday, and business for export account was dull.

Some sales of Canadian Western feed oats were made at 61 1-2 cents per bushel to local buyers. The trade in cash grain was slow and prices were unchanged. Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07. No. 2 white oats at 67 to 68 cents, and No. 3 white at 63 cents per bushel.

Owing to the unsettled state of the wheat market and the rapid fluctuations in prices of late, the local spring wheat flour situation was quiet in both export and domestic account. The trade in winter wheat flour was also quiet although prices were well maintained.

There were no new developments in the millfeed market, prices being steady and a moderate amount of business was transacted for local account. The market for rolled oats was very firm.

Owing to the liberal supplies coming forward in baled hay, the market continued easier.

A good demand for supplies for domestic account created an active session in the egg situation and the prices were steady. Prices for butter were reduced 1-4 to 1-2 cent per pound, but in spite of this the volume of business was small. The export trade in cheese was dull and the feeling was easier, although no actual change occurred in prices.

Good supplies of old crop beans continued to arrive on the market, and prices were steady at $2.95 to $3.10 per bushel for one-pound pickers.

QUEBEC BUTTER.

MONTREAL, October 11 (Canadian Press). — At the Quebec Agricultural auction sale held here yesterday the offerings were 1,500 packages of creamery butter, of which 650 packages No. 1 creamery sold at 34 1-2 cents per pound, and 100 packages No. 2 creamery at 33 1-2 cents per pound, and 35 cents per pound was bid for 750 packages No. 1 pasteurised creamery with 35 1-2 cents a pound asked.

ONTARIO CHEESE AUCTION.

MONTREAL, October 11 (Canadian Press). — At the United Dairymen's Co-operative auction sale of Ontario cheese held here yesterday, there were 3,056 boxes offered, but as the prices bid were 3-8c to 7-16c per pound lower than the previous sale, and 1-8c to 1-4c per pound below the sellers' views, no sales were made. For 1,273 boxes No. 1 white 17 1-8 cents per pound was bid, with 17 3-8 cents per pound asked for, and for 1,740 boxes No. 1 coloured 17 1-8 cents per pound was bid and 17 1-4 cents per pound asked, while 17 cents per pound was bid for 53 boxes of special coloured at 17 1-4 cents per pound asked.

BAILIEBORO HAS AN ANNIVERSARY CHURCH SERVICE

Bensfort Methodist Church Crowded For Services—Beautifully Decorated.

OLD BOY VISITOR.

The Fowl Supper Also Drew Crowds From Far and Near —Popular Event.

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 11. — On Sunday, Oct. 5th the members of the Bensfort Methodist church held their anniversary services.

Rev. Gladstone McKee, pastor of the Baltimore Methodist church, preached at both morning and evening services, assisted by Rev. R. M. Patterson.

The church was beautifully decorated with all kinds of flowers and plants, as well as garden vegetables, and wreaths of autumn leaves.

The church choir took its part of the service very efficently, renderthe service very efficiently, render-Miss Stenton, of Chatham, who is at present visiting her sister, Mrs. Edger Woods, also helped out wonderfully with the musical part of the service.

At both services the church was packed to the doors, and an attentive congregation listened to inspiring and helpful messages delivered by the visiting pastor.

Rev. Gladstone McKee is a son of the late Rev. Mr. McKee, a former pastor of the Fraserville circuit, 26 years ago and was well known as a boy by many of the men and women of this community, all of whom gave the pastor a hearty welcome back to his late father's former circuit.

Fowl Supper.

On Tuesday evening the annual fowl supper was held in the Sunday school hall, which is situated just across the yard from the church.

The ladies of the church commenced to serve supper about five-thirty o'clock. There was the usual crowd of people awaiting their turn for supper, and the door keepers found great difficulty in keeping the visitors back. It was not until after nine o'clock that the last lot was served.

There were three rows of tables the entire length of the hall. These were beautifully decorated with vases of flowers, and piled high with all kinds of delightful homemade cooking, fruit, jellies, salads, cheese, etc., and each one was served wth a heaping plate of fowl. Over four hundred were served with supper, and at the conclusion it was found that there was abundance of fowl and baking left over. This was disposed of by public auction.

The entertainment was held in the church. Mr. Cunningham, of Peterborough, leader of the George street Methodist orchestra, was present, and along with the orchestra provided the entire programme. The programme consisted of selections by the orchestra, addresses by chairman, Rev. R. M. Patterson, readings, duets, male quartettes, Hawaiian melodies, violin, solos, and it was shown by the hearty applause how thoroughly the entire programme was enjoyed.

About fifty free tickets were given, and the proceeds at the door amounted to one hundred and seventy-five dollars.

IMPROVES HOMES.

Declare Government Control Has Everywhere Tended To Evil.

The following resolution was passed by the teachers yesterday:

In view of the approaching vote on the question of continuing or discontinuing the Ontario Temperance Act, we the teachers of the County of Peterborough desire to put ourselves on accord as being unqualifiedly in favour of its continuance, and improvement where experience shows that to be possible. In our opinion the act has done much to improve the condition of the homes of the province, and so has tended to increase the educational opportunities of the children, and to bring health and happiness to many who were formerly denied these blessings through the influence of the liquor traffic. We would then more earnestly urge that all who desire the welfare of the children and young people of the province should rally to the support of the Act at this time, because of the undoubted fact that the proposed substitute has everywhere tended to increased consumption of intoxicants with all its attendant evils.

A LESSON IN FIRE FIGHTING.

FLUSHING, Netherlands, Oct. 11.—(Associated Press).—A single fire hose spraying nitrogenous foam recently accomplished in three minutes what several fire departments were unable to do in 24 hours.

A fire in the yards of an oil and asphalt company continued more than 24 hours despite the combined efforts of the local department reinforced by the firemen of neighboring towns. The nitrogenous foam, sprayed from a distance of 300 yards extinguished the blaze in three minutes.

REFORM SELLING.

Toronto Normal School Teacher Gives Lesson On Arithmetic.

The convention of the County of Peterborough Teachers' Institute continued yesterday with its usual success and benefit.

The report of Miss V. Coughlin was read by Mr. Steacy and proved both interesting and helpful to the teachers. A synopsis of the speech given by the Premier of Quebec was given which gave his views of the question of bilingualism. He advocated an exchange of teachers between Ontario and Quebec to promote a better understanding between these two provinces.

The question of School Libraries was discussed and teachers were advised to see that Canadian literature form a large part of the library Some helps and the methods of teaching history and nature study were reported.

Information re Reformed Spelling was given which pointed out that the idea is not an American one but thoroughly British.

The question of co-relation of Music with other subjects was also touched on.

Lesson On Arithmetic

Mr. Campbell, B.A. of the Toronto Normal School staff taught a most instructive lesson in arithmetic to a class of the fourth grade. He stressed the use of concrete material and the importance of mental arithmetic. By the judicious use of models he clearly led his class up to an appreciation of the principle involved in finding the cubic contents of a foundation or similar construction.

Nature Study.

Miss Little of S. S. No. 1 took up the matter of Nature Study very throughly.

Nature Study enlivens the pupil's interest in farm activities, since it as a study is so closely allied to Agriculture. She finds agriculture to be so important that it is of her opinion that it should be a compulsory subject. She described her methods of teaching the subject which tended to prove that the section as a whole benefits from her able handling of this subject.

This paper brought forth much lively discussion.

Committee Reports.

After the opening exercises the reports from the various committees were heard. Mr. Downey then favored the members with some very interesting and practical points in Grammar. Mr. Yuill of Havelock interested the audience with a paper on Composition ,especially emphasising points peculiar to the new course of study. Mr. Campbell of Toronto Normal School then demonstrated a very effective History lesson on the Constitutional Act.

The afternoon programme was begun by a talk on Geography by Mr. Madil of S.S. No. 9, Smith. He especially emphasized Geography as a subject indispensable to life, as pleasure giving, and as one involving intellectual training. Great stress was placed on the idea of discovering a principle from examination of varied cases and applying it constantly did he express the possibilities of correlating Geography and Art.

Rural Education.

Later in the afternoon the institute was greatly favored with the candid address of Mr. Smithson, reeve of Otonabee. From the nature of his remarks his hearers learned much of the idea, generally voiced in rural communities regarding teaching Agriculture in schools. He explained the wide range of knowledge required by the average successful farmer. The fact that farming varied from other occupations of the present time was expressed by stating that when the productive value of land was exhausted, some farmers still continued to toil.

Spelling.

Mr. Wendt of Norwood gave a very helpful discourse dealing with spelling. He is of the opinion that good spelling should be stressed, as many people judge a man's brain capacity by his ability to spell.

They should teach pupils only words which are common and of use to the pupil.

Some aids in the matter of the teaching of spelling to gain results were illustrated e.g. Good writing dividing words into vhonograms and syllables, marking difficult parts of words with colored chalk.

He also emphasised the need of and value of oral work in spelling.

cents off, and provisions varying from 10 cents decrease to a rise of 35 cents.

Pronounced weakness was apparent in the wheat market right at the outset. Rallies which ensued failed to last, and in the final thirty minutes the downward swing of prices showed someling of a headlong character, December and May finishing at virtually the day's bottom figures. A big break in quotations at Winnipeg, together with uncertainty regarding the Canadian Government crop estimates yesterday afternoon, had much to do with emphasising a bearish sentiment here.

An advance in sterling exchange counted also as a discouragement to speculative buyers, and so likewise did assertions that messages from Germany were asking the cancellation of contracts for October shipment both of wheat and rye.

WELSH MINES CLOSED.

Cheap Coal Sold By America Caused Shut Down.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(Associated Press).—Closing down of two coal mines in the Welsh fields during the last week, which brings the number of mines now idle in the larger fields to 19, is the result of a serious falling off of the export trade, say the operators.

Competition from America, where coal is being sold under English prices, and the fact that settlement of the Ruhr trouble has reopened that source of supply, is responsible for the decrease in exports, an official of the Operators' Association said.

Production has dropped from 287,000,000 tons in 1913 to 279,000,000 tons in 1923.

Press). — All grain underwent sharp setbacks in price yesterday, especially during th last half-hour. The fact that the official estimates of the 1924 yield of wheat in the United States had been increased 18,000,000 bushels as compared with a month ago, had a notable depressing effect which extended to the entire list of cereals.

Wheat closing prices were heavy, 2 5-8c to 4 1-2c net lower, December $1.45 3-8 to $1.45 1-2 and May $1.49 3-4 to $1.50, with corn 1 1-8 to 1 7-8 cents down; oats 1 to 2 5-8

The Moderation League of Ontario

President, I. F. Hellmuth, K.C.

ONE of the most embarrassing facts that the advocate of compulsory total abstinence has to face is that wherever his theory has been put into practice there has grown a strong movement against it; further, the longer the experiment of prohibition has been tried the greater the opposition it has created. Time has always been against it.

This movement is that in favour of Government Control.

Had Government Control been dependent for its adoption on the votes of those who have always voted against so-called prohibition, it could never have become the law of any Province in Canada. One of the most encouraging things to those who have been active in the work of Moderation Leagues is that there have rallied around them everywhere men and women who in the past have voted with the opponents of the Leagues.

Contrary to the statements made by the prohibitionists, these men and women were not and are not concerned with promoting the interests of what is so euphoniously called "the booze business". They were not and are not men and women ignorant of conditions existing in their own communities. They were not and are not ignorant of conditions existing in other communities. They were and are, for the most part, typical sound, sane and reasonable citizens of Canada.

These men and women, just as is the case with the men and women of Ontario today, had placed before them all the usual stock arguments of the prohibition propagandist. They had placed before them rows of figures and lurid statements showing that prohibition was a success and that Government Control was a failure.

In spite of this the greater argument of personal experience and observation made them discard prohibition and adopt Government Control.

It is impossible to enumerate all the reasons prompting the change, but it is highly significant that, to take one example only, the Province of Saskatchewan, which for years had voted strongly, whenever opportunity arose, in favour of prohibition, should last year have voted decisively against it; and the significance of this increased when there is taken into account what the people have been told in Ontario regarding Manitoba. The people in Saskatchewan have, by their geographical position, a much better opportunity of knowing the conditions in Manitoba than have those in Ontario, and it will not be questioned that they had a much better opportunity of knowing the conditions in their own Province than people residing elsewhere.

Let it be remembered that the system in Manitoba had been in operation many months before the people in Saskatchewan voted on this question.

The conclusions are irresistible.

Prohibition was considered a lamentable failure in Manitoba, a lamentable failure in Alberta, and a lamentable failure in Saskatchewan. For their prohibitory laws these Provinces adopted a policy of Government Control.

And Prohibition has been a lamentable failure in Ontario.

There is no substantial evidence anywhere that any of these Western Provinces would revert to its old prohibitory system.

On the other hand, after less than twelve months, the revenues of the Province of Manitoba have been increased by more than a million dollars and for the first time in years they have balanced their Budget.

No one contends that Government Control has yet attained its last degree of perfection. It is, however, contended that it is a better method of dealing with those evils with which prohibition pretends to deal, and that in addition the revenues of the Province benefit.

Government Control can be had by marking your Ballot as follows:

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?	X

SULTAN PALACE IN TURKEY MAY BECOME A HOTEL

Old Turkish Capital Stirred By Proposal Of Large Hotel and Park.

GREAT BUILDING.

It Is Rumored That $1,500,000 Has Been Offered For the Palace.

CONSTANTINOPLE, October 11. — Rumours that Dolma Bagtche, the palace of the ex-Sultan Mohammed B., is to be sold to a company which will convert the imperial residence and the extensive grounds into a hotel and amusement park, hafe stirred up much excitement in the old Turkish capital. Will the Seraglio go next? is the question generally asked. Is the whole Bosphorus to be converted into a "Midway Plaisance" and robbed of its historic charm? Will the Angora Government sacrifice the ancient landmarks of the Turkish empire in an effort to raise money to keep the Nationalist Government going?

Turks and foreigners alike are asking these questions as they survey the panorama of mosques and palaces along the Golden Horn and the Bosphorus which lend charm to this ancient city over which Europe and Asia have been fighting for many centuries.

Dolma Bagtche was erected in 1853. It stands near the shore of the Bosphorus. On the hills behind it are magnificent grounds, and among the forest trees are many smaller residences as well as the Yildiz Kiosk where recent Sultans went on Fridays for their weekly prayers.

Mohammed V., the Sultan who was forced to abdicate by the Mustapha Kemel Government, lived of recent years in one of the houses back from the waterfront. He preferred to be away from the sight of the battleships of many nations which lay along the Bosphorus.

It was at Yildiz Kiosk that foreigners have gathered for many years to watch the Sultans make imperial march from the palace grounds every Friday, to bow with more humble Mohammedans in reverence, with their faces toward Mecca.

There are rumours that $1,500,000 has been offered for the palace and its extensive grounds, and that promoters intend to convert it into a hotel which will be more magnificent than any in the east and have a theatre, amusement park, and gigantic cafe in connection with it.

The palace has a magnificent frontage on the Bosphorus and an extensive quay, which will make it possible to handle tourist traffic direct from incoming steamers to the hotel. It become more apparent daily that when the German legation moves to Angora, other Powers will also be forced to desert their magnificent legation buildings in Constantinople and follow the lead of Germany.

The Embassy probably will be located at Angora and is expected to advance Japan's interest not in Turkey alone, but also in Persia, Arabia and Central Asia.

LIGHTNING ARRESTER SAVES THE RADIO SET

The lightning arrester is a device installed outside a house, in connection with the radio antenna, in order to make sure that no fire or other damage will occur as the result of a bolt of lightning striking on or near the antenna.

There are a great many different kinds of lightning arresters on the market, but nearly all of them work on essentially the same principle. The antenna or the lead-in wire is connected to a small block or point of metal. A fraction of an inch away from this is another small metal point or block. This one is connected to the ground.

This is what electricians call a "spark gap." If the antenna becomes highly charged with electricity from lightning, the electricity jumps across the gap between the two metal points and escapes harmlessly into the ground. The radio currents are too weak to do this and so the lightning arrester does not interfere with radio reception.

There is no especial danger of lightning striking an antenna. Radio apparatus is in no sense dangerous from this cause. Indeed, if an actual bolt of lightning were to strike a house with an antenna on it, a good deal of damage would probably be done regardless of the lightning arrester.

The real value of the arrester is that it will prevent damage in case lightning strikes nearby and thus creates strong induced currents and charges in the antenna and the ground wire. Also, as a safety precaution, the fire insurance rules usually require lightning arresters on all electrical circuits such as telephones and the like, including radio.

JAPAN HOLDS KEY TO CONTROL EAST

Development Of Future Of East Depends Upon Japan.

By J. W. T. MASON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(United Press).—The first steps toward the creation of a Russo-Japanese-Chinese entente to control the Far East are now being taken. If the movement is to have a real assurance of large success, Germany will have to enter the combination. A quadruple understanding among these nations would entirely change the world balance of power and would hold possibilities of all four powers coming back to the front rank of international influence.

Japan holds the key to this development of the future. The Japanese have suffered so severe a rebuff because of the world interprets the immigration affront that it is the paramount policy of Tokio to regain Japan's lost prestige. Everything at the Tokio foreign office is subordinate to this intention. How the recovery will be brought about is a matter of the future; but the Japanese are determined that it shall be done.

All First Rank Powers.

At present the best chance lies in the creation of a new relationship with China, by winning China's friendship, and then reaching a full understanding with Russia and later with Germany. Japan, China, Russia and Germany are all first rank powers, in potentiality, who at present have their individual difficulties in sustaining their positions.

Weakened nations do not as a rule increase their common power very much by uniting. Their individual weaknesses combine into a common weakness. But, the weaknesses of Japan, Russia and Germany are not permanent afflictions. They are but temporary accidents in the turn of events. Therefore, the three powers can mutually help one another to get back to their feet, with China as a reserve force.

Among the four nations, the Japanese have been least weakened by recent world happenings. China, Russia and Germany are really wounded, in a physical sense. The Japanese wounds are to her pride and self-confidence. Therefore, the Japanese are the centre of actual physical power in the present movement, and to this extent can further the movement or hamper it more than any of the other potential partners.

The Chinese part is secondary in the entente. China's favor is of great value in removing obstacles; but the Chinese can make little positive contributions for an indefinite time to come. Russia has already found this out, for after reaching an understanding with the Pekin Government but a few months ago, the Russians are now turning to Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord and the enemy of the Pekin clique.

The Policy of Japan.

Japan and Russia, acting together, can exercise a profound influence upon the Far East as long as there is no combination against them among first-class western powers. Viscount Goto, who is destined soon to come into power as Premier of Japan, is strongly in favor of a full understanding with the Russians.

But, Russia has no money and no navy to assist Japan in any belligerent undertaking. That belligerency has not been given up as at least a possibility of the future is shown by Japan's present logical attitude at the League of Nations. Japan and Russia must carry Germany with them in order to further any project based on war. Germany could use Russia's manpower in Europe to make very difficult military intervention by European powers in Far Eastern affairs. Germany, additionally and for herself, could start her war of revenge against France with her Eastern frontier unmenaced.

The weakness of the project however, lies in the possibility of an Anglo-American entente and the construction of the British naval base at Singapore. Japan would be powerless before such an overwhelming naval force as Great Britain and America could produce, as long as naval power in war is paramount.

But, paramountcy before long may be in the air and not in seapower. So, the issue remains open.

HEN MAKES RECORD.

Lays 312 Eggs In 308 Days —An English Hen, Too.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(Associated Press.)—England has a world-record layer in a Rhode Island Red hen from Wiltshire county, which produced 312 eggs in 308 days. The hen laid an egg every day for 44 weeks and on four days doubled up.

The hen was entered in egg-laying trials of the county councils show, and its performance is given by the secretary as a world's record. The hen, he said, laid every day for a fortnight before the trials opened and every day after they closed until her owner took her away. This is the second contest in which the hen has been entered. In the first she laid 262 eggs in as many days.

WORK WORN PEOPLE

Find Renewed Health By Improving Their Blood.

If you feel run down, it means that your blood is thin and watery, that your vitality is low. Your feet are easily chilled. You do not sleep well and you are tired when you rise in the morning. You find no pleasure in your meals and are listless and dispirited at your work. You have no energy to enjoy yourself.

Thousands of men are run down by anxieties of work. Thousands of women are broken down by their household toil, with tired limbs and aching backs; thousands of girls are pale, listless, and without attraction. It all means the same thing—thin and watery blood, vitality run down, anaemia, poor appetite, palpitating heart, short breath.

Do not submit to this. Get new blood and with it new vitality. There is no difficulty in doing this. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up and enrich the blood, which brings with it new health and vitality. The man, woman or girl who takes Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is never run down. Their friends notice how energetic they are, what a fine appetite they have, and how much they enjoy life.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OIL FIELDS IN RUSSIA FORMED BASIS DISPUTE

Japan Agrees To Evacuate Sakhalin Island Under Pressure.

DEMANDS ALL OIL.

Russia Would Concede Part In Order To Foster Co-operation.

MISCOW, October 11 (United Press). — The Russo-Japanese negotiations are fully described in an interview given by Karakhan, Russian Ambassador to Pekin, to the United Press.

Karakhan states that the question of the Czarist debts and former treaties are virtually settled, while the exact form of an agreement covering the Nikolayovak massacre has been postponed for a subsequent conference.

The evacuation of Sakhalin Island has been agreed on, [illegible] the Russian Government insists that Japan withdraw before winter, when navigation difficulties begin.

The fate of the negotiations now depends upon commercial issues relating to Japan's disposition of the Sakhalin confession.

"We agreed to grant the concession in order to enlarge economic co-operation with Japan and assist in supplying Japan with oil and coal," Ambassador Karakhan stated.

The Rusian Government proposed to concede 40 per cent. of the petroleum territory to Japan, but Japan demands eight selected districts comprising all the oil fields.

The Russian Government is willing to give these oil fields, yielding 40 per cent. of the output, to Japan for five years. Japan offers to make graduated deliveries of five to fifteen point net oil produced, while Russia demands ten to fifteen per cent.

Karakhan stated that the next few days' negotiations would decide whether the settlement would be delayed until next year.

SIR HAMAR GREENWOOD A LONDON CANDIDATE

Nominated For Division Of East Walthamston As Anti-Socialist.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—Sir Hamar Greenwood reentered the lists of British politics last night when he was nominated "anti-socialist and constitutionalist" candidate for the division of East Walthamstow, one of the outlying London districts.

Sir Hamar was defeated in 1922 and 1923 by a Unionist candidate in three cornered fights in Sunderland, one of whose two seats he had filled since he was elected to the British house of commons in the liberal interests in 1910. He was chief secretary for Ireland in the Lloyd George ministry from 1920 to 1922.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Had it not been for the action of the Court of Revision, sitting in Kemptville yesterday, Mrs. Howard Ferguson, wife of the Premier of Ontario, would have been without a vote in the coming plebiscite. CHURCHILL ATTACKS DOMINION POLICIES

MacDonald Told Australia To Shift For Itself, He Declares.

LONDON, October 11 (Canadian Press Cable). — Winston Churchill is belabouring the MacDonald Government for its treatment of the Dominions.

"Singapore," Mr. Churchill says, and has said to the Australians, "You is a vital point in Imperial unity and unless there is a harbour there it is not possible for the British Navy to enter the Pacific and render the protection of British sea power to Australia and New Zealand.

The Government has refused to allow the harbour to be constructed and has said to the Australians, "You can shift for yourselves."

This has been said almost on the morrow of a war in which 500,000 men offered their lives for the Mother Country.

Canadians Opposed.

A. W. Haycock, Canadian-born Labour member of the British House of Commons for West Salford, who happened to be holidaying in the Dominion, but is hurrying back to Britain, is threatened with opposition from a local business man, a Liberal.

Colonel Grant Morden, another Canadian Conservative, will have Liberal and Labour candidates in the field against him in the Chiswick Division of Middlesex.

Warfare By Poster Is Big Election Feature

LONDON, Oct. 11. — (Canadian Press).—Warfare by poster promises to be the big feature of the election campaign. In the last general election the Labor party issued a sheet depicting a workless man and underneath were the words, "How much longer? Vote Labor for work and wages."

The Liberals have now issued a poster showing the increase in unemployment since Labor announced that it had taken over the responsibility of alleviating unemployment. The poster states that there are ten thousand more workless to-day than when the Labor party assumed office.

OBREGON SIGNS DECREE.

MEXICO CITY, October 11 (United Press). — President Obregon has signed a decree declaring General P. Elias Calles President-elect of the Republic.

Calles wil ltake the presidential oath in the new Stadium here on 30th November.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE MOOSE

Have you followed the trail of the lordly moose through the flaming forests of the north and heard him call from the barrens or tracked the fleet-footed deer over newly-fallen snow, with the keen wind in your face while the trees cracked in the frost and the whole forest seemed vibrant with life? If you have you know the real joy of the Canadian autumn, which is never found on the city's streets nor in pulsing marts of commerce, but only in the clean open spaces and the fragrant silent woods.

Now that the trees are turning crimson and gold you will begin to dream of the little hunting camp in the far north woods, of sparkling dewy dawns, tramps through the fallen leaves, blasting camp fires, wonderous autumn nights and the bed of balsam boughs, for there is no tonic in all the world for a tired brain and a weary soul like a hunting trip in the northern wilds.

Canadian National Railways tap the choicest of the solitary hunting districts of Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and if you are going off on a hunt this year go to the nearest ticket office and procure a copy of "Hunting in Canada," which contains full information as to the various districts, accommodation and guides. Then pack up your old rifle, sweater and togs and be off. 11,14,16,18

Meeting Of Queen Mary Home and School Association.

An open meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association was held in the school last evening, when entrance certificates were presented to the successful pupils. The principal, Mr. M. N. Clark, occupied the chair, and opened the meeting with a few remarks in regard to the entrance results. There was a large attendance of parents and friends.

The following musical programme was rendered: Vocal solos by Miss Bertha Hill, Miss I. Mackay, Messrs Chas. Clark and Stevenson, instrumental duett by the Misses Jean and Marion McCannon, readings by Mrs. H. E. Connolly and Dorothy Henry, and a violin solo by Stewart Widdiss. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon gave an address on "Changes in School Life, differences both past and present," and presented the diplomas to the entrance pupils.

A resolution favoring the Ontario Temperance Act was passed, on motion of the present, Mrs. M. T. Breckenridge, and seconded by Mrs. H. S. Huffman.

Mr. M. N. Clark, the principal, moved a vote of thanks to all taking part in the programme, and Mr. W. Sangster, seconded by Mr. H. J. McCannon, voiced an appreciation from the parents to the teachers for the interest taken in their pupils.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, and the service of light refreshments.

ON MURDER CHARGE.

Need Of Work Drove Youth to the Prairies.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Oct 11. — It was need of work to support his widowed mother that drove Sidney Harris, accused for complicity in the murder of Francis Beauvais, a Montreal merchant, during an alleged hold up, from the New Westminster home to the prairies, and thence to Montreal. For a year the two occupied a little cottage here and for four years they have lived in this place, having come from England to make their home in Canada.

"Sidney is all I have," said the mother last night. "Two others and my husband are buried in England."

Six weeks ago Sidney left for the harvest fields. He just rode freight trains, because he had no money. "Just two days ago I got his last letter from Montreal."

COALITION FORECAST.

Manifesto From Labor Cabinet Expected To Announce Planks To-day.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, October 11. — Definite planks upon which Britain's general election on 29th October will be fought are to be provided in the manifesto which the Cabinet members and other Labour leaders are expected to issue to-day.

Other developments of the campaign in Britain was most anxiously awaiting were the selection of a candidate to oppose Lloyd-George at Carnarvon, and the forecast coalition of Liberals and Conservatives in certain districts whereby a triangular fight with the Labour candidate may be averted.

With interest running high, a new electorate register is expected to show an increase of the more than 20 million voters in the old list.

The Conservatives are reported as planning to run nearly 500 candidates, the Labourites about the same, and the Liberals approximately 320.

It was said in Labour circles today that Professor A. E. Zimmerman, an expert on foreign affairs, who has been mentioned as the most likely Government candidate to fight Lloyd-George, has refused to run, and party leaders were looking about for another desirable contestant.

Attorney-General Hastings, whose action in dismissing the proceedings against James Campbell, Communist editor, charged with sedition, precipitated the election, has been ordered by his physicians to take a complete rest for several weeks.

KIWANIS CLUB HELD A DANCE

Members Entertained the Ladies at the Empress Last Evening.

The first ladies' night of this season under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club was held last evening at the Empress Hotel. Dinner at seven o'clock with a very entertaining programme, was followed by dancing from nine to twelve o'clock, with music supplied by Ken Blood's orchestra. Twenty-six ladies were present last evening and over thirty men.

Pres. Jack Marshall occupied the chair for the activities during dinner. A unique stunt was staged last night, in the form of impromptu addresses by several of the members, culminating in a sparkling speech by Rev. Harold W. Young. Jack McKone, the first speaker, talked for about two minutes, passing the buck then to Carl Browne, who did his bit, passed it on to Jack Jeffries, from him to Walter Kidd and Charley Cook, the final speaker of the evening being Rev. Mr. Young, who gave a humorous fifteen minute talk on "Passing the Buck." This was splendidly handled and was much enjoyed by those present.

Five "booster" prizes, donated by Joe John, Roy White and W. E. Conway, were won last evening by Mrs. Bob Mackey, Mrs. H. M. Niven, Mrs J. Jeffries, Miss Froom and Miss McLelland. Community singing during dinner was led by Alex. Dick, with accompaniments by Martin Chenhall.

QUEBEC, Oct. 11. — (Canadian Press).—To wake and find his wife dead beside him was the experience of T. M. Fraser, of the Parliamentary Press Bureau, Ottawa, while at sea on the liner Minnedosa. That evening she went to bed apparently much improved, but when her husband called her next morning she was dead.

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Central Home and School Association Open Meeting.

An open meeting of the Central School Home and School Association was held last evening, the president, Mrs. E. H. Howson, and Mrs. K. Wightman receiving. Mr. A. Mowat presided in his usual capable manner. There was a particularly good attendance at this meeting, the banner being won again for October by Miss Esplin's room. Over 125 people were present.

After the singing of "O Canada," delightful vocal solos were given by Mrs. E. Frost, H. Snelgrove and Master Jack Clayton, with accompaniments by the Misses Elizabeth Scott, F. Saunders and Mrs. F. Clayton. Mrs. A. A. Perrin, convenor of the programme committee, was in charge of the fine programme rendered.

Entrance certificates were then presented to the successful pupils by Mr. K. Wightman. The certificates, twenty-nine in number, were tied with the school colors. The presentation was accompanied by congratulatory remarks to the pupils, made by Mr. Wightman, Mr. A. Mowat and Mr. R. F. Downey. The Cadet boys who carried off the cups this year were also congratulated, especially their leader, Master Geo. Kiff.

At the close of the programme, the ladies served refreshments, the table being prettily decorated with the school colors. Mrs. R. F. Downey and Mrs. K. Wightman presided at the table, assisted by Mesdames Steer, Bartlett, Ross, Westbrook, Lush, Bennett, Morgan, Rutherford and Thornton.

ZR-3 FLIGHT POSTPONED.

Hazy Weather Caused Delay Until To-morrow Morning.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, October 11 (United Press). — The flight to America of the dirigible ZR-3, scheduled to start this morning, was postponed at 8 a.m. until to-morrow.

All of the crew and passengers had settled in the ship when Dr. Eckener, flight commander, called off the start because of moisture in the air and hazy weather.

Lifting tests were found unsatisfactory, and Eckener estimated that the dirigible will be forced to sacrifice four tons of benzine if it ascend, due to the heaviness of the atmosphere.

Reports from other sections of Germany indicated clear skies and moderate temperatures.

The clock of life is wound but once
And no man has the power
To tell just when the hands will stop—
At late or early hour.
Now is the only time you own;
Live, love, toil with a will—
Place no faith in "Tomorrow",—for
The clock may then be still.

The Time Is NOW

YOU INTEND to insure—"some time" but the hours, days, months and years steal swiftly by and you take no action. But in the supremely important matter of life insurance "the time is now". To-day you may be insurable, to-morrow some physical impairment may develop when you could not secure protection.

Thousands who had intended to insure "sometime" are rejected every year by the medical officers of the life companies. Whatever else is put off till to-morrow let it not be life insurance—for that The Time is Now.

O.T.A. WORKERS MEET.

Mr. A. Mowat Gave An Adderss On Government Control.

At a meeting of the women Prohibition workers in the Y.W.C.A. yesterday, Mr. A. Mowat, P.S.I., gave a very instructive address along the line of Government control, which term he characterised as a "catch phrase." Government control is not control at all, but Government sale.

Mr. Mowat expressed the feeling of the teachers who visited British Columbia where Government control is in force, as being appalled by the numbers frequenting the Government stores, and the drunkenness there.

Miss Alma Coon contributed a much appreciated solo, and Mrs. A. B. Cunningham read a very seasonable poem composed by Miss S. Hamilton.

Plans for the big mass meeting next Thursday night, at which Mrs. Gordon Wright will speak, were discussed.

PRINCE LIKES CANADA.

First Privacy Since He Landed In America Gained At Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 11. — (Canadian Press).—Expressing the greatest pleasure at the privacy which the Fort Garry Hotel afforded him, the Prince of Wales was disporting himself like a high-spirited schoolboy in his shirt sleeves shortly after his arrival last night.

The whole first floor of the hotel has been reserved for His Royal Highness and his entourage, and the Royal suite which the Prince occupies is capable of being closed off entirely from the other rooms. This arrangement has given entire satisfaction to the Royal visitor, and he could hardly restrain himself at the thought that for the first time since his visit to the North American continent he was at liberty to feel at home.

There fell a long silence. At length Sir Oliver spoke in a small voice.

"Not a doubt but you gave him no more than he was seeking. You are right, Master Leigh; the van was the last place in which to look for him, unless he came deliberately to seek steel that he might escape a rope. Best so, no doubt. Best so. God rest him!

"No doubt they took you because of that," Sir Oliver pursued, as if communing with himself. "Being in ignorance, perhaps, of his deserts, deeming him a saint and martyr, they resolved to avenge him upon you, and dragged you hither for that purpose."

He sighed.

"Well, well, Master Leigh, I make no doubt that, knowing yourself for a rascal, you have all your life been preparing your neck for a noose; so this will come as no surprise to you."

The skipper stirred uneasily and groaned.

"Lord, how my head aches!" he complained.

"They've a sure remedy for that," Sir Oliver comforted him. "And you'll swing in better company than you deserve, for I am to be hanged in the morning, too. You've earned it as fully as have I, Master Leigh. Yet I am sorry for you—sorry you should suffer where I had not so intended."

Master Leigh sucked in a shuddering breath and was silent for awhile.

Then he repeated an earlier question.

"Do you believe in God, Sir Oliver?"

"There is no God but God, and Mohammed is his Prophet," was the answer, and from his tone Master Leigh could not be sure that he did not mock.

"That's a heathen creed," said he in fear and loathing.

"Nay, now: it's a creed by which men live. They perform as they preach, which is more than can be said of any Christians I have ever met."

"How can you talk so upon the eve of death?" cried Leigh in protest.

"Faith," said Sir Oliver, "it's considered the season of truth above all others."

"Then you don't believe in God?"

"On the contrary, I do."

"But not in the real God," the skipper insisted.

"There can be no God but the real God—it matters little what men call Him."

"Then if ye believe, are ye not afraid?"

"Of what?"

"Of hell, damnation and eternal fire," roared the skipper, voicing his own belated terrors.

"I have but fulfilled the destiny which, in His omniscience, He marked out for me," replied Sir Oliver. "My life hath been as He designed it, since naught may exist or happen save by His will. Shall I, then, fear damnation for having been as God fashioned me?"

"'Tis the heathen Moslem creed!" Master Leigh protested.

"'Tis a comforting one," said Sir Oliver, "and it should comfort such a sinner as thou."

But Master Leigh refused to be comforted. "Oh!" he groaned miserably. "I would that I did not believe in God!"

"Your disbelief could no more abolish Him than can your fear create Him," replied Sir Oliver. "But, your mood being what it is, were it not best you prayed?"

"Will not you pray with me?" quoth that rascal in his sudden fear of the hereafter.

"I shall do better," said Sir Oliver at last. "I shall pray for you—to Sir John Killigrew—that your life be spared."

"Sure he'll never heed you!" said Master Leigh with a catch in his breath.

"He shall. His honor is concerned in it. The terms of my surrender were that none else aboard the galley should suffer any hurt."

"But I killed Master Lionel."

"True, but that was in the scrimmage that preceded my making terms. Sir John pledged me his word, and Sir John will keep to it when I have made it clear to him that honor demands it."

A great burden was lifted from the skipper's mind; that great shadow of the fear of death that had overhung him. With it, it is greatly to be feared that his desperate penitence also departed. At least he talked no more of damnation, nor took any further thought for Sir Oliver's opinions and beliefs concerning the hereafter. He may rightly have supposed that Sir Oliver's creed was Sir Oliver's affair, and that should it happen to be wrong, he was scarcely himself a qualified person to correct it. As for himself, the making of his soul could wait until another day, when the necessity for it should be more imminent.

Upon that he lay down and attempted to compose himself to sleep, though the pain in his head proved a difficulty. Finding slumber impossible, after a while he would have talked again; but by that time his companion's regular breathing warned him that Sir Oliver had fallen asleep during the silence.

Now, this surprised and shocked the skipper. He was utterly at a loss to understand how one who had lived Sir Oliver's life, been a renegade and a heathen, should be able to sleep tranquilly in the knowledge that at dawn he was to hang. Considering matters, he was profoundly touched to reflect that in such a season Sir Oliver could have found room in his mind to think of him and his fate, and to undertake to contrive that he should be saved from the rope.

He was the more touched when he bethought him of the extent to which he had himself been responsible for all that happened to Sir Oliver.

Out of the consideration of heroism a certain heroism came to be begotten in him, and he fell to pondering how, in his turn, he might perhaps serve Sir Oliver by a frank confession of all that he knew of the influences that had gone to make Sir Oliver what he was. This resolve uplifted him, and, oddly enough, it uplifted him all the more when he reflected that perhaps he would be jeopardizing his own neck by the confession upon which he had determined.

So through that endless night he sat, nursing his aching head and enheartened by the firs. purpose he had ever conceived of a truly good and altruistic deed. Yet fate, it seemed, was bent upon frustrating that purpose of his. For when, at dawn, they came to hail Sir Oliver to his doom, they paid no heed to Jasper Leigh's demands that he, too, should be taken before Sir John.

"Thee bean't included in our orders," said a seaman shortly.

"Maybe not," retorted Master Leigh, "because Sir John little knows what it is in my power to tell him. Take me before him, I say, that he may hear from me the truth of certain matters ere it be too late."

"Be still," the seaman bade him, and struck him heavily across the face, so that he reeled and collapsed into a corner. "Thee turn will come soon. Just now our business be with this other heathen."

"Naught that you can say would avail," Sir Oliver assured him quietly. "But I thank you for the thought that marks you for my friend. My hands are bound, Jasper. Were it otherwise I would beg leave to clasp your own.

Sir Oliver was led out into the golden sunlight, which almost blinded him after his long confinement in that dark hole. They were, he gathered, to conduct him to the cabin, where a short mockery of a trial was to be held. But in the waist their progress was arrested by an officer, who bade them wait.

Sir Oliver sat down upon a coil of rope, his guard about him, an object of curious inspection to the rude seamen. They thronged the forecastle and the hatchways to stare at this formidable corsair, who once had been a Cornish gentleman and who had become a renegade Moslem and a terror to Christianity.

Truth to tell, the sometime Cornish gentleman was difficult to discern in him as he sat there, still wearing the caftan of cloth of silver over his white tunic and a turban of the same material swathed about his steel headpiece that ended in a spike. Idly he swung his brown sinewy legs, naked from knee to ankle, with the inscrutable calm of the fatalist upon his swarthy hawk face, with its light agate eyes and black forked beard; and those callous seamen who had assembled there to jeer and mock him were stricken silent by the intrepidity and stoicism of his bearing in the face of death.

If the delay chafed him, he gave no outward sign of it. If his hard, light eyes glanced hither and thither it was upon no idle quest. He was seeking Rosamund, hoping for a last sight of her before they launched him upon his last dread voyage.

But Rosamund was not to be seen. She was in the cabin at the time. She had been there for this hour past, and it was to her that the present delay was due.

A FLAG INCIDENT AT CAMPBELLFORD

Letter From Mr. A. L. Killaly Received by the Campbelford Council.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 11.—Mr. A. L. Killaly, superintendent of this section of the Trent Canal has forwarded the following letter to the Campbellford Council

September 15th, 1924

J. F. McGregor, Clerk Town of Campbellford, Campbellford.

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th containing a resolution passed by your Council requesting me to instruct the lockmasters to see that all boats passing through the Canal locks fly the British flag.

"In reply I would say that as Canal regulations do not so request, I am forwarding your council's resolution to the Department for consideration. I would point out, however, that many motor boats do not carry flags. It is proper that vessels carry the flag of their nationality at their stern and the flag of the country in whose territorial waters they are, at their mast-head.

"A decision in this case will also affect vessels in other canals, on which account the Department may be guided by consideration other than those in the mind of Mr. McKeel and your Council.

Horse's Foot Hurt.

A team belonging to Mr. Andrew Hay was used for ploughing in an excavation for a cellar at Dam No. 11, when one of the horses, in backing up, stepped on a hook in the whiffle-tree, running it into one of its fore feet several inches and striking a small artery. It was brought to town as soon as possible and the veterinary rushed to it so that it would not bleed to death. With the assistance of several men the horse was bound and put down so that the doctor could attend to it. A tight band had already been put on its leg to stop the flow of blood. The event caused much excitement, especially among the boys and girls, who were just coming home from school.

WALTER JOHNSON BEALIZED DREAM OF HIS AMBITION AT PEAK OF BASEBALL FAME

"Bucky" Harris Again Dynamic Actor In Senators' Last Stand—Team Infused With Fighting Spirit and the Will to Win.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11. — The miracle of baseball, the dream of forty years, came true Friday afternoon, when Washington won the baseball championship of the world from the New York Giants in the most thrilling, dramatic climax that any diamond series has ever seen.

Out of the depths of two crushing defeats, Walter Johnson, one of the greatest pitchers that the game has ever seen.

W. Johnson

Out of the depths of two crushing defeats, Walter Johnson, one of the greatest pitchers that the game has ever known and idolized, came back to the heights and reached his goal, the end of the eighteen-year trail, by leading the Senators to victory by a score of 4 to 3 in a game of twelve innings of spectacular, pulse gripping baseball.

And when Earl McNeely, young outfielder from the Pacific Coast, drove in "Muddy" Ruel with the winning run, after the mighty bat of "Bucky" Harris had kept the Senators in their greatest fight, the rookie also drove a vast crowd of more than 30,000 that included President and Mrs. Coolidge into an outburst of victory-inspired frenzy unprecedented in the history of the national game.

Whirlwind of Joy

The crack of McNeely's bat was the match that set fire to a conflagration of enthusiasm, a whirlwind of excited joy swept the big crowd as it flooded upon the field, then rushed wildly for the dugout of the winning team and gave unrestrained vent to spirits which first through a victorious American League campaign, and then through one of the most memorable championship battles of all time, had been whipped to fever heat.

The President of the United States and his wife, watching their third game, clapped and waved their hands with the enthusiasm of the most ardent fans. Men and women, many of the prominently known throughout the country, joined with the rabid throng of fandom in that tumultous outburst. Fashionably dressed women hugged one another in joy, cheer leaders sprang up, as if by magic, while hats were thrown into the air with abandon. For more than an hour after the game, the crowd swirled about the field and the club house, where the Senators were given a continual ovation and nearly mobbed.

Last night the Nation's capital gave itself over to the celebration of their greatest baseball achievement, one of the greatest any team has ever gained. It was a victory that not only stirred the country's hub, but undoubtedly swept, magnetically throughout the land, to he crossroads and the boulevards, for it seemed that the whole nation had rooted for "Bucky" Harris and his gallant band and shared Washington's own joy in the triumphant outcome.

Uncertain to the End

Never has baseball's premier crown been won under circumstances so remarkable as those yesterday in the seventh and deciding game of a series that has swayed back and forth with brilliancy, uncertain to the last thrilling moment. Not since the famous series of 1912, have American and National League rivals fought with such tenacity and courage for the title and, oddly enough, it was the Giants who went down to defeat this time, as they did twelve years ago before the Boston Red Sox.

It was a shattering setback for John McGraw, grey-haired veteran pilot of the Giants, turned back on the threshold of the greatest goal of his career — a fourth world's crown which would have put him beyond all rivals—but it was also a marvellous victory for "Bucky" Harris, black-haired, dynamic young leader of the Senators.

John McGraw

Harris, 27 years old, and the youngest manager that ever led a major league team to the top, was a dominant, flashing figure in his team's triumph, and gained, through the brilliance of his tactics and individual play, a place in baseball that few leader ever have held.

Dauntless Spirit

Harris rallied his men to their victorious, successful finish, when it seemed that disaster would overcome their staunch spirit. Two setbacks for their greatest hurling ace, Walter Johnson, and the loss for the greater part of the series, of their veteran shortstop, Roger Peckinpaugh, might have daunted the courage of any but the Senators. In the face of the heaviest sort of odds, and trailing the National League champions, two games to three, Washington came back and before the President and a home crowd, evened the series Thursday and won it yesterday.

In the final analysis, it was the never-say-die spirit instilled by Harris the unquenchable "will to victory", that seemed almost a thing of fate and pulled the team through. It was a fight from behind for the Senators from start to finish. Always the road to victory was uphill, and they overcame many obstacles before finally conquering the peak.

The whole story of the series, in reality, was written into the final game, for in it, the Senators, their make-shift defense crumbling momentarily, yielded a lead that seemed insurmountable until they rallied in the eighth, tied the score and then fought off the Giants until the twelfth and its victorious culmination.

Game Full of Thrills

The game sparkled with the most thrilling sort of play, terrific hitting, spectacular defensive work, brilliant and erratic pitching, good and bad baseball. One dramatic moment followed another from the sudden with drawal of "Curly" Ogden, Washington's first twirler, after he had pitched to only two batsmen in the opening inning, until the veteran Johnson the "old master," came to the rescue in the last four innings.

"Old Barney" had sustained two heart-breaking setbacks at the hands of the Giants and it seemed the irony of fate would keep him from the goal of a lifetime. But yesterday Johnson came back. He was the Johnson of his prime when the situation was the most dangerous, and the "smoke ball" that had failed him twice before, lifted the veteran to his greatest glory and his team to triumph.

Johnson was under fire in those last four innings, for the Giants fought to the final ditch. Twice, when they threatened, Johnson walked Ross Young purposely to get George Kelly and twice Kelly fanned in the pinch Frisch, tripling with one out in the ninth, was on third and Young on first when Kelly whiffed for the first time and Irish Meusel closed the inning by grounding out. A double play checked the Giants in the tenth, but in the eleventh, Southworth, running for Grob, a pinch hitter, and Young were on second and first, with two out, when Kelly again was a victim of Johnson's fast ball.

The twelfth saw Johnson hold back another charge after Meusel opened with a single before the Senators broke through after themselves threatening in the ninth and eleventh innings.

Ruel Comes Through

Ralph Miller, substitute third sacker, started the Senators drive harmlessly when he bounded out to Frisch, but "Muddy" Ruel, who had failed to get a hit until to-day's game brought the crowd to its feet with a streaking double down the left field line after Gowdy, veteran Giant back stop, had ingloriously dropped an easy foul pop that would have retired Ruel. Where they had been the steadier, the Giants now were crumbling and Johnson got safely to first when Jackson fumbled his sharp grounder. Ruel was held at second on this play but after McNeely had fouled off the first pitch of Jack Bentley, Giant southpaw, he caught the next one for a drive that hopped over Lindstrom's head and bounded to left field for a double.

Behind this great moment for the Senators, however, was a bitter struggle, one in which it seemed only a miracle would pull them through. For six innings they were virtually helpless before the sharp-breaking curves of "Zeke" Barnes, young Giant right hander. Harris struck a telling blow when his homer sailed into the left field bleachers in the fourth inning, but he was the only man to reach base in that six-inning, while in the sixth the Giants forged ahead, scored three runs when the Washington infield, sadly missing its great cog, Peckinpaugh, hero of two of the Senators victories, went to pieces.

Pitcher's Changed

George Mogridge, veteran southpaw who had checked the Giants after relieving Ogden, also weakened in the sixth, but the trio of Giant runs came while his successor, Marberry, chief pitching rescuer, was on the mound. A pass to Young and Kellys' single brought about Mogridge's retirement but Meusel greeted Marberry's first pitch with a long sacrifice fly to Rice that scored Young. Kelly went to third on Wilson's single and scored when Judge juggled Jackson's grounder. Gowdy's hot grounder went through Bluege's legs at short and Wilson came home with the third run, but Barnes and Lindstrom were quickly retired.

Checked by a double play that off set two hits in the seventh the Senators finally broke through Barnes in the eighth and tied the score before Art Nehf, who had twirled and lost Thursday, came in and stopped the rally. Leibold, diminutive pinch hitter, opened the attack, with one out, when he lined a double to left. Ruel scratched an infield hit, his first of the series, and Tate, batting for Marberry, filled the bases when he walked. McNeely's fly to Meusel was too short for Leibold to make a dash for home, but Harris brought him and Ruel in with a single that took a bad bound over Lindstrom's head into left field. Barnes withdrew at this juncture and Nehf retired Rice to end the inning.

Senators' Breaks

Thus, while the Senators, by their own mistakes, paved the way for all the Giant scoring, they also benefitted from several "breaks" at critical moments. Harris' telling single in the eighth seemed headed for Lindstrom's glove and a third out when it bounced over the youngster's head In the twelfth Ruel's double followed an error by Gowdy on an easy chance to retire the Washington backstop, while McNeely's double was a hit similar to that of Harris.

Throughout the earlier part of the game, hits were constantly cut off by the most brilliant sort of fielding on the part of both teams, a feature that was only one of the many that were bound up in this thrilling struggle. In the second, Bluege robbed Wilson of a hit by taking his grounder back of second and making a fast throw to first while Wilson himself pulled a startling play when he made a diving catch of Rice's hot liner in the fourth.

GIANTS' AVERAGES FOR SERIES HIGHER

New York Led Washington at Bat and in the Field.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press). — The Senators won their first world's series despite the fact that they were outbatted and outfielded by their New York opponents. The final averages show that the Giants batted .261 and fielded for a mark of .980, while the Senators hung up a hitting average of .246 and a fielding figure of .964.

Bill Terry, Giant first baseman, was the leading individual hitter with an average of .429 for five games. Roger Peckinpaugh, crippled hero, compiled a mark of .417 for four games, and was second on the list, but Joe Judge, playing in all seven games, was the real batting of the Senators, with a .385 mark.

Travis Jackson, of the Giants, and "Muddy" Ruel, of the Senators, had the poorest hitting records of any of the regulars, each getting but two hits, and having marks of .074 and .095 respectively.

"Goose" Goslin, whose record of three home runs, tied the mark established by Ruth last season, was the leading slugger with a total of 21 bases on 11 hits. Harris was close behind with 17, including two homers, while Frisch lead the Giants with 16 total bases, on ten hits. Frisch had the most two-baggers, four, and he and Terry got the only triples of the series. Sam Rice was the leading base stealer with two thefts.

WORLD SERIES MONEY RECORD

Gross Receipts $38,289 More Than New York Game Last Year.

EXCEED MILLION.

WASHINGTON, October 10. — A new record for world series receipts was established by the Giants and Senators. Figures for the seven games, $1,093,104, exceed by $38,289, those of the only other million dollar series, the six-contest battle between the Giants and the Yankees in New York, last year.

Attendance figures were not shattered, however. The mark of 283,695 set in this series, fell 17,735 short of the 301,430 who saw the classic last year.

Washington players will divide $148,991.63 of the total fund, and New York will split up $99,327.75. The remaining 25 per cent. of the total players' share will be divided among the second and third place clubs in each league.

The Washington melon will be split into 26 shares of $5730 each. Manager Harris announced after a meeting of the players which followed the game. Miller and Taylor, substitute infielders, and Al. Schacht, coach, will each receive two-thirds of a share, and the 24 remaining portions will be equally divided among the other players. Coach Nick Altrock and Trainer Mike Martin. Lump sums will be donated by the players to Wade Lefler, outfielder, who was ineligible for the series; to the clubhouse boy, Frankie Baxter, and to the Senator bat boy.

The Giants left hurriedly after the contest to catch a train, and did not announce a division of their cut. The approximate gures for each of the 26 men on the Giant eligible list, including Coach Jennings, would be $3820.

HONORED IN DEATH BY FANS

JAKE DAUBERT

Captain and first baseman of the Cincinnati team, who died Thursday following operations for appendicitis and bladder trouble. As a mark of respect to this popular player's memory, the 37,000 fans at Washington's park Thursday stood with bared heads in a moment's silence before the sixth game started, while the Giants and Senators gathered at the home plate.

MOST VALUABLE PLAYERS IN THE MAJOR LEAGUES

Official Designation Does Not Worry Enthusiastic Ball Fans.

HORNSBY OR RUTH?

Writer Starts Civil War In Nationals By Naming Frisch As Best.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(United Press).—Regardless of the official vote which decided the most valuable players in the major leagues, there will be plenty of material for argument during the winter season about the best players of the season.

One day during the summer, John A. Heydler, president of the National League, took occasion to express the opinion that Rogers Hornsby, the St. Louis star, was a greater ball player than the great Babe Ruth. The argument was taken up by the Ruth fans, and it is still a good subject for a debate.

Some time later a New York baseball writer, with no purpose of stirring up a civil war in the National League, caused a civic uprising in St. Louis baseball when he wrote that Frankie Frisch, the Giant second baseman, was a better player than Hornsby.

The argument about the respective merits and ability of Babe Ruth and Hornsby has more angles and possibilities than the one about the two National League stars.

Hornsby was the champion batter for 1924 in the National League. He was first with the fine mark of .424, and established two new records. He bettered by four points the record make by George Sisler in 1922 and broke the record he had held with Hans Wagner by winning the batting championship for five consecutive seasons.

Ruth won his first American League batting championship with an average of .389. He was the champion home-run hitter of the season, with 46 to his credit, and he was the leading run-getter of the major leagues with 143.

Hornsby and Frisch were tied for run-scoring in the National League, with 121 each.

Hornsby hasn't the team with him that Ruth has, but it is recalled that the Babe carried the burden of keeping the Yankees in the pennant race almost alone during one-third of the 1924 pennant race. Without Ruth the Yankees, in the opinion of a number of good baseball men, might have finished as low in the American League race as the St. Louis Cards did in the National League.

Avoiding any consideration of the monetary value Ruth's great drawing power has at the gate, it would seem that the Babe is a better ball player than Hornsby.

Hornsby hits more, it is true, but that doesn't mean everything. A player might be able to hit .500 over a season and wouldn't be any more valuable than a player who hit .200 but who drove in run every time he got a hit.

Baseball games are won by runs, and the most valuable batters are those who knock in runs. The Babe is the greatest run-getter in the major league, even if it is due, perhaps, to the large number of home-runs that he gets.

Ruth started in as a catcher. He turned to pitching, and was the best left-handed pitcher of his day. He then played first base, and was a good first baseman. He then tried the outfield, and he is one of the best in the business. There is no reason to doubt but that he could play the other positions on the infield, although he might not be a wizard.

The real value of any player is hard to reckon. The only way to rate his valuation is to watch the team when it is without the services of a real star. Fans who have watched the New York Yankees in the last four years know what the team would be without Ruth.

Frank Frisch is regarded as one of the greatest and most valuable players in the National League, but when he was injured and had to leave the lineup in the most critical part of the pennant race, the Giants won with the regular first baseman on second base and with an 18-year-old rookie on third base.

Perhaps there are other teams that could lose a star player and keep on going. The Cleveland Indians did it in 1920, and won a pennant with a college boy playing shortstop. The Giants did it this year. Some other team may do it next year. But the loss of a star pitcher is harder to take.

Miller Huggins says the New York Yankees lost the American League pennant because Sam Jones fell away off his 1923 form.

The Brooklyn Robins finished almost within a nose behind the Giants in the National League pennant race. Where would the Robins have been if Dazzy Vance wasn't around to win 28 games?

Where would the Washington Senators have been if Walter Johnson hadn't been able to win 25 games?

Both teams might have finished in the second division.

Johnson was voted the most valuable player in the American League, and he didn't get the prize because he is a nice fellow. He deserved the honor and won it on merits.

The slump of Kiki Cuyler, a great young player in the all-important series with the Giants, was one of the biggest factors in the loss of Pittsburgh's chance to win the National League pennant.

The Cincinnati Reds had the worst luck of the season. The team started last spring as the favorite to win the pennant, but the loss of one player after another caused the club to go to pieces.

A very old, seedy-looking man presented himself at a hospital for dogs and cats, and asked for permission to be taken in.

"You cannot come in here," he was told.

"Yes, I can," he protested. "I'm an old soldier."

"But, my good man, you can't," was the reply. "This is a veterinar hospital."

"That's right," answered the old man, seriously; "didn't I tell you I'm a veteran?"

LOOKE FIERCE, BUT—

Judge Landis, the czar of baseball, snapped in a belligerent attitude at the Washington ball park as criticism against him for not suspending more than O'Connell and Dolan of the Giants began to pile up.

FIRST LADIES LEAGUE FORMED—BANKERS' LADIES LEAGUE

The first Lanies' League has been announced. The ladies from the different banks in the city have decided to run a league. There will be four teams in the league and each team will be composed of four ladies. They will bowl twice a week, starting at 4:45 p.m., and the games will be played at Solomon's Alleys.

This is the first ladies league to signify its intention of bowling. As was predicted a short while ago that bowling would be more popular than ever with ladies is realized by the formation of this league and by the number of ladies bowling the past couple of weeks. Bowling went over big last year with the ladies. Their quickness at learning the game appealed to them as did the fact that it was a healthful recreation. This should be a banner year for the ladies.

QUAKER OATS FORM NEW TEN PIN LEAGUE

The Quaker Oats have formed a ten-pin league and will start rolling shortly. There will be four teams in the league and the games will be rolled every Monday and Thursday.

ST. PAUL BLANKED.

Baltimore Within One Game of Junior World's Series.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 11—(Canadian Press).—Fast balls that sped over the plate in bewildering array, the offerings of one Alphonse Thomas, of Baltimore, nullified the efforts of St. Paul batsmen, and Baltimore took the sixth junior world's series game, 4 to 0, here yesterday.

It brought the Orioles to within one game of the junior title, for they had four games to their credit, while St. Paul has won only two. Five victories determine the series honors. The next game will be played here to-day.

Too much Thomas, four Saint errors and timely Oriole hits tell the story. Score:

Baltimore	000013000	4	7 1
St. Paul	000000000	0	3 4

Thomas and Freitag; Merritt, Roettger, McQuaid and Dixon.

AT THE GRAND.

"WHITE TIGER."

There is not a dull moment in the Universal-Jewell feature picture, "White Tiger," which was shown at the Grand last night, and will be repeated to-night.

"White Tiger" is a crook play dealing with the adventures of three celebrated international criminals, who only play for big prizes and whose methods are original and striking.

Priscilla Dean is starred in the production a sa member of this trio, an underworld queen yet a social success. It is a wonderful part, and Miss Dean plays as she did her other great triumphs along the same line. She is assisted by that sterling actor, Walalce Beery ,and by Raymond Griffith and Matt. Moore, the quartette of principals having a great chance to demonstrate their ability and they take splendid advantage of the opening. In fact, few pictures are better acted than is "White Tiger," and the result is a picture full of excitement and interest. There have been plenty of bigger pictures, but not many with more of a punch. It sustains the interest until the final fade-out.

AT THE ROYAL.

ROYAL THEATRE NOT LARGE ENOUGH.

Hundreds of Royal patrons were unable to secure seats last night to see "Squibs' Honeymoon." In order to prevent a possibility of this happening to-night, two performances will be given at 7 and 9 p.m. It seems that everybody who saw the first of the series of "Squibs" are anxious to see the last and they will not be disappointed. To our way of thinking, with the possible exception of "Me and My Gal," "Squibs' Honeymoon" is the best of a very successful series of high-class comedy dramas. The folks from the Old Land were out in full force last night, as Betty Balfour is Britain's Mary Pickford.

"LEATHER PUSHERS" AT ROYAL MONDAY.

The popular Collier's Weekly stories, "The Leather Pushers," at Royal every Monday, are gaining in popularity. Each story is complete in itself, and has the necessary pep and comedy element that satisfies all patrons.

LAURETTE TAYLOR COMING TO ROYAL MONDAY.

Distinguished Star of the Stage and Screen Reported to have Better Production in "Happiness" than Even her "Peg o' My Heart."

Laurette Taylor is back again! This distinguished American comedienne, who scored such a success in her first motion picture, "Peg o' My Heart," will be at the Royal Theatre next week in her second Metro production, "Happiness."

According to all advance reports, "Happiness" even outdoes "Peg" in its sure appeal, its delightful comedy, and variety of entertainment, which is saying a very great deal. Miss Taylor, now thoroughly at home on the screen, has far eclipsed her work in the earlier picture and jumps to the front in "Happiness" as the lead ing comedienne of the screen as well as the stage.

J. Hartley Manners, who is her husband, wrote "Peg" as a stage play originally, and in that form it built up a record for long runs that has never been surpassed. Mr. Manners also is the author of the stage version of "Happiness." This play, which came several years after "Peg" also proved to be an enormous hit for Miss Taylor and its production in film form carries out the success it won in the theatre.

Have Similar Moral.

"Happiness" resembles "Peg o' My Heart" in that both stories point out a similar moral — optimism pays. Miss Taylor appears as Jenny, a little Brooklyn shop girl, who is the sole support of her mother, left many years before by a faithless husband.

She delivers a gown at the home of a wealthy matron who is bored with a life of gaiety. This lady, crammed with the sweet, happy philosophy of the girl, decides to try an experiment and takes her and her mother in her home in an effort to see if she has perhaps some quality that will make the world appear brighter.

Jenny arrives in time for dinner and from the moment she exhibits some novel ideas in table manners, the whole atmosphere of the house changes. Instead of a tomb-like coldness pervading the room and warmth sweeps over them like the summer sun after a rainstorm. The society woman, proud and wealthy, is revitalized by the little girl slavey of New York's shopping district.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Marshall Neilan has made an excellent contribution to the worthwhile photoplays of the year in his screen version of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the Metro-Goldwyn picture now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

The production contains so many excellent points that it is difficult to select one as greater than the rest. Undoubtedly the high point of the film however is the performance of Blanche Sweet in the tragic role of the unfortunate Tess Durbeyfield.

Since her return to the screen some time ago she has been steadily advancing. With "Anna Christie" she became one of the leading emotional actresses of the screen, and she surpasses her work in that picture with "Tess."

A thrilling scene from Sabatini's romance of pirate life, "Captain Blood" at the Capitol, three days, next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Blood is sentenced to ten years of slavery on the Barbadoes plantations, from which he escapes, to become a roving pirate. J. Warren Kerrigan plays Captain Blood.

CAPTAIN BLOOD IS GREAT PIRATE STORY AT CAPITOL MONDAY.

J. Warren Kerrigan Has Leading Role in Rafael Sabatini's Story.

"Captain Blood," considered one of the most remarkable stories ever shown on the screen, comes to the Capitol for three days, next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. By special arrangement, this attraction will be shown in Peterborough at the usual admission prices, despite the fact that it is reported to be going into the Regent Theatre, Toronto, at prices ranging up to $1.00.

"Captain Blood" is a picturisation of the celebrated romance of the same name, by Rafael Sabatini, the brilliant author of two other stories that have become famous screen plays, "The Sea Hawk" and "Scaramouche." "Captain Blood" tells a vivid romance of a young Englishman, wrongly accused of treachery to the King, and sentenced to ten years as a slave in Barbadoes. The treatment he received as a slave is so ghastly that with many other convicts, he escapes, captures a schooner, and becomes a pirate, preying on merchant ships. Just think of the opportunities that lie in this story, for a clever director to bring to the screen. Great sea fights, thrilling battles, daring escapes, gorgeous scenes of pirate revelries and the final terrific sea fight, in which the pirate ship is sunk. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent in building old-time ships that take part in the sea scenes and several of these are sunk and blown up in the terrific battles shown. How Captain Blood wins a pardon from the King and marries the daughter of the Governor of Barbadoes is one of the best stories ever told on the screen.

A comedy and news complete an exceptionally long and entertaining programme. Loges chair reservations are now being accepted for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights. 'Phone 1720.

TOM MIX AND HIS WONDER HORSE "TONY" AT CAPITOL THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

Tony will be the attraction at the Tony wil lbe the attraction at the Capitol Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, in Mix's latest production, "Oh, You Tony!"

Larry Semon, in his newest comedy, "His Best Girl," will be on the same programme.

ONLY TWO CHANGES OF PROGRAMME AT CAPITOL NEXT WEEK.

Due to the playing of Captain Blood next week at the Capitol, there will only be two changes of programme. Captain Blood will be shown the first three days of the week and Tom Mix in "Oh, You Tony," will be the attraction the last three days. Loge chair reservations are now being accepted for both attractions. The following week the Capitol will resume its policy of three changes of programme weekly.

"THE SEA HAWK" COMING TO CAPITOL SOON.

Announcement was made to-day by Manager J. C. Kennedy, of the Capitol, that "The Sea Hawk," one of the great pictures of the year, will soon be shown at the Capitol. "The Sea Hawk" is now in its sixth successive capacity week at the Regent Theatre, Toronto. Milton Sills has the title role in this picture, which is from Sabatini's novel of the same name.

MAYBERRY WINS BANTAM CROWN

Bobby Eber Falls On Points In Lively Milling at Toronto.

EX-CHAMP POOR.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.) — Bobby Eber, pride of Hamilton's boxing fandom, last evening relinquished the Canadian bantam championship which he won nearly five years ago from Billie Hughes. Howard Mayberry, seconded by Walter Obernesser, former manager of Eber, secured a points decision over the champion, and the fact that he weighed only 117 pounds at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, renders valid his claim to the title.

It was a battle all the way. Eber was not as cautious as he has been in some bouts here. He gave little ground to the anxious Mayberry, and there was not a round in which at one time or another the two bantams did not stand toe to toe and exchange blows.

Eber's usually accurate left did not appear as effective as usual last evening. The former champion has appeared in the Toronto ring looking in much better condition. Mayberry on the contrary, appeared at his best.

He won five rounds and Eber three, the remaining two being even.

HARRIS CONGRATULATED.

McGraw Takes Bucky Harris's Hand After Game and Congratulates Him.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(Canadian Press.)— John McGraw entered the club house after the Washington team beat the Giants and won the world championship here yesterday afternoon.

"I want to congratulate you, "Bucky," said the manager of the Giants. Harris smiled, a smile of joy. "I thank you, Mr. McGraw," he said, as he extended his hand.

It was the biggest moment in Harris's life, here he was not yet 28 years, leader of the world's champions and being congratulated by a man who was managing the Giants when he was only seven years old.

Chiropractic
IS IT MECHANICAL?
QUESTION—Will you please explain why your patients say Chiropractic is a MECHANICAL way to get sick people well?
ANSWER—Chiropractic is a mode of adjusting disarranged parts of man's spinal structure, so that Nature can operate without interference in providing FUNCTIONAL ENERGY to mans' working parts.
A large percentage of diseases are due to pressure on nerves as they leave the spinal column. This pressure interferes with function in the tissues supplied by the impinged nerves, hence inflammation, pain and distress are manifest in these weakened tissues. Disease is prolonged until this pressure is corrected.
The Chiropractor acts as a body mechanic when by skilful movements of his hands he adjusts the cause of this nerve pressure. He first locates the vertebra which has become slightly displaced, determines the exact degree and direction of displacement, then proceeds to correct this abnormality by a scientific adjustment. In doing this he applies simple MECHANICAL principles to man's MECHANICAL structures.
IF YOU ARE NOT IN GOOD HEALTH HAVE YOUR SPINE EXAMINED.

Zeppelin Plant To Be Destroyed Under Terms of Versailles Treaty.

BERLIN, October 13 (Canadian Press). — The big dirigible ZR-3, which left Friedrichshafen at 6.30 o'clock on Sunday morning for Lakehurst, New Jersey, at four o'clock yesterday afternoon was over the Bay of Biscay near Bordeaux, France.

The motors and wireless of the airship were functioning perfectly.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, decided to take the southern route from Bordeaux by way of the Azores and Bermuda, which is considerably shorter than the route via Spain.

LEFT EUROPE BEHIND.

BERLIN, October 13 (Canadian Press). — At eight o'clock last night the German wireless stations were out of touch with the ZR-3.

The following wireless message from Dr. Eckener was received by the Frankfort Gazette:

"Reached the west coast of France after a very pleasant and uniformly good flight through Central France. Here at the mouth of the Gironde we take leave of Europe. We are travelling at an average speed of 65 miles per hour, with a south wind measuring 6 or 7 meters per second. The ship's motors are in excellent working order, and everybody is in the best of spirits."

COLUMBUS DAY FLIGHT.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, October 13 (Canadian Press). — The ZR-3, according to radio messages received here, reached the Bay of Biscay just north of Bordeaux soon after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and aided by favourable winds, was making about 80 miles an hour.

One message time 4.10 p.m. reported the dirigible headed for the Azores; she was encountering southerly winds which cut down her speed somewhat.

At this time Dr. Eckener was in communication with the steamer Albert Ballin, and reported all his motors working splendidly.

The fact that the ZR-3's getaway took place on Columbus Day was taken by the Americans aboard as a good omen, and the Germans, too, when they learned the significance of the date. This led to the suggestion that the dirigible be christened Columbus ,or America, after delivery to the United States Navy.

Avoid Against Cranks.

Through the examination of a student arrested on Saturday night after he had made threats against Dr. Eckener, it became known that Stuttgart detectives had been brought in by the Zeppelin works to guard the director during the past few days owing to threats by cranks and others that the ship would never leave her berth.

Dr. Eckener went aboard the ZR-3 just before "all aboard" was sounded on Sunday morning; detectives escorted him to the gangplank, where their duty ended.

The parents of the student were notified of his arrest, and they are sending for him, the police having confiscated rifle and cartridges and the rambling notes of a diary in which he declared he was opposed to the principle of the dirigible going to help pay reparations.

CREW OF 31 PERSONS.

There are no stowaways aboard the ship so far as is known. In fact, instead of 32 persons as previously arranged, there are but 31 on the airship, Herman Pabst, chief mechanic, of the starboard rear motor, which has not been working properly the last few trial ights, having suffered a nervous breakdown on Sunday morning, necessitating his withdrawal from the crew.

His place was taken by an emergency man already included in the crew.

Pabst had been worrying because the oil feed pipe of his motor had not been functioning in a normal manner, despite his day and night work to remedy the trouble.

30 TONS OF GASOLINE.

Just before taking off, the dirigible was given a large dose of hydrogen gas which increased her lifting power. The favourable weather made this possible, whereas on Saturday it was too hot to take in more gas.

The ship carries thirty tons of gasoline. Some repair supplies and other metals were taken off the dirigible in order to lighten her, Dr. Eckener preferring to sacrifice tools in preference to gasoline, every ounce of which may be needed if head winds are encountered.

Dead head passengers and ambitious correspondents who had hoped to stow away on the ship found their footsteps dogged by a squad of plainclothesmen, which the Zeppelin Company engaged for the purpose of guarding the hangar and shooing away suspicious loiterers. Even the score or more of newspaper correspondents who had made life miserable for Dr. Eckener for the past seven weeks were placed under scrutiny by the sleuths, who saw to it that they were safely on the ground as the airship sailed away.

GERMANS BITTER.

BERLIN, October 13. — Germany's last official greetings to the Zeppelin ZR-3 on the eve of its flight across the ocean were sent by Chancellor Marx, the president of the Reichsbank and the President of the Reichstag.

They expressed bitterness at the imminent destruction of the marvelous Friedrichshafen plant, where for twenty-five years the genius of Count Zeppelin was devoted to the building of great airships.

It was clear in Dr. Schacht's words that he still nurses a hope that the Friedrichshafen plant will be saved from destruction.

The president of the Reichsbank declares:

"To me the ocean trip of this newest Zeppelin is one of the most terrifying examples of progress achieved by human stupidity and blindness. Remember, this is the last Zeppelin to be built by Germany, according to the Versailles Treaty, and this for no other reason than that Zeppelins are German. Long live hatred Long live stupidity. Love of humans and intellectual progress will sink into darkness after this flight."

Chancellor Marx said:

"The American nation still has reason to be proud of her work and her success and will understand Germany's pride at her achievement in the construction of seafaring Zeppelins. Our pride is increased by the recognition that the men who built the Zeppelin worked for the whole world and have been building a ship which will reduce distance from one nation to another, thus discarding many misunderstandings.

Chancellor Marx, quoting Abraham Lincoln's words about the futility of national misunderstandings, comparing the days of Lincoln's struggle to the World War, a struggle winding up in the necessity of peaceful work.

The Vossische Zeitung, publishing further greetings of other leading Germans, adds an appeal to America to prevent the destruction of the Friedrichshafen plant, which, according to the Versailles Treaty, must be destroyed immediately after the delivery of the last Zeppelin to America.

Sailed Off Like Silver Bird

German Dirigible ZR-3, bought by U. S. Navy, left its hangar at Friedrichshafen Sunday morning, beginning trans-Atlantic flight to the United States.

SEE FLAMING CROSS.

Many Citizens Believe Ku Klux Klan Has Reared Its Head in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, October 13 (Canadian Press). — More than one citizen here believes that Ku Kluxism has reared its head in Hamilton.

A flaming cross was observed on the mountain late on Saturday night.

Ald. John Sherring went to the top of Strongman's Road, and there in the old quarry he saw what he believed was the burning symbol of the Ku Klux Klan.

It was about 15 feet high, and made of iron gaspipe. It was wrapped in cotton, soaked in coal oil.

Many persons in the city saw the flaming cross.

FISHER GIRLS TAKE TEA WITH BRITISH PREMIER

Three Sightseeing in London Are Invited by the Prime Minister's Daughter.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Three fisher girls from Lossiemouth had the time of their lives last week, when, after visiting the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, they took tea with Premier MacDonald and his daughters at the official residence of the Prime Minister, 10 Downing Street.

One of them said a lady had invited them to London to see the Exhibition as her guests. Wembley was "just great", but they wanted also to see the inside of the Prime Minister's town house.

When the girls arrived at 10 Downing Street Miss Isobel MacDonald heard of their presence and invited them to tea, which was just being served to the Premier and his daughters.

"That was the greatest honor fish girls have ever had," said one of them afterward, "and we shall never forget it as long as we live."

BABY'S BODY FOUND; NURSE IS ARRESTED

Graduate of Pembroke Hospital Charge That Birth Was Concealed.

OTTAWA, Oct. 13. — Charged with concealing the birth of a child, Miss Mabel McDonald, aged 24, graduate nurse of Pembroke Hospital, is under arrest at Pembroke. The girl, it is alleged, gave birth to the infant without medical attention while occupying a room in the Copeland House at Pembroke last Tuesday afternoon. Afterwards the child was placed in a suitcase and conveyed to a house in Girouxville, near Pmbroke.

As the result of the inquest held in Pembroke Saturday afternoon Miss McDonald will be brought before the police magistrate of Pembroke probably to-day or Tuesday.

Coroner Dr. Joseph declined to give the names of witnesses who gave evidence, stating that it was simply a preliminary investigation although the finding was that the child came to its death by natural causes. According to the chief of police, however, the baby received no medical attention at birth.

Chief MacLachlan and the coroner were reluctant to divulge details of the case but the chief stated that a Pembroke man had retained counsel in the case. The Crown was represented at the inquest by J. H. Burritt.

Chief of Police MacLachlan explained how the body of the child was discovered. After its birth, he said, the girl sent a message to a man friend who called at the Copeland House and took a suitcase she gave him to a boarding house in Girouxville. There, it is stated, the landaldy discovered the dead child. Later, when Miss McDonald appeared on the street, he took her into custody on a formal charge of concealment of birth.

FREAK BLOCK OF ICE

Huge Block of Ice Found Buried in the Earth.

RENO, Nev., October 13. — A freak of nature near here in he form of a huge solid block of ice buried 12 feet underground, measuring 60 feet in length, 20 fet in width, and 10 feet in thickness, was uncovered recently by a steam shovel, while working on the new Truckee River highway.

The workmen, after making numerous attempts to go around the ice, finally were forced to blast their way through it with high explosives.

It is believed that originally the ice, which is estimated to be about 40 years old, was a field of snow on the mountain side above and was compressed into its present form by an avalanche of earth, rocks and trees.

PLATFORMS OF THREE PARTIES ARE PUBLISHED

Foreign Affairs and Defense Questions Receive Small Notice in Documents.

LIQUOR INQUIRY

Liberals and Labor Refer to Excessive Consumption of Alcohol in Britain.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — (Canadian Press).—The three big parties have lost no time in placing their platforms before the electorate. Three election manifestoes came out on Saturday night. The Labor manifesto is signed, among others, by Ramsay MacDonald, John Robert Clynes, Robert Smillie, George Lansbury and Arthur Henderson.

The Conservative manifesto is signed by Stanley Baldwin, and the Liberal by H. H. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George.

The first noticeable feature which is an outgrowth of the new experience of the country in having had a Labor administration for the first time is the small part now played in the election literature by foreign affairs and the defence questions. These are scarcely mentioned in the labor manifesto, apart from the Russian treaties and a brief paragraph claiming credit for the improved relations with France and Germany and noting the important steps taken at Geneva toward arbitration security and general disarmament.

Economic Reforms.

In the Liberal document allusions are equally scanty, but in the Conservative manifesto, following the Tory tradition, the Empire and foreign relations are given greater attention, but still are overshadowed by social and economic questions. In reference to foreign affairs, Mr. Baldwin pronounces his party for "co-operation in all matters admitting of common action with the United States" for the support and strengthening of the League of Nations on practical lines.

With regard to defence, he says that the Unionists, if returned to power, will have to "examine afresh the position in which the defences of the Empire have been left by the present administration" and while favoring any practical proposals for the general limitation of armaments must "scrutinize carefully, in conjunction with the Dominions, the far-reaching committments and implications of the scheme recently put forward at Geneva."

None of the manifestos touches upon any such questions as Egypt or Irak. The competition between the three parties is clearly on the grounds of social and economic reforms and on these alone.

After the result of the general election a year ago it is not surprising to find that the question of free trade versus protection has almost vanished from the picture.

The Liberal document pronounces outspokenly for free trade, but the Labor manifesto does not mention the subject. Mr. Baldwin admits that the last election settled the question, but he still advocates the Safeguarding and Industries Act, which the Labor administration abolished, and supports measures of

ANATOLE FRANCE DIED ON SUNDAY

Famous French Novelist Had Been Ill Since August — Passed Away Peace fully in 80th Year.

TOURS, France, October 13 (Canadian Press). — Anatole France is dead.

His end came peacefully yesterday. From August last the state of the great French writer's health had caused anxiety.

Gradually his condition became worse, until only a few days ago he himself expressed the conviction he had but a few hours of life remaining.

Owing to his advanced age, eighty years, there was no expectation of his recovery, but almost up to the end he retained his interest in those around him, and was able at times to converse briefly.

ANATOLE FRFANCE, "Grand Old Man" of Modern French Literature, Died Sunday at Tours.

GIRL KILLS HERSELF IN DOCTOR'S HOME

Breaks Into St. Louis Flat in the Owner's Absence.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 13.—The body of Miss Irene Hammond was found Saturday in the apartment of Dr. E. J. Neville in University City, one of the most fashionable residence districts of St. Louis, after a watchman had been notified from Chicago that several long distance telephone calls had been made to that city from his apartment.

Indications were, the police said, that the woman had killed herself with a pistol which was found beside her body on the bathroom floor. A note was found on the dead woman.

Police Chief Ward, although withholding the text of the note, said it was written by Miss Hammond to Dr. Neville, expressing infatuation for him and charging him with putting her aside after many years of association. She was employed by Dr. Neville as secretary and nurse prior to his retirement several months ago.

A broken window in the rear indicated that entry to the third floor apartment had been forced.

Dr. Neville is reported to be on his way back from Chicago, where he and his wife went several weeks ago.

EARTH MOVEMENTS

For Decades Movements Have Been Studied by Geodetic Survey.

SANTA ANA, Cal., Oct. 13. — (Associated Press).—A United States geodetic survey party is engaged in a survey to determine what earth movements have transpired in the past two decades along the 150-mile route extending from Santa Ana to Barstow, north of here, on the Mohave desert.

The precise levels, or sea elevations, are being established at various points along the route, connecting with the marks established by the last survey, in 1906. Comparisons will determine whether changes have taken place as a result of earthquakes or other disturbances.

LINDSAY GIRL KILLED BY HAY-LADEN TRUCK

Tried to Race Car Across Road—Lived Only Few Minutes.

LINDSAY, Oct. 13.—A sad motor fatality occurred Saturday on York street when Annie, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Telford, who reside on that thoroughfare, was fatally injured, when a truck laden with hay, and driven by Mr. Peter Spratt, ran over her.

The truck had just rounded the corner from Peel street when a little girl said to her sister, "I am going to beat the car across the road." Before her sister could stop her she was in the centre of the roadway and was crushed under the wheels. She only lived a few minutes.

A jury was empannelled and after viewing the remains, adjourned until Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock.

PRINCE LEAVES WINNIPEG WITH LATE SEND-OFF

Many at Station at 3 O'clock Sunday Morning When His Highness Departed.

CROSSED BORDER

Visiting Chicago and Detroit —Will Be Guest of Edsel Ford.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 13.—(Canadian Press). — Following a crowded thirty-six hours in Winnipeg, the Prince of Wales left at three o'clock Sunday for Chicago, travelling by way of Duluth where there was to be a half hour stop.

His Royal Highness spent Saturday in a manner typical of his periods of recreation. He played squash racquets in the morning and golf in the afternoon. In the evening he was a dinner guest of Sir James and Lady Aitkins at Government House and the guest of honor at a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. George Galt. Immediately after the dance the Prince and his party went to their special train which departed at three o'clock.

Despite the early hour set for the Prince's departture, a considerable number of people gathered in the rotunda of the station. He was given a hearty send-off by a number of young people who had attended the dance, and as the train pulled slowly out, the Prince smilingly acknowledged the rousing farewell cheers.

Before attending the dinner at the Government House Saturday evening, the Prince received representatives from the local branch of Toc H Society, of which movement His Royal Highness is patron, and members of the Guards' Association in Canada. A delegation from the G.W.V.A. also was received.

The Cry For Prosperity

THE Moderationists are crying out from the billboards. "Let us Prosper." But impartial investigators have shown that Ontario is prospering more under the O.T.A. than any other province is that is under so-called Government control. Business men know the facts. They are not being misled.

MANUFACTURERS ARE PLEASED.

The Ontario Board of License Commissioners sent out a questionnaire to leading manufacturers of the Province asking them five questions. These questions with the results were as follows:

1—Are you of the opinion that Prohibition under The Ontario Temperance Act makes for increased production? 1,047 or 70 per cent, answered Yes.

2—Does it increase the workers' regularity of attendance immediately after pay day? 1,094 or 76 per cent. answered Yes.

3—Does it improve their capacity for work, and their ability to perform their duties? 1,070 or 74 per cent. answered Yes.

4—Does it result in more comfortable homes and better supplies of food and clothing for wives and children? 1,165 or 82 per cent. answered Yes.

5—Are drunkenness and poverty as common now under The Ontario Temperance Act as formerly under the open bar and the Liquor License Act? 1,413 or 85 per cent, answered No.

PEOPLE ARE HEALTHIER.

Ontario doctors were asked:

"Is it your opinion that Prohibition, as existing under the Ontario Temperance Act, has been beneficial to the health of your community?"

438 or 89 per cent. answered Yes.

The ratio on deaths from tuberculosis per 100,000 of the population in Ontario was 92.2 per cent. and in 1922 66.4 per cent.

For the three years prior to Prohibition 37.61; for the past three years 35.01.

DRUG ADDICTS DECREASING.

There is less drug addiction in Ontario than in Provinces where the sale of liquor is legalized.

Convictions of persons ,other than Orientals, for violation of the Narcotic Drugs Act, per 100,000 of the population in 1922 were as follows:

Ontario	3.01
Quebec	10.04
British Columbia	27.06

BRITAIN WAKES WITH OUTBURST OF SPOKESMEN

England and Scotland Being Swept By Outburst of Oratory.

CAMPAIGN OPENS.

Ramsay MacDonald Touched Off Fireworks With Brief Speeches.

(By Lloyd Allen—United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Oct. 13.—A whirlwind political campaign opened in earnest to-day, England and Scotland being swept by an outburst of oratory from spokesmen for the three parties, which will contest for seats in the general election on October 29.

Ramsay MacDonald, Labor Premier, touched off the fireworks with brief speeches at Rugby, Crewe, Carlisle and Motherwell, on his way to Glasgow, where to-night he will deliver an address that with be broadcast to every part of the British Isles.

Other big guns fired to-day were Arthur Henderson, Labor, at Burley; Sydney Webb, Labor, at Trimdon, and Sir John Simon, Liberal at Cleckheaton. To-morrow H. S. Asquith and David Lloyd George, both former Liberal Prime Ministers, will speak from the same platform in London.

Stanley Baldwin, Conservative, whose Government preceded that of MacDonald, will speak here Wednesday and Thursday. His Thursday speech will be broadcast, according to an agreement with the Postmaster-General, who permits the leader of each of the three parties to use the Government wireless for one speech a week.

Meanwhile, hundreds of lesser lights commenced haranguing the crowds throughout the country.

MacDonald was cheered wildly and affectionately as he left Euston Station for Glasgow to-day. In a brief speech, he said: "This is to be the biggest fight the Labor party ever had. We never began a fight in better heart or better spirit.

"We have come into power to stay. I am perfectly certain that by a sane appeal to all the best patriotic elements in the state we are going to come back to the Commons substantially stronger than before.

"We were defeated for two reasons, first, because of the fact that it was a Labor Government in power; second, because the Government had done so well."

MacDonald sent a message to the London Laborites warning them: "Your opponents will hit you below the belt all the time: do the same."

From Glasgow he will go to South Wales on a motor speaking tour.

MAKING GOOD TIME.

ZR-3 Is Travelling At Speed of 90 Miles Per Hour.

BERLIN, Oct. 13. — (Canadian Press).—The latest wireless report from Zeppelin ZR-3, which left Europe yesterday for America, received at 4.30 this morning, stated that she was half-way between the Spanish coast and the Azores, with everything running smoothly. She is speeding at about ninety miles an hour.

Now that the ZR-3 has left, French opinion is interested in the fate of the great Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, which, in conformity with the Treaty of Versailles, must be demolished, since, according to the Ambasadors' Council note of April, 1922, Germany is only entitled to build dirigibles under thirty thousand cubic metres capacity.

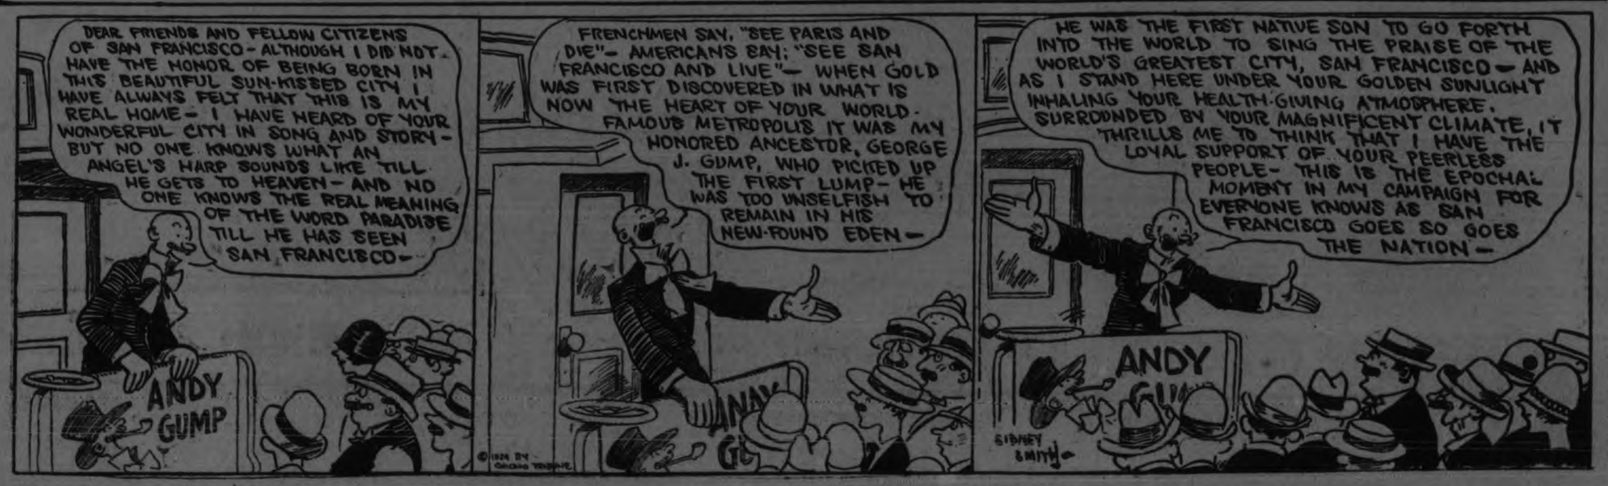
THE GUMPS—A NATIVE SON



IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Mission Circle Had a Meeting—The Late Mrs. William Piercey—Personals.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 13— About forty members of the 'Golden Links' mission circle gathered at the home of Miss Martha Lunn, Carmel, on Friday evening, and held a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Bertha Hatherly, a valued circle worker, whose marriage to Mr. W. Jones, of Toronto, takes place at high noon next Wednesday.

Mrs. J. McKnight, president of the circle, took charge of the regular business session, the superintendent Mrs. V. Lambert, conducting a Bible reading in which several took part, and Miss Marjorie Skitch giving an inspiring reading on the subject of a girl's call to the mission field, and the wonderful results following a willing response to a call.

The "shower", came as a complete surprise to the bride-to-be when a number of the younger members, Marjorie Sayles, Jean Burnham, Margaret Howard, Wilma Fallis, Hazel McMahon, with little Bernice Smith Iris Hammond and Elizabeth Raper, brought in the gifts which had been attached to a long cord, and wound the latter about the guest of honor, the many parcels "showering", about her on all sides.

Seated in the centre of the circle group, Miss Hatherly untied the numerous boxes and daintly fastened parcels, and all present enjoyed with her the pleasure of noting the contents which combined usefulness with beauty, and ranged all the way from kitchen utensils, to embroidered and crochet-trimmed towels, fine china, d'oyleys, pyrex ware, etc. The cards which accompanied the gifts carried massages of affection and good wishes, while the quaint verses on several, when read aloud, called forth peals of happy laughter.

The bride-to-be expressed her appreciation of the love and kindliness which prompted the "shower", in a few well-chosen words, and all joined in singing; "For she's a Jolly Good Fellow," while circling about one whose removal will mean the loss of a willing helper in all Circle activities.

Mrs. Lunn assisted by her daughter, served refreshments before the guests finally left for home, Mrs. J. McKnight and Miss F. Burnham moving and seconding the hearty vote of thanks to the hostesses for their generous hospitality which had made a very pleasant evening possible.

Mrs. William Piercey

The late Mrs. William Piercey, whose maiden name was Mary Whalen, was born in Kildare, Ireland, between seventy and eighty years ago. Coming to Canada with a family friend, affectionately spoken of as "Aunt Lowery", Mrs. Piercey, then in her early girlhood, located in Mill brook where the remainder of her life was spent.

After her marriage to the late William Piercey, for twenty-eight years baggage master at the G.T.R. depot here, the little house south of the village near the Port Hope track became her home, and though predeceased by her husband, who passed away twenty-five years ago in his sixty-sixth year, ties of affection bound her to the place where she came as a bride and where her three children were born.

The late Mrs. Piercey was a lifelong and faithful member of the Anglican Church and as long as health permitted was always to be found in her place in the house of God on Sunday, being especially careful to be present when a Holy Communion service was held. Her rector, Rev. Canon Allen, in speaking at the funeral service of deceased who was a life- long friend of his family, used the words; "Simple in life, simple in religion, but she knew her God," as descriptive of her life and character.

The immediate surviving relatives are: three children, Mrs. J. Pitt, Millbrook, Mr. Charles Piercey, C.N.R. train despatcher, Lindsay, and Mrs. William Granner of Toronto, three-step-children, Mr. William Piercey, of Winnipeg, Mrs. Byers Moore of Melville, Sask.; and Mrs Faraday Mills of Winnipeg, nine grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

For the past fourteen years the late Mrs. Piercey spent the winter months with her son-in Lindsay, or her daughter in Toronto, but her her heart was always in Millbrook, and she looked eagerly forward to returning as soon as warmer weather would permit. While advancing years left their mark, yet the general health of the deceased was remarkably good and she twice walked to Mrs. Pitt's on Saturday. Heart weakness developed that evening and on Monday she passed peacefully away soon after joining in the Lord's Prayer with Rev. Mr. Williams who was paying a pastoral call.

The funeral took place from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. J. Pitt, on Wednesday, Rev. Canon Allen and Rev. M. G. B. Williams having charge of the services at the house and graveside. The pall-bearers, all of whom are members of the local Masonic Lodge, were: Messrs. T. H. Bradley, W. H. Coombe, G. F. Harrington, H. W. Johnston, G. E. Burnham and A. A. Smith.

A number of floral tributes were laid upon the casket in loving memory, and the attendance at the funeral, representative of the entire community, was a fitting mark of respect to one of the oldest residents of the village whose familiar figure and kindly words of greeting will be missed not only by her immediate relatives, but by many others, both old and young, as well.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Granner of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Brown of Toronto, Mrs. Russell Nesbitt of Toronto, Messrs. Chas. and William Piercey and Miss Alda Piercey of Lindsay.

Interment took place at St. Paul's Cemetery, Fourth Line, Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Gilmour and family have moved to the residence at the west-end, owned by Mr. A. Winslow, and recently occupied by Mr. A. A. Birchard.

Mr. Attwooll has purchased the homestead formerly owned by Mr. C. Needler, and has moved to his new home from the Medd residence, which he has occupied since coming to Millbrook to reside.

The anniversary services of the Millbrook Methodist Church will be held on Sunday, October 26th, Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Belleville, being the preacher for the day.

Mr. and Mrs. E. McConnell and two children, Margaret and Bobbie, of Toronto, were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Nattrass, over the week-end.

Postmaster H. B. Collins and his sister, Miss Mamie Collins, motored to Toronto and spent a few days last week.

Mrs. John Gray and daughter, Miss Gertrude Gray, have returned from an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. Black, of Brockport, N.Y., and other friends in Rochester.

Died—In Millbrook, on Saturday, October 11th, Miss Bessie Blatchford, in her 71st year. The funeral will take place from the residence of her nieces, the Misses Maud and Nellie Finnimore, on Monday, Oct. 13th, at 1.30 p.m.

Service at the house at 1 p.m. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery, Peterboro

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

New Bridge Opened Across the Trent Canal—Social Events In Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 13.—On Saturday afternoon, Mr. Sedgwick, of Toronto, Government inspector, Warden W. M. Fowlds of Hastings, Mr. Greer of Cobourg, road superintendent for Northumberland and Durham, Mr. F. M. Elliott, Reeve of Bowmanville, Mr. N. Hart, Reeve of Murray, with Major A. J. Meyers, Reeve C. Davidson and Councillor G. A. Kingston, made a formal inspection of the new bridge across the Trent Canal at Campbellford, built by the Ontario Bridge Company. The work was accepted and Mayor Meyers declared the bridge open for traffic on Saturday afternoon at six o'clock. There was a general tooting of horns from all the cars waiting to cross.

Mayor Meyers, Reeve Davidson, and Mr. C. B. Williams were in the first car to pass over, in Mr. Williams' car. The work was begun the first week of September, and has been finished for over two weeks, but the traffic part was left for the cement work to harden. The two sidewalks have been finished and used for some time. The town people and those coming in from the country will find the opening of the bridge a great convenience as the cars and vehicles had to go around by the black bridge and around the Canal, a distance of three miles.

The new sidewalk and traffic road do not only make one feel safer in crossing, but the smooth cement and level boards make it far more comfortable for those passing over, besides making a great improvement to the looks of that part of the town and Canal.

A Social Event.

The Bemersyde I.O.D.E. tea and cooking sale on Saturday was quite a success. The home cooking part of it was largely contributed to and the tea tables were kept busy.

The Public Library basement was very prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flags, and bouquets of flowers on the different tea-tables.

The cooking booth was in charge of Miss H. Atkinson (Regent) and Miss Elsie Smith.

Those in charge of the tea-tables were: Misses H. Wood, E. Irwin, E. Dafoe, M. Smith, H. Tait and H. McAuley.

Miss H. Redden was cashier for the tea-room. This brought in thirteen dollars and seventy cents, and the cooking booth twenty-eight dollars and ten cents, nearly forty two dollars in all.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Plummer, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. H. Coxwell and family, motored to Toronto on Saturday and spent the week end with Mr. Coxwell's parents.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN.

Two Thousand Bushels of Grain, 16 Fat Pigs and 17 Small Ones Lost in Blaze

ROSENEATH, Oct. 13—The barn and contents on the farm of Mr. William Montgomery about three miles south west of here, was last night destroyed by fire of an unknown origin. The loss is estimated at about $3,500, while $2100 insurance was carried on the barn. Besides the barn 2,000 bushels of grain, 16 fat pigs and 17 small pigs were lost. Practically all the stock but the pigs and a four year old bull were out of the barn when the fire took place. The four year old bull was saved when it broke loose and jumped through a window. The fire started about 8 o'clock, and although every effort was made to check the blaze it was fruitless as the fire had too good a start before it was noticed.

ELMIRA POTATOES BROKE OLD RECORD

Spuds Grown on Top of the Ground Reach Size of 23 Inches By 17 1-2.

ELMIRA, October 13 (Canadian Press). — Experiments recently conducted in this district to eliminate potato stalks to make spuds grow above the ground apparently caused the common or garden variety of potatoes to get their Irish up, for they are growing to a size that defies all records.

First E. Hommerich grew a three-pound potato which measured 17 inches around one way and 13 1-2 inches the other way.

Now Jacob Heigler has produced three Delaware potatoes measuring 23 by 17 1-2 inches, 17 by 13 1-2, and 18 by 12 inches. One of these potatoes, when cut up, made a meal for seven people.

MEXICAN BAND KILLS 9, INCLUDING AMERICAN

Robbers, Holding Up a Train, Execute B. F. Barker of El Paso.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 13.—B. F. Barker of El Paso, auditor of the Erupcion Mining Company, and eight other men were lined up and shot to death Thursday by bandits who wrecked a freight train of the Chihuahua & Oriente Railway, forty-one miles south-west of Juarez, in a $15,000 payroll hold-up.

The entire train crew was included in the nine men killed. The amount taken in the robbery was estimated by military officials. A Mexican customs guard, the only man on the train who was armed, is missing. It is believed that he also was slain.

A rail had been removed from a curve in the track where trains run slowly. The engine, tender and a box car loaded with dynamite left the track.

According to the story received here, the train crew and Mr. Barker were marched to near the rear end of the train, where they were required to sit down with their backs against an embankment, their hands raised. Each was shot in the forehead, except one man who apparently had run into the caboose and connected up a field telephone before the bandits saw him. His body was found in the caboose, shot twice through the chest.

Federal troops are at the scene to start in pursuit of the bandits, two of whom are thought to be Americans.

imperial preference, which, he declares, "We shall steadily keep to the front."

National Ownership.

The Labor manifesto advocates "reorganization of the whole mining industry on the lines of national ownership."

The Liberals contend that the excessive consumption of alcohol ought to be dealt with on bold and democratic lines. On this question Labor urges a full and impartial inquiry by a royal commission, which, it says, the Government had arranged to begin next spring.

With an eye to the women's votes, Mr. Baldwin sets forth a plank for a royal commission to inquire into the high price of foodstuffs.

The Liberals favor re-establishment of economic and commercial relations with Russia, but oppose Great Britain guaranteeing a loan to Russia.

GRADE CROSSINGS HARD TO ABOLISH.

Abolition of the grade crossings on the first-class railroads alone would cost about $19,000,000,000, according to railroad engineers.

There are 256,362 such crossings in the United States on only class one roads. Elimination of each of these is placed at a cost of $75,000.

That's why it is claimed abolition of railway grade crossings must take time.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

A charming frock of the new cherry brandy red silk crêpe has a catch in its side of flowers above a cascade at the hip.

The young girl of to-day keeps to the same excessively simple day-time wardrobe as the older woman. But for tea, luncheons, weddings, etc., she must have a frock of rather formal character—something with drapery probably, and a new sleeve which, by the way, can be sewed into an entirely separate lining and left out when one wants to use the frock as a dinner or theater dress. For such double duty you must choose a color that looks well by daylight and evening light. Red is smart for both and so is Lanvin green, French gray or string color or a soft blue.

FORCES ADVANCING TOWARDS SHANGHAI

Defence Forces Collapsed, While Chi's Army Is Advancing Rapidly.

(By D. C. Bess, United Press Staff Correspondent).

SHANGHAI, Oct. 3.—The war in Kiang Su virtually came to an end to-day, and Chan Tso Lin has lost a valuable ally. General Lu Yung Hsiang and his Chief of Staff, Ho Feng Tin, fled aboard a Japanese vessel, while the Che Kiang defences before Shanghai collapsed.

Chi Hsien Yuan's forces are advancing without opposition to take possession of Shanghai. The civilian population outside the foreign settlements are panic stricken, and are attempting to enter the concessions. American, French and British marines are mobilized at the barriers to prevent a rush into the settlements. The principal trouble expected is with 20,000 Shantung mercenaries left stranded by Lu when he fled to save his head.

Lu took a fortune with him when he fled. Looting of the native districts is feared to-night, although Chi Hsien Yuan's troops have been warned to respect the rights of civilians, and especially foreigners, in Shanghai.

The outcome of the two months' battle for Shanghai means that Chi will soon be able to reinforce his ally, Wu Pei Fu, who is combatting Chang Tso Lin in the north. Lu Chang's ally has failed him.

Gum Chewing Aids the Teeth

You have the authority of doctors and dentists for this statement. Your own experience will prove it, if you will use WRIGLEY'S after every meal.

The following quotations from a recent work on teeth and health are worth remembering:

"Dentists have found that the exercise of gum chewing brings about a better nutrition of the teeth . . . . "

"The cleansing action of the gum between the teeth helps to keep them free from the particles which lodge in the crevices and cause decay."

The busy man—or woman either—rarely has time to clean the teeth after eating. Yet they should be cleaned, and

LOOK YOUR MONEY OVER.

Local citizens would do well to thoroughly examine all the bank notes they receive.

Although they have not made their appearance in Peterborough as yet, it is evident from reports from other cities in the Province that a gang of confidence men is operating in Ontario, deceiving their victims by the use of worthless Mexican money.

The sharpers are using an old and valueless issue of Mexican money, and as the $10 denomination bears a marked resemblance to Canadian bank notes of the same amount, the operators have had a considerable measure of success.

They execute their scheme by buying a small article and tendering Mexican money in payment, thus getting away with almost ten dollars of good Canadian money on each transaction.

The deception would be detected quickly if the notes were inspected, but in many cases the close resemblance to a Canadian bank note causes the worthless bills to be accepted without question.

Just as a matter of precaution, scrutinize the paper money you receive.

You may save yourself the loss of a few dollars and help foil a confidence game that has been operated with considerable success in other parts of the Province.

THE GENERAL DUTY.

Strange as it may seem to those most ardently engaged on one side or another in the plebiscite campaign, there appears to be on the part of a considerable proportion of the electorate a lack of interest in the issue to be decided October 23rd.

Of course, there may be a change in this respect before voting day.

It is to be hoped that there will, for it is not a healthy sign to find indifference toward such a vital question.

Much depends upon the result of next week's vote, and it is the duty of every citizen worthy of the name to study the situation as carefully as he can, weigh the arguments fairly, and having come to a conclusion as to what seems the best policy to adopt, give point to that conclusion by marking his ballot.

There should be no slackers on October 23rd.

Every person whose name is on the voters' lists should regard the plebiscite as a test of his citizenship, a challenge that must be accepted.

The people of this Province are the jury, and upon their verdict there is much depending.

Let, therefore, the vote be complete so that when the ballots are counted and the result is known there will be no possible doubt as to what Ontario wants.

The question is too important to let the decision be rendered by only a proportion of the electorate.

When Ontario speaks it should be with the voice of all her citizens.

REDUCING ACCIDENTS.

The last coroner's jury in Toronto which investigated the death of a child killed in a traffic accident added to its verdict a recommendation that all children should be taught both at home and at school to cross streets only at intersections, and that all motorists be compelled to slow up at all intersections.

The first needs no elaboration; were children made to realize the danger of suddenly darting out into the roadway there is no question but that the casualty list would be considerably reduced.

The motorist is looking for pedestrians at the corners, but when a child unexpectedly runs out into the street it is sometimes almost impossible to avert an accident.

As to the second recommendation, there is need of such a precaution.

Drivers are too much inclined to take a chance at intersections, shooting across at a rate of speed that is inviting disaster.

Some cities have adopted a bylaw compelling motorists driving into a main artery from a side street to bring their cars to a full stop.

It can readily be seen how such a regulation adds to the general safety, averting much of the danger that at present exists at street intersections.

Almost daily there are accidents that would be impossible with such a provision as this in force.

Peterborough will have to fall in line with other centres in attempting to reduce the number of traffic accidents.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

One of the best suggestions advanced for the alleviation of unemployment distress is that submitted by a committee of the jobless for the consideration of Premier Ferguson, says the Hamilton Spectator. It is that the Provincial Government institute a co-operative scheme among employers of labor which will provide one extra job each week during the winter months. It is proposed, of course, that this be temporary employment of but one week's duration, so that the greatest good may accrue to the greatest number, but there are possibilities in it that may prove mutually beneficial. The plan would permit of employers appraising the skill and industry of a great number of transient employees, simplifying the task of selection when the need of taking on a permanent employee arose. In the long queues which stretch away from the employment wickets of the big industries each morning are men who are fitted to render valuable service, but who are denied, by the curt blanket dismissal, "Nothing today, gentlemen," the opportunity of demonstrating that fact. It should not be difficult for Premier Ferguson, who is reported to have enthusiastically endorsed the plan, to secure the co-operation of employers.

This problem of unemployment is everybody's problem. The jobless suffer the most acute distress, but indirectly the idleness of several thousand men, many of them fathers of families, affects the pocketbook of every householder. The householder who is in the possession of employment can and should face his responsibility toward his less fortunate brother. In every home there are always odd jobs to be done—wood to chop, ashes to carry out, yards to tidy, grass to be cut, snow to be shovelled. Charity dictates that such odd jobs should be turned over to some deserving man. In many homes one day's employment each week could be provided. It wouldn't seriously affect the family budget, but it would take bread and butter and the necessities of life to little homes where a dollar now looks like all the money in the world.

BRITAIN'S BRIEF CAMPAIGN.

The sudden dissolution of the British Parliament, with its three-weeks' election campaign, is an illustration of how quickly the British system enables a Government to take the opinion of the electorate. Our American neighbors began their active Presidential campaign last July with a series of party conventions; and yet they will not vote until nearly a week later than their British brothers.

The British system predicates an intelligent and alert electorate. If the British voters, as a rule, do not understand the issues now, they are most unlikely to understand them on polling day. No time is given for a prolonged and intensive educational campaign. There will be a few outstanding speeches and a lot of flare-light and cart-tail oratory; but the latter at least will stir up more excitement and epithetical exchanges than it will contribute to the instruction of the electorate.

* * * *

Still the important speeches in a British election are often of more importance than similar utterances are on this side of the water. Here we are given to the elaborate emphasis of the obvious. No "statesman" is expected to reveal anything very new about his attitude in a campaign speech. All that he can say has already been pretty thoroughly threshed out. But British public life is dotted with important figures who are not constantly stating their position on public questions; and they often make pronouncements during a campaign which change the face of the terrain. For example, Lord Derby's position on the Baldwin tariff policy was in doubt at the last elections until he spoke—and it was not altogether free from doubt afterward.

Thus the speeches of the leaders in Great Britain may change votes in a way unknown over here; but they do it—not by argument—but by changing the issues. This lends an especial interest to campaign speeches across the water which they all too commonly lack with us. They are apt to be "news"—not merely harangues. But, of course, this very fact requires that they shall be addressed to an electorate already well-informed on current politics and fully equipped to appreciate the shades of meaning in even a somewhat cryptic speech.

The question inevitably arises whether the modern British electorate is so informed and equipped. This system of sudden elections and short campaigns was created for a much more restricted franchise. When only those with the leisure to keep up with politics, and the immediate interest in public issues which comes from the circumstance that one's financial position is involved, possessed the vote, then undoubtedly the British electorate was constantly in touch with events. It had to be. It was a business proposition.

* * * *

But what about the new electorate? Is it any better informed than our own? There are some obvious reasons at least why it should be. The issues are more real in Great Britain than with us. They cut deeper into their economic life. The Labor party has not been able to do very much for the expectant elements that put it in office; but that is because they were unable to put it also in power. They may hope for better luck next time.

Ramsay MacDonald has on this occasion made the British "short election" even shorter. Possibly he has had a strategic reason. Possibly he thinks that the less time he gives to the Liberals and Conservatives to "get together," the fewer will be the three-cornered contests they will be able to eliminate. And the chief hope of Labor rests upon the number of three-cornered contests that his opponents wage. Naturally MacDonald wants as many as possible.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Motorists would welcome some adequate Government control of some of the detours.

One observer declares that Labour will gain ten seats in the British general election. Well, his guess is just as good as anybody else's.

The British Government was defeated on a minor issue, but the result is just the same as if the disagreement had been over something of great importance.

There is nothing snail-like about "slow old England" when it comes to a question of an election campaign. The Labour Government was defeated the night before last and the election will be held on October 29th, allowing just three weeks for the contest.

GILBERT TO WED BEFORE SAILING

S. Parker Gilbert Jr. Will Marry Louise Todd of Louisville Ky.

By HARRY B. HUNT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—October, 1924, is destined to be a big month in the life of S. Parker Gilbert Jr., youthful financial genius, who while in his twenties, as undersecretary of the United States Treasury, won from the Government's fiscal workers the title of "The Brains of the Treasury."

On Oct. 8 Gilbert will be married to Miss Louise Todd of Louisville, Ky.

Three days later, Oct. 11, he will sail with his bride to take up his labors as agent general in the administration of German reparations under the Dawes plan.

* * *

The Gilbert-Todd nuptials, incidentally, will cause quite an exodus of official and social notables from Washington to Louisville. Gilbert, as a most "eligible" young man during the days of his service as under-secretary, was socially as well as officially popular.

His bride-to-be, who has spent two winters in Washington, where she was active in amateur society theatricals, is regarded as virtually a Washingtonian.

Announcement of the Gilbert-Todd engagement, however, was something of a surprise to their friends here. Gilbert had been engaged, by rumor, at various times to various Washington buds, and at one time it was whispered he was to become the son-in-law of his then boss, Secretary Mellon.

All these rumors, however, proved baseless, and Gilbert's friends at last decided he was wedded to finance; that he was an unromantic individual after all, with a heart as impenetrable as the chilled-steel vaults in the treasury sub-basement.

* * *

But the reparations job revealed the romance. It hadn't been expected to announce the engagement for a couple of months yet, and the wedding wasn't to have been until January.

But could even the most able financial wizard keep his mind on reparations, in Europe, while his sweetheart was back in Louisville, Ky., U. S. A.?

Gilbert and Miss Todd decided that he couldn't. At least that he shouldn't have to try.

A sweetheart in Louisville, it was agreed, would be a bigger handicap than a bride in Berlin.

So the date of the wedding was advanced four months, the hurried invitations sent out and Gilbert reserved the bridal suite on a liner for France.

* * *

Much mystery has been maintained as to the reasons, if any, back of the recent week-end visit of Senator Medill McCormick and Mrs. McCormick at the White House.

Medill, having just been defeated for renomination as senator from Illinois, it is figured would hardly be called in for a political conference.

"What then?" the curious asked. "Ah! Maybe an ambassadorship!"

The fact that McCormick is a "lame duck," it is held, would be no bar to his eligibility for a diplomatic post. Frank Kellogg was picked as ambassador to Great Britain after having been defeated for re-election to the senate by the youthful Farm-Laborite, Henrik Shipstead.

As a member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs McCormick has had a finger in shaping our diplomatic policy. And he is a dependable Republican "regular" on all questions touching our foreign relationships.

Also, which is a controlling factor in the selection of ambassadors, he has enough millions to enable him to accept such a post."

FRENCH BEAT TAXES

Clever French Find Way to Overcome Inheritance Taxes.

PARIS, October 13. — A law was passed in France recently making the legal adoption of children relatively easy of accomplishment, and the new measure is resulting in loss of revenue to the Government.

Inheritance taxes in France are heavy. On a fortune of 1,000,000 francs a nephew who inherits must pay 400,000 francs to the state, a grand-nephew 441,000 francs, an unrelated inheritor 482,000 francs, but a child pays only 123000 francs.

Adopted children rank as real children, so it has become the habit for testators to adopt distant relatives and friends to whom they desire to leave money.

MOOSE CONTRIBUTE TO POOR CHILDREN

Loyal Order of Moose Erect Five Buildings, Costing $250,000.

MOOSEHEART, Ill., Oct. 13. — (Associated Press).—Another chapter in Mooseheart's childhood conservation program was written when the 53,017 Ohio residents who are members of the Loyal Order of Moose presented to their supreme officials, headed by Secretary James J. Davis, five buildings costing $250,000 to be erected here.

Mooseheart is a city of childhood built and maintained by the Moose order, as a school-home-city for dependent children of deceased members of the order.

The Ohio village will join what already is officially known as the Pennsylvania Baby village. It is the only one in which the inhabitants, except those taking care of them, are babies.

The Ohio buildings will be known as Ohio Plaza, into which will go the babies after they are too big and too old for the Baby village. The Ohio Plaza will be of distinct Ohio architecture, and the central building will be a copy of the state capitol at Columbus.

Thirty-nine new buildings are to be erected at Mooseheart, all to be donated by lodges and groups of lodges. These new buildings will cost about $1,500,000. Nearly $10,000,000 has been expended for buildings and accessories at Mooseheart since it was founded in July, 1913.

JUDGE ISSUES A FEW SHOULDN'TS

Famous Divorce Arbiter Issues Don'ts for Girls and Boys.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct 13.—After all, the easiest solution of the divorce problem is picking the right sort of husband or wife.

Judge Thomas F. Graham, who presided over divorce action in San Francisco for more than 20 years, and who is known the country over as the "great reconciler" testifies to that. And he ought to know, for he has granted thousands of divorces and annulments and has brought about a great many reconciliations.

Judge Graham has made an intensive study of the cause of divorces in his 20 years of experience. He has compiled a list of ten "Nevers" for men and the same number for women contemplating matrimony.

Here they are:

"Nevers" For Girls.

1. Never marry a man who does not read the newspaper sport sections. Young fellows who are not interested in athletic sports are not apt to be interested in anything but themselves.

2. Never marry a man who plays cards for money. Love for games of chance is almost certain to supplant all other loves.

3. Never marry a man who says he has no bad habits. He is pretty sure to have a vice much worse than drinking or smoking. If he's of the "holier-than-thou" variety he soon will become a pest.

4. Never marry a man your parents object to, unless your parents are most unreasonable. Sixty-five per cent of all elopements end in divorce courts.

5. Never marry a man who says he does not care for children. He's unnatural, selfish, and not to be trusted.

6. Never marry a man because he's a good dancer. Men who have intelligent feet seldom have anything in their heads.

7. Never marry a man who detests dogs. He is incapable of loving anything, even himself.

8. Never marry a man who drinks on the sly. He is incapable on the sly. If he isn't fair and square on that count he'll deceive you in other things.

9. Never marry a man who speaks slightingly of your parents or of old people. He'll neglect you when you begin to get gray and wrinkled.

10. Never marry until you are old enough to know what you are doing. Sixteen-year-old brides too often are 17-year-old grass widows.

"Nevers" For Men

1. Never marry a girl who has soft white hands when her mother's are roughened by hard work. She won't be a good helpmate.

2. Never marry a girl who wants you to take her to a show every night and is never content to sit at home. She's not the type who will make a home for you.

3. Never marry a girl who keeps her room or the parlor littered with signed photographs of former beaux. She's a collector of heart-throbs and she won't stop flirting after she marries.

4. Never marry a girl who is ashamed of her parents and doesn't want you to meet them. She's the wrong sort for any man.

5. Never marry a girl whose only thought is clothes. She will always be a clothes-hanger and she'll keep you broke.

6. Never marry a girl who insists that you spend more on her than you can afford. She will have no thought for your financial affairs after marriage.

7. Never marry a girl who is immodest in dress. No man wants to blush for his wife's appearance. On the other hand, a girl who is slovenly and untidy will kill the most ardent love.

8. Never marry the promiscuous kisser. She'll cause lots of grief and heart-pangs later on.

9. Never marry a girl several years younger than yourself. The difference in ages will cause many a 'spat,' and 'spats' are harbingers of alimony.

10. And never marry a girl who is not fond of children. Childless homes, except in unusual cases, are not enduring.

YOU'LL LIKE THIS DESERT

A dainty tasty dessert is the final touch to any meal, but meals have the habit of occurring so frequently that one runs out of ideas for dishes that will please everybody and yet be simple and healthful. One of the nicest desserts we have run across in some time is this one.

Orange Fritters.

1-2 cupful Borden Evaporated Milk
1-2 cupful flour
1-3 teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful baking powder
1 teaspoonful sugar
1 teaspoonful butter, melted
1 large orange, seedless
Powdered sugar.

Add the dry ingredients, sifted together to the milk, and then add the shortening. Divide the orange into sections. Heat fat. Dip the sections of the orange one at a time into the batter, slip them into the fat and cook till they are golden brown. Drain on crumpled paper, dust with powdered sugar, and serve with fruit sauce as a dessert.

This recipe comes from the Borden recipe book, which contains a wonderful variety of recipes, from soup to nuts, as the saying is, many of them illustrated in natural colours so beautifully as to make one want to try the dish instantly. A copy of the booklet may be obtained without cost from the Borden Company in Montreal on mentioning this paper.

Words and Grammar

(By Evangeline Weed.)

In the preceding lesson it was pointed out that one's expression of thoughts is an important part of one's personality. An important feature of expression is the use of words and grammar.

1—How many words do I know? If you are an average person your vocabulary is considerably less than 5,000. Yet, the average dictionary—perhaps the sort you have in your home—contains 100,000 words or more. However, Shakespeare used only about 15,000 words, so if your usage reached 6,000 or 7,000 you would be well equipped to express yourself clearly. You can easily ascertain your vocabulary strength by taking a dictionary(going through it with a pencil and marking those words that you use.

2—How may I increase my vocabulary? At least once a day, in reading or in conversation, you come across a word you would not use yourself. Look that word up. Learn it. Use it three times in conversation the next day. Every day add a word.

3—How may I learn of mistakes in word usage, grammar, pronunciation There is only one way to learn anything and that is by study, but study need not be difficult. There are books on "words misused," "words mispronounced,' 'and common mistakes in grammar. Go to your library and study them.

Few people realise how they abuse the language. For instance, many people do not know what an adverb is; consequently they use one, and their language is frightful. Others are constantly using one word when they mean another. And still more mispronounce words.

LAUGHTER CHOKED WITH TEARS

By ALICE ROHE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(United Press).—Humor in its real sense—of laughter choked with tears—has been dramatized in a way that is bound to stir the emotions of everyone. The play is "Mimick," presented by Winthrop Ames at the Booth Theatre, and I doubt if there is a single person who views it who doesn't feel the tug of memory or the realization of truthful experience in this comic-tragic photograph of real life.

When it was announced that Edna Ferber's short story, "Old Man Minick," was to be dramatized by George F. Kaufman in collaboration with the author, it was a foregone conclusion that all the comedy elements would be given full play. There was the question, however, if in the pathetic tragedy of this old man there was enough action to sustain a three-act play. The answer is that from the viewpoint of the "genre" picture, there is. From the standpoint of traditional technical drama, there isn't. But who cares about the latter, for the play is so interesting in its characterization, so amusing, so side-splitting at moments, so heart-rending at others, that we forget all about stereotyped dramatic tenets.

The short story, "Old Man Minick," upon which the play is built, has to do with an old man coming to live with his son and daughter-in-law. He becomes somewhat of a nuisance in his assumption of patriarchal adviser and interferer. The climax comes the day his daughter-in-law is having a meeting of her civic welfare club. Already the mode of living of the young people in the small apartment has become somewhat disrupted. After the inopportune presence of two old cronies from the Home, followed by Minick's breaking up the meeting, the daughter-in-law in nervous hysterics announces to her husband that either she or the father will leave the apartment. It is Old Man Minick, however, who, in spite of his son's and daughter-in-law's protestations of welcome — leaves of his own accord.

The final curtain—Minick's departure for the Home—is a moment of almost unbearable pathos. The tragedy, with it's ever-parallel current of comedy, is so real because O. P. Heggie, who plays Minick, never once sentimentalizes the role. There is no maudlin play for sympathy, which makes Heggie's characterization an excellent thing. Phyllis Povah, as the daughter-in-law, gives a fine performance, especially in the nerve-racked hysterical outbursts. Frederic Burt as the son is, as always, convincing and completely in character, a quality not frequent enough on the stage today.

There may be a shade too much kindliness on both sides in the presentation of the problem—tiresome old age and impatient youth.

For pure fun, the second act, showing the meeting of the club women, is one of the most humorous things on Broadway.

BUYING VEGETABLES

When buying vegetables avoid those of poor quality that are wilted, speckled, overripe or green The waste amounts to much more than the saving in cost.

DEFECTIVE PIPES GREATEST KNOWN CAUSE OF FIRES

Losses From This Source In 1923 Amounted To $1,281,443.

The greatest known cause of fire in Ontario is and remains defective heating apparatus — stoves, stove-pipes, furnaces, furnace-pipes and chimneys. Losses from this source in 1923, as reported by Fire Marshal Heaton, amounted in this province to $1,281,443. It would be interesting to speculate how far this figure could be reduced if the ordinary precautions which common-sense dictates were taken by every householder. The results of a greater watchfulness in the home and store of this commonplace hazard would, we are sure, afford a great deal of satisfaction to those who are studying and charting analytical statistics of our national fire wastage. And the subject is of more than academic interest to the insuring public, as a general and permanent reduction of fire losses must precede a reduction in insurance rates, which stand in relation as cause and effect, and the remedy, constant watchfulness of fire hazards, is in the hands of the insuring public itself. Let it be understood that fire losses are not paid by insurance companies. They are paid by the insuring public through the agency of our fire insurance companies.

All stove and furnace piping should be taken down and cleared of soot before the autumn fires are lighted. An accumulation of soot in the piping will clog the draughts so that the smoke from the fire in the stove cannot escape readily into the chimney. Smoke is unburned carbon which generates a gas. Gases expand, and if a way of escape is not found from the stove, an explosion will occur which, by throwing burning embers or hot coals about the room, may set fire to the house or even do serious bodily harm to a member of the household. Or the soot in the piping may itself catch fire, thus making the pipes red hot and possibly igniting adjacent woodwork in wall or ceiling.

Every householder should not only thoroughly clean his stove and furnace pipes but he should carefully examine them for defects. He should replace with new piping any section that is even slightly rusted or has the smallest of holes in it. For these holes are "spark holes" and a serious menace to the safety of his home.

Stove pipes passing through walls or partitions should be enclosed in "thimbles," made of galvanized iron, double-walled and ventilated. These "thimbles" should be at least eight inches wider than the diameter of the piping. A guard should be placed about all piping in the attic to prevent inflammable matter being placed near or against it.

The life of furnace pipes can be lengthened materially by removing them from the cellar and storing them in a dry place above ground during the summer. If this is thought to entail too much trouble, rusting and consequent deterioration can be greatly reduced by removing the end of the pipe from the chimney and thus preventing the constant flow of damp air through the pipes caused by the draught of the chimney.

These are just a few precautions which every householder ought to exercise to ensurer the safety of his home, and they deserve publicity at this season of the year.

WORD TO THE FANS.

Hastings Suffers From the Same Condition As Many Other Towns.

HASTINGS, October 11. — The Hastings boys are good sports, and took their defeat on Wednesday like gentlemen, coming across immediately after the game and being among the first to congratulate the winners.

This cannot be said of a certain portion of Hastings fans, whose idea of a baseball game seems to be the ragging of the umpires and visiting players. They are not all that way, for the majority, although they cheer their team in good old rousing manner, are clean about it.

The Hastings team laboured under difficulties in the first half, but they gamely kept up with a handful of spectators at their home games, but when they were returned winners of the second half these stay-at-home-and growl fans held up their heads and boasted about "our" team.

They then come out to the finish and try to create as much disturbance as possible.

The Roseneath officials and players have the highest respect for Manager Wellman and the Hastings players, also the real fans, for the treatment which they have received in Hastings during the entire season.

FABLES ON HEALTH

It has been said that there are no emergencies for those who are prepared.

Mrs. Mann generally had on hand bandages and preparations in case one of the children might be hurt.

Every house accumulates old linen and, instead of throwing it away, why not make it into handy bandages for an emergency?

Be certain that it is thoroughly clean, team it into strips two or three inches wide, placing one end upon the other and sew together with soft thread until a length of two or three yards has been obtained.

Then roll them into soft bundles and half fill a well-cleansed glass jar. At the top pack a good wad of absorbent cotton and put a light weight at the bottom.

To thoroughly sterilize set the jar upon an inverted plate in a kettle of cold water, deep enough for the water to come within an inch of the bottle's neck.

Put the kettle upon a slow fire and let the water reach a heat of 180 degrees and maintain this heat for three hours. The bandages will then be thoroughly sterilized.

ALUMINUM EASILY AFFECTED

Aluminum is slightly affected by both acids and alkalies. Vegetables will discolor it where acid fruits brighten it.

NOT TOO HOT.

Be careful not to dry your wooden chopping bowl in too great heat as it will split if you do. Scald it always to keep it from warping.

CHAPTER XXXII

THE JUDGES

In the absence of any woman into whose care they might entrust her, Lord Henry, Sir John and Master Tobias, the ship's surgeon, had, amongst them, tended Rosamund as best they could when, numbed and half dazed, she was brought aboard the Silver Heron.

Master Tobias had applied such rude restoratives as he commanded, and, having made her as comfortable as possible upon a couch in the spacious cabin astern, he had suggested that she should be allowed the rest of which she appeared so sorely to stand in need. He had ushered out the commander and the queen's lieutenant, and himself had gone below to a still more urgent case that was demanding his attention: that of Lionel Tressilian, who had been brought limp and unconscious from the galeasse together with some four other wounded members of the Silver Heron's crew.

At dawn Sir John had come below, seeking news of his wounded friend. He found the surgeon kneeling over Lionel. As he entered, Master Tobias turned aside, rinsed his hands in a metal basin placed upon the floor and rose, wiping them on a napkin.

"I can do no more, Sir John," he muttered in a despondent voice. "He is sped."

"Dead, d'ye mean?" cried Sir John, a catch in his voice.

The surgeon tossed aside the napkin, and slowly drew down the upturned sleeves of his black doublet.

"All but dead," he answered. "The wonder is that any spark of life should still linger in a body with that hole in it. He is still bleeding inwardly, and his pulse is steadily weakening. It must continue so until, imperceptibly, he passes away. You may count him dead already, Sir John." He paused.

"A merciful, painless end," he added, and sighed perfunctorily, his pale, shaven face decently grave, for all such scenes as these were commonplaces in his life.

"Of the other four," he continued, "Blair is dead; the other three should all recover."

But Sir John gave little heed to the matter of those others. His grief and dismay at this quenching of all hope for his friend precluded any other consideration at the moment.

"And he will not even recover consciousness?" he asked, insisting, although already he had been answered.

"As I have said, you may count him dead already, Sir John. My skill can do nothing for him."

Sir John's head drooped, his countenance drawn and grave.

"Nor can my justice," he added gloomily. "Though it avenge him, it cannot give me back my friend."

He looked at the surgeon.

"Vengeance, sir, is the hollowest of all the mockeries that go to make up life."

"Your task, Sir John," replied the surgeon, "is one of justice, not vengeance."

"A quibble, when all is said."

He stepped to Lionel's side, and looked down at the pale handsome face over which the dark shadows of death were already creeping.

"If he would but speak in the interests of this justice that is to do! If we might but have the evidence of his own words, lest I should ever be asked to justify the hanging of Oliver Tressilian."

"Surely, sir," the surgeon ventured, "there can be no such question ever. Mistress Rosamund's word alone should suffice, if indeed so much as that even were required."

"Aye! His offences against God and man are too notorious to leave grounds upon which any should ever question my right to deal with him out of hand."

There was a tap at the door and Sir John's own body-servant entered with the announcement that Mistress Rosamund was asking urgently to see him.

"She will be impatient for news of him," Sir John concluded, and he groaned. "My God! How am I to tell her? To crush her in the very hour of her deliverance with such news as this! Was ever irony so cruel?"

He turned and stepped heavily to the door. There he paused.

"You will remain by him to the end?" he bade the surgeon interrogatively.

Master Tobias bowed.

"Of course, Sir John." And he added, "'Twill not be long."

Sir John looked across at Lionel again—a glance of valediction.

"God rest him!" he said hoarsely, and passed out.

It was in the waist he paused, turned to a knot of lounging seamen, and bade them throw a halter over the yard-arm, and hail the renegade Oliver Tressilian from his prison. Then with slow, heavy step and heavier heart he went up the companion to the vessel's castellated poop.

The sun, new risen in a faint golden haze, shone over a sea faintly rippled by the fresh clean winds of dawn to which their every stitch of canvas was now spread. Away on the larboard quarter, a faint cloudy outline, was the coast of Spain.

Sir John's long sallow face was preternaturally grave when he entered the cabin, where Rosamund awaited him. He bowed to her with a grave courtesy, doffing his hat and casting it upon a chair. The last five years had brought some strands of white into his thick black hair, and at the temples in particular it showed very grey, giving him the appearance of age to which the deep lines in his brow contributed.

He advanced towards her, as she rose to receive him.

"Rosamund, my dear!" he said gently, and took both her hands. He looked with eyes of sorrow and concern into her white, agitated face. "Are you sufficiently rested, child?"

"Rested?" she echoed on a note of wonder that he should suppose it.

"Poor lamb, poor lamb!" he murmured, as though there might have done, and drew her towards him, stroking that gleaming auburn head.

"We'll speed us back to England with every stitch of canvas spread. Take heart then, and——"

But she broke in impetuously, drawing away from him as she spoke, and his heart sank with foreboding of the thing she was about to inquire.

"I overheard a sailor just now saying to another that it is your intent to hang Sir Oliver Tressilian out of hand—this morning."

He misunderstood her utterly.

"Be comforted," he said. "My justice shall be swift; my vengeance sure. The yard-arm is charged already with the rope on which he shall leap to his eternal punishment."

She caught her breath, and set a hand upon her bosom as if to repress its sudden tumult.

"And upon what grounds," she asked him with an air of challenge, squarely facing him, "do you intend to do this thing?"

"Upon what grounds?" he faltered.

He stared and frowned, bewildered by her question and its tone.

"Upon what grounds?" he repeated, foolishly almost in the intensity of his amazement.

Then he considered her more closely, and the wildness of her eyes bore to him slowly an explanation of words that at first had seemed beyond explaining.

"I see!" he said in a voice of infinite pity; for the conviction to which he had leaped was that her poor wits were all astray after the horrors through which she had lately travelled.

"You must rest," he said gently, "and give no thought to such matters as these. Leave them to me, and be very sure that I shall avenge you as is due."

"Sir John, you mistake me, I think. I do not desire that you avenge me. I have asked you upon what grounds you intend to do this thing, and you have not answered me."

In increasing amazement he continued to stare. He had been wrong, then. She was quite sane and mistress of her wits. And yet, instead of the fond inquiries concerning Lionel which he had been dreading, came this amazing questioning of his grounds to hang his prisoner.

"Need I state to you—of all living folk—the offences which that dastard has committed?" he asked, expressing thus the very question that he was setting himself.

"You need to tell me," she answered, "by what right you constitute yourself his judge and executioner; by what right you send him to his death in this peremptory fashion, without trial."

Her manner was as stern as if she were invested with all the authority of a judge.

"But you," he faltered in his ever-growing bewilderment, "you, Rosamund, against whom he has offended so greviously, surely you should be the last to ask me such a question! Why, it is my intention to proceed with him as is the manner of the law with all knaves taken as Oliver Tressilian was taken. If you mood be merciful towards him—which, as God lives, I can scarce conceive—consider that this is the greatest mercy he can look for."

"You speak of mercy and vengeance in a breath, Sir John." She was growing calm, her agitation was quieting, and a grim sternness was replacing it.

He made a gesture of impatience.

"What good purpose could it serve to take him to England?" he demanded. "There he must stand his trial, and the issue if foregone. It were unnecessary to torture him."

"The issue may be none so foregone as you suppose," she replied. "And that trial is his right."

Sir John took a turn in the cabin, his wits all confused. It was preposterous that he should stand and argue upon such a matter with Rosamund of all people, and yet she was compelling him to it against his every inclination, against common sense itself.

"If he so urges it, we'll not deny him," he said at last, deeming it best to humor her. "We'll take him back to England if he demands it, and let him stand his trial there. But Oliver Tressilian must realize too well what is in store for him to make any such demand."

He paused before her, and held out his hands in entreaty.

"Come, Rosamund, my dear! You are distraught, you——"

"I am indeed distraught, Sir John," she answered, and took the hands that he extended.

"Oh, have pity!" she cried with a sudden change to utter intercession. "I implore you to have pity!"

"What pity can I show you, child? You have but to name——"

"'Tis not pity for me, but pity for him that I am beseeching of you."

"For him?" he cried, frowning again.

"For Oliver Tressilian."

He dropped her hands and stood away.

"God's light!" he swore. "You sue for pity for Oliver Tressilian—for that renegade, that incarnate devil! Oh, are you mad?" he stormed. "Mad!" and he flung away from her, whirling his arms.

"I love him," she said simply.

That answer smote him instantly still. Under the shock of it he just stood and stared at her again, his jaw fallen.

"You love him!" he said at last below his breath. "You love him! You love a man who is a pirate, a renegade, the abductor of yourself and of Lionel, the man who murdered your brother!"

"He did not." She was fierce in her denial of it. "I have learnt the truth of that matter."

"From his lips, I suppose?" said Sir John, and he was unable to suppress a sneer. "And you believed him?"

"Had I not believed him I should not have married him!"

"Married him?"

Sudden horror came now to temper his bewilderment. Was there to be no end to these astounding revelations? Had they reached the climax yet, he wondered, or was there still more to come?

"You married that infamous villain?" he asked, and his voice was expressionless.

"I did; in Algiers, on the night we landed there."

He stood gaping at her whilst a man might count to a dozen and then abruptly he exploded.

"It is enough!" he roared, shaking a clenched fist at the low ceiling of the cabin.

"It is enough, as God's my witness. If there were no other reason to hang him, that would be reason and to spare. You may look to me to make an end of this infamous marriage within the hour."

"Ah, if you will but listen to me!" she pleaded.

"Listen to you?"

He paused by the door, to which he had stepped in his fury, intent upon giving the word that there and then should make an end, and, summoning Oliver Tressilian before him, announce his fate to him and see it executed on the spot.

"Listen to you?" he repeated, scorn and anger blending in his voice. "I have heard more than enough already!"

There were a score of questions a man of perspicuity would now have asked, not one of which appears to have occurred to the knight of Arwenack. If anything arrested him upon the cabin's threshold, delayed him in the execution of the thing he had resolved upon, no doubt it was sheer curiosity as to what further extravagances Rosamund might yet have it in her mind to utter.

"This man has suffered," she told him, and was not put off by the hard laugh with which he mocked the statement. "God alone knows what he has suffered in body and in soul for sins which he never committed. Much of that suffering came to him through me. I know to-day that he did not murder Peter. I know that but for a disloyal act of mine he would be in a position incontestably to prove it without the aid of any man. I know that he was carried off—kidnapped—before ever he could clear himself of the accusation, and that, as a consequence, no life remained him but the life of a renegade—which he chose. Mine was the chief fault. And I must make amends. Spare him to me! If you love me——"

But he had heard enough. His sallow face was flushed to a flaming purple.

"Not another word!" he blazed at her. "It is because I do love you—love and pity you from my heart—that I will not listen. It seems I must save you not only from that knave but from yourself. I were false to my duty by you, false to your dead father and murdered brother else. Anon, you shall thank me, Rosamund."

And again he turned to depart.

"Thank you?" she cried, in a ringing voice. "I shall curse you! All my life I shall loathe and hate you, holding you in horror for a murderer if you do this thing. You fool! Can you not see! You fool!"

He recoiled. Being a man of position and importance—quick, fearless and vindictive of temperament (and also, it would seem, extremely fortunate)—it had never happened to him, in all his life, to be so uncompromisingly and frankly judged. She was by no means the first to account him a fool, but she was certainly the first to call him one to his face, and, whilst to the general it might have proved her extreme sanity, to him it was no more than the culminating proof of her mental distemper.

"Pish!" he said between anger and pity. "You are mad—stark mad! Your mind's unhinged; your vision's all distorted. This fiend incarnate is become a poor victim of the evil of others, and I am become a murderer in your sight; a murderer and a fool. God's life! Bah! Anon, when you are rested, when you are restored, I pray that things may once again assume their proper aspect."

He turned, all a-quiver still with indignation, and was barely in time to avoid being struck by the door which opened suddenly from without.

Lord Henry Goade, dressed entirely in black, and with his gold chain of office (an ominous sign, could they have read it) upon his broad chest, stood in the doorway, silhouetted sharply against the flood of morning sunlight at his back. His benign face was extremely grave, to match the suit he had put on, but its expression lightened somewhat when his glance fell upon Rosamund standing there by the table's edge.

"I am overjoyed," he said, "to find you so far recovered, and seeming so much yourself again."

"She were better abed!" snapped Sir John, two hectic spots burning still in his sallow cheeks. "She is distempered, quite."

"Sir John is mistaken, my lord," was her calm assurance. "I am very far from suffering as he conceives."

"I rejoice therein, my dear," said his lordship.

"It happens," he added somberly, "that we may require your testimony in this grave matter that is toward." He turned to Sir John: "I have bidden them bring up the prisoner for sentence. Is the ordeal too much for you, Rosamund?"

"Indeed, no, my lord," she replied readily; "I welcome it." And threw back her head as one who braces herself for a trial of endurance.

"No, no," cut in Sir John, protesting fiercely. "Do not heed her, Harry. She——"

"Considering," she interrupted, "that the chief count against the prisoner must concern his—his dealings with myself, surely the matter is one upon which I should be heard."

"Surely, indeed," Lord Henry agreed, a little bewildered, "always provided you are certain it will not overtax your endurance and distress you overmuch. We could perhaps dispense with your testimony."

"In that, my lord, I assure you that you are mistaken," she answered. "You cannot dispense with it."

"Be it so, then," said Sir John grimly, and he strode back to the table, prepared to take his place there.

Lord Henry's twinkling blue eyes were still considering Rosamund somewhat searchingly, his fingers tugging thoughtfully at his short tuft of ashen-colored beard. Then he turned to the door.

"Come in, gentlemen," he said, "and bid them bring up the prisoner."

Steps clanked upon the deck, and three of Sir John's officers made their appearance to complete the court that was to sit in judgment upon the renegade corsair, a judgment whose issue was foregone.

CHAPTBR XXXIII

THE ADVOCATE

Chairs were set at the long brown table of massive oak, and the officers sat down facing the open door and the blaze of sunshine on the poop-deck, their backs to the other door and the horn windows, which opened upon the stern galley. The middle place was assumed by Lord Henry Goade by virtue of his office of queen's lieutenant, and the reason for his chain of office became now apparent. He was to preside over this summary court. On his right hand sat Sir John Killigrew, and beyond him an officer named Youldon. The other two, whose names have not survived, occupied his lordship's left.

A chair had been set for Rosamund at the table's extreme right and across the head of it, so as to detach her from the judicial bench. She sat there now, her elbows on the polished board, her face resting in her half-clenched hands, her eyes scrutinizing the five gentlemen who formed this court.

Steps rang on the companion and a shadow fell athwart the sunlight beyond the open door. From the vessel's waist came a murmur of voices and a laugh. Then Sir Oliver appeared in the doorway, guarded by two fighting seamen in corselet and morion with drawn swords.

He paused an instant in the doorway, and his eyelids flickered as if he had received a shock when his glance alighted upon Rosamund. Then, under the suasion of his guards, he entered and stood forward, his wrists still pinioned behind him, slightly in advance of the two soldiers.

He nodded perfunctorily to the court, his face entirely calm.

"A fine morning, sirs," said he.

The five considered him in silence, but Lord Henry's glance, as it rested upon the corsair's Moslem garb, was eloquent of the scorn which filled his heart.

"You are no doubt aware, sir," said Sir John, after a pause, "of the purpose for which you have been brought hither."

"Scarcely," said the prisoner. "But I have no doubt whatever of the purpose for which I shall presently be taken hence."

"However," he continued, cool and critical, "I can guess from your judicial attitudes the superfluous mockery that you intend. If it will afford you entertainment, faith I do not grudge indulging you. I would observe only that it might be considerate in you to spare Mistress Rosamund the pain and weariness of the business that is before you."

"Mistress Rosamund herself desired to be present," said Sir John, scowling.

"Perhaps," said Sir Oliver, "she does not realize——"

"I have made it abundantly plain to her," Sir John interrupted almost vindictively.

The prisoner looked at her as if in surprise, his brows knit. Then with a shrug he turned to his judges again.

"In that case," said he, "there's no more to be said. But before you proceed, there is another matter upon which I desire an understanding.

"The terms of my surrender were that all others should be permitted to go free. You will remember, Sir John, that you pledged me your knightly word for that. Yet I find aboard here one who was lately with me upon my galeasse—a sometime English seaman, named Jasper Leigh, whom you hold a prisoner."

"He killed Master Lionel Tressilian," said Sir John coldly.

"That may be, Sir John. But the blow was delivered before I made my terms with you, and you can not violate these terms without hurt to your honor."

"D'ye talk of honor, sir?" said Lord Henry.

"Of Sir John's honor, my lord," said the prisoner, with mock humility.

"You are here, sir, to take your trial," Sir John reminded him.

"So I had supposed. It is a privilege for which you agreed to pay a certain price, and now it seems you have been guilty of filching something back. It seems so, I say. For I cannot think but that the arrest was inadvertently effected, and that it will suffice that I draw your attention to the matter of Master Leigh's detention."

Sir John considered the table. It was beyond question that he was in honor bound to enlarge Master Leigh, whatever the fellow might have done; and, indeed, his arrest had been made without Sir John's knowledge until after the event.

"What am I to do with him?" he growled sullenly.

"That is for yourself to decide, Sir John. But I can tell you what you may not do with him. You may not keep him a prisoner, or carry him to England, or injure him in any way. Since his arrest was a pure error, as I gather, you must repair that error as best you can. I am satisfied that you will do so, and need say no more. Your servant, sirs," he added in intimation that he was now entirely at their disposal, and he stood waiting.

There was a slight pause, and then Lord Henry, his face inscrutable, his glance hostile and cold, addressed the prisoner.

"We have had you brought hither to afford you an opportunity of urging any reasons why we should not hang you out of hand, as is our right."

Sir Oliver looked at him in almost amused surprise.

"Faith!" he said at length. "It was never my habit to waste breath."

"I doubt you do not rightly apprehend me, sir," returned his lordship, and his voice was soft and silken as became his judicial position. "Should you demand a formal trial, we will convey you to England that you may have it."

"But lest you should build unduly upon that," cut in Sir John fiercely, "let me warn you that as the offences for which you are to suffer were chiefly committed within Lord Henry Goade's own jurisdiction, your trial will take place in Cornwall, where Lord Henry has the honor to be Her Majesty's Lieutenant and dispenser of justice."

"Her Majesty is to be congratulated," said Sir Oliver elaborately.

"It is for you to choose, sir," Sir John ran on, "whether you will be hanged on sea or land."

"My only possible objection would be to being hanged in the air. But you're not likely to heed that," was the flippant answer.

Lord Henry leaned forward again.

"Let me beg you, sir, in your own interests to be serious," he admonished the prisoner.

"I confess the occasion, my lord. For if you are to sit in judgment upon my piracy, I could not desire a more experienced judge of the matter on sea or land than Sir John Killigrew."

"I am glad to deserve your approval," Sir John replied tartly. "Piracy," he added, "is but the least of the counts against you."

Sir Oliver's brows went up, and he stared at the row of solemn faces.

"As God's my life, then, your other counts must needs be sound—or else, if there be any justice in your methods, you are like to be disappointed of your hopes of seeing me swing. Proceed, sirs, to the other counts. I vow you become more interesting than I could have hoped."

"Can you deny the piracy?" quoth Lord Henry.

"Deny it? No. But I deny your jurisdiction in the matter, or that of any English court, since I have committed no piracy in English waters."

The great enemy of teeth

Film is the great enemy of teeth beauty. And a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the common cause of pyorrhea. It holds food in contact with teeth, inviting the acid that causes decay.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Sir,—In Mr. J. H. Burnham's letter in a recent issue of the Examiner he very patronizingly says "many of these enthusiasts do not seem to know what prohibition means."

I think it is Mr. Burnham who does not know what prohibition means, for he says, "God did not prohibit sin." If Mr. Burnham will look up the word prohibit he will find it means to forbid and if he will look up the word forbid he will find it means, "to prohibit, to command not to do."

Now if he will turn to Genesis, 2nd chapter, 16 and 17 verses, he will find there that God commanded that Adam should not eat of the tree of knowledge, in these words, "Thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." The breaking of that command was the first sin. If there had been no command there would have been no sin. Therefore I suppose Mr. Burnham would argue there should have been no command as the commandments, or the law, has made us all sinners, just the same as those who wish to break the O.T.A. accuse that law of making them sneaks, perjurers, bootleggers, etc., when the fact remains that they were that in heart before the passage of the O. T. A. As Christ said on one occasion: "If I had not come into the world ye had not had sin, but now ye have no cloak for your sin.

I am well aware, of course, that these facts will not convince Mr. Burnham or alter his outlook, but it may prove to some that we do know what prohibit means.

Yours faithfully,
GEO. LEADER.

Has the Atlantic Ocean Gone Crazy?

Skippers Who Met "Twisters" and "Eighty-Foot" Waves Insist She Has; Here Is the Expert's Explanation of the Recent Disturbances

SKIPPERS and sailors, limping into American ports after the recent terrific storms, have fervently and rather angrily demanded to know if the Atlantic Ocean has gone crazy.

If a mere landlubber replies that an ocean couldn't go crazy, the skippers and sailors loudly roar:

"You're wrong! It has!"

And then they begin to tell of amazing things the hurricanes of August and September have done to men and boats and even to some of the biggest ocean liners.

They tell of cyclonic winds blowing in circles at a speed of 120 miles an hour, of waves eighty feet high, of lightning, rains and fogs, and of "hell let loose from Hatteras to the Gulf."

Then they begin to check up the astonishing and fantastic calamities that they and their ships have suffered.

They usually begin with the "typhoon," of August 26 that smashed in the portholes of the White Star liner "Arabic," ripped lifeboats to pieces on their stanchions, and more or less seriously injured 150 passengers and sailors.

But before they go into the details of that, they recount other things the "typhoon did."

This same great storm that hit the "Arabic," caught the "Homeric" off Hatteras. It caught the big liner with such violence that lifeboats were torn from the fastenings and swept away, while high waves smashed over her upper decks, doors were ripped from their hinges and passengers and sailors were banged about and had to be sent to hospitals when the ship docked. While the "Homeric" was weathering this terrible gale it picked up an S. O. S. signal from the freighter "Nordfarer," in the same waters, which said:

"Hit by giant wave, entire bridge swept overboard and captain lost."

The Munson liner "Munargo" also picked up the radio, and aid was sent to the "Nordfarer."

While these things were occurring on the ocean, the Atlantic coast was getting a taste of it, too. On August 22 the edge of the "typhoon" hit South Carolina above Savannah, with wind and "tidal waves," that did thousands of dollars' worth of damage to numerous small towns and villages. On August 26, the same storm drove the waters inward above Cape Cod until suburbs of Boston were flooded, and railroad trains had to plough through two feet of water to make their way along the tracks.

This great storm was preceded a few weeks earlier by the arctic storms that made history by holding up the American fliers in Iceland, and was almost immediately followed by another hurricane, of slightly less intensity.

This latter storm came in the first days of September. The schooner "Hathaway" was wrecked off Hatteras, and the captain and six men, their lifeboats smashed, found themselves in danger of drowning. They clung to driftwood through the night.

Injured Passenger Being Carried Off the "Arabic" After She Limped Into New York the Day Following the Cyclone.

those terrible days two ships passed them, one within half a mile, yet their frantic signaling went unseen or unheeded. Finally their signal was seen by the liner "Southern Cross," and they were rescued, when on the point of complete exhaustion.

at Arlington and from all the principal coast stations. He says that if the "Arabic" failed to get the warnings, it was either because its apparatus was temporarily out of order or because it was occupied with commercial messages.

The scientific explanation of the origin, nature and cause of such storms, as supplied by the Weather Bureau, may be reduced to quite simple terms:

Winds are produced by only one cause—differences in atmospheric pressure in adjacent localities. These pressure differences are due chiefly to differences in temperature.

In general, air, like water, if unrestrained, will flow from a region of higher pressure toward one of lower pressure. It is this property, modified by the rotation of the earth and various local influences, which causes the periodical winds of the world, and also the great cyclonic storms.

The earth is surrounded by an envelope of air, the bulk of which lies within ten miles of the earth's surface, though excessively rarified air probably occurs at a height of 300 miles or more. This sea of air partakes of the movements of the earth, and is also influenced so as to cause atmospheric tides somewhat similar to the tides which occur in the ocean.

If at any point in the above described system of air circulation, there occurs a local area of low pressure, the air from the surrounding region is forced inward, not toward the centre, however, but spirally around it, the velocity of the air depending upon the rapidity of change from high to low pressure.

Almost everyone has seen a tiny, miniature cyclone, when dust in a road, or leaves on a lawn are picked up and whirled around in circles. It is usually called a whirlwind. The cyclone which struck the "Arabic" was simply this same phenomenon, enormously enlarged.

The inward flow above described is converted by the rotation of the earth into an atmospheric whirl, turning to the left or counter-clockwise in the Northern Hemisphere, and in the opposite direction in the Southern Hemisphere.

Fully developed, the cyclone of the type which struck the "Arabic," consists of a well defined area, more or less circular in shape, throughout which the atmospheric pressure diminishes rapidly on all sides toward the centre. On the sides of the area, the winds blow with tremendous force. At the centre itself—the point of lowest pressure, is a region seldom more than ten or twenty miles in diameter, in which either calm or very light winds prevail. Here, too, the dense canopy of cloud which overhangs the storm area is pierced, forming the so-called "eye of the storm."

So that in spite of the fact that skippers and sailors felt that the ocean had gone quite crazy during the storms this Fall, they were in reality perfectly normal phenomena, varying only in intensity from those of past seasons.

The Famous Old Whaling Ship "Wanderer," Wrecked on the New England Coast by One of the Fierce August Storms.

In the morning the captain was seen to slip from his spar exhausted and sink. The surviving six men lashed planks together with strips of their clothing, while sharks surrounded them constantly. On this tiny improvised raft they floated for five days without water, and their only food was a few raw fish. The raft was so small that they couldn't all lie down on it at one time. Why weren't they swept off it by the waves? The answer is that they were swept off it, over and over again, but wearily managed to swim back and climb on it. During

The great storm that hit the "Arabic," described in some of the press reports as an "Oriental typhoon," which mysteriously appeared in the North Atlantic, was not a typhoon at all, and had nothing Oriental about its origin.

It was, correctly speaking, a "cyclonic hurricane," which is the normal type of storm for the place and season—a storm originating in the West Indies, and sweeping northward along the Atlantic coast, breaking out into occasional cyclones as it went northward. In a cyclone, winds turn in circles, counter-clockwise, around a comparatively calm centre.

In describing this particular storm, Mr. Kimball insisted upon one official point. Captain V. H. Hickson, of the "Arabic," which ran into the cyclone area off Nantucket Sound, declared that he had had no radio warnings. Mr. Kimball states officially for the Weather Bureau that radio warnings and messages, at stated regular hours daily and covering the entire period of the storm's sweep up the coast, were broadcast from the big naval station

No wonder men who have gone through such experiences think the Atlantic Ocean has gone crazy.

But it hasn't, really.

J. H. Kimball, meteorologist of the U. S. Weather Bureau in New York, who has supplied the material for the exclusive diagram of the great storm of August 26, which is reproduced on this page, declares that the storms this Fall have been quite normal and exactly like other storms which naturally occur at this season of the year, the only difference being they have been more violent.

A BIG PARADE TO CATHEDRAL

Nearly Thirteen Hundred Members of Holy Name Society Took Part.

There were nearly thirteen hundred members of the Holy Name Society from the city and district, in the parade which took place yesterday afternoon to commemorate in memorable fashion the six hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the organization. Juniors to the number of about two hundred and fifty were enrolled in the throng, which taxed the seating capacity of St. Peter's Cathedral, and left only a few available chairs for the crowds outside.

Commencing at three o'clock at Central Park, and proceeding down George street to Hunter street, thence to the Cathedral, the parade was a noble exemplification of the desire of those who took part in it, to do homage to the sacred name of Christ, and to make reparation for the blasphemous use of His name throughout the world.

Peterboro's three parishes were well represented, and there were large delegations present from the surrounding district, with representatives from Douro, Lakefield, Hastings, Norwood, Ennismore, Cobourg, Port Hope, Downeyville, and several cars from Belleville and Oshawa.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, accompanied by Rev. D. Costello, marched in the van of the lengthy double line of men, and Rev. J. McAuley led the Ennismore delegation. The Douro members carried their Holy Name banner.

Officers of the Holy Name Societies of the city were in charge of the march. Mr. William Bennet acted as Grand Marshal, Messrs. Neil Tobin and J. Boland leading the juniors, who marched in the forefront of the line.

Other line marshals were A. Doherty, the president of St. Peter's Holy Name Society, F. R. MacPherson, J. Trombley, J. Hanrahan, T. Cronin, Ray Bennett and T. Turcotte.

At the Cathedral, a short address was given by Rev. J. R. O'Brien, C. SS.R., of Toronto, followed by a solemn renewal of the pledges of the Society by the members, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, and a few words from Bishop O'Brien. Rev. J. McAuley of Ennismore led the singing of several hymns by the assemblage.

Priests present in the sanctuary were Right. Rev. Monsignor McColl, Rev. C. S. Bretherton of Hastings, Rev. M. McGuire of Douro; Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. P. J. Galvin, of Downeyville; Rev. P. Garvey, of Lakefield; Rev. K. Corkery, of Cobourg; Rev. J. Power, Rev. P. Costello and Rev. J. Collins.

Taking his text from the Psalms: "I thought on the days of old and I had in mind the eternal years," Rev. J. R. O'Brien, C.SS.R., of Toronto, prefaced his address with a congratulation on the wonderful gathering of men united in public testimonial of praise and respect to Christ's name. He characterized a parade of this description as a miniature of the history of God's Church down through the ages. "The basis of the Holy Name Society, reverence for God and for Jesus Christ, is the heart of religion, especially in this day of irreverence and licentious freedom. God has given us everything and He asks in return only our reverence and respect. We shudder when we hear of the terrible crimes which are committed daily in this generation, but how common a thing it is to hear the Name of Christ taken in vain. What a terrible thing to hear men utter blashphemously the sacred name of Jesus Christ, that name that embodies all the love of God for man! And yet we find Catholic men who profess to be followers of the humble Jesus going out of their way often to insult His Holy Name."

Comparing the spirit which animated the men before him to take part in such a public testimonial of their faith to the spirit of the ancient martyrs of the church, the reverend speaker adjured his hearers to always be willing to give the watching world such an example of courageous Catholicity. "Reverence for God is true piety. Reverence of your neighbor is true charity. You can give a good example to others by respect and reverence of yourself and your words, so that hundreds of years from now, when such gatherings as this take place by members of the Holy Name Society, the men who are taking part in them can look back to what you did and say, as the Psalmist said: "I thought on the days of old and I had in mind the eternal years."

The renewal of the pledges taken by members of the society followed, the vast concourse of men repeating solemnly the promises read from the manual by Rev. Father McAuley. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was solemnized by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, assisted by Rev. M. McGuire of Douro and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, a choir of male voices leading the singing of the "O Salutaris" and the "Tantum Ergo."

His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, closed the services with a few brief words, expressing his gratification at the generous response made by the men in turning out in such large numbers, mentioning particularly the fine banner carried by the Douro aggregation. Speaking of the objects of the Holy Name Society, he quoted St. James: "The man that has not sinned with his tongue, the same is a perfect man," and noted the various resolutions embodied in the pledge of the organization, which binds its followers against perjury, against blasphemy of any kind and against the use of obscene language and unseemly conversation. Six hundred and fifty years ago, said His Lordship, in the city of Lyons, France, the Holy Name Society was founded, after a campaign against blasphemy, a heritage of the Albigensian Heresy, had been made by St. Dominic. "The old church then was thirteen hundred years old. This year, in November, will be celebrated the sixteen hundredth anniversary of the Church of St. John Lateran, in Rome."

"Love the name of Christ for your own sakes, for the sake of your families and of the world," concluded the Bishop.

The service closed with the singing of "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of "The Examiner," Peterborough, Ont.

Sir,—As a Canadian citizen resident in the province of Quebec I in common with all temperance workers, am intensely interested in the campaign now going on in connection with the plebiscite on the O.T.A. Because of the arguments used by the opponents of the O.T.A., as well as the issues involved for the whole Dominion, a word from one outside the province of Ontario may not be considered impertinent.

We who believe in the prohibition of the liquor traffic recognize that if Ontario repudiates the O.T.A. and decides in favour of so-called government control, then the central citadel of our case will have fallen. The opponents of prohibition are as keenly alive to this fact as we are.

I do not think it is necessary to go over any of the often-used and refuted arguments in support of prohibition. As a resident of Quebec my purpose is only to take exception to the exploitation of the province as an unanswerable illustration of the benefits of government control. The guileless electors of Ontario are assured that we have here the only effective method of dealing with the liquor traffic. They are being told that the public benefits are incalculable. Drunkenness is practically unknown. The police have a holiday. Pure liquors are sold. The freedom of the individual is secured. There is no sale of illicit liquor and no illicit sale of legalized liquor. In fact, according to the advocates of this system, everything is as it should be. Added to these claimed advantages, there is the profit derived from public ownership—a sum running into millions and which lowers our taxation, provides us with excellent roads, etc.

Now there is no question about the profits appearing in the reports of the Provincial Treasurer. There they are, we are assured, in cash which some of us think has a nasty taint about it. It would not however take very much calculation to show that the profits to the people are more apparent than real. The balancing of the department does not take into consideration the cost of the traffic to those who are injured by it.

I hardly need to say that it is very difficult to get at all the facts connected with drunkenness, illicit sale, bootlegging, and the rest of the evils connected with the traffic. The effects of this Government monopoly are so carefully guarded by its creators that even to question the way in which the thing is handled is to lay oneself open to unfair criticism. It is notorious, to all who read the reports of the police curts that the claims made by the champions of Government Control are flatly contradicted every day by facts. Take, for example this extract from a recent number of the "Sherbroose Daily Record":—"Speaking in regard to the unusually large number of cases of persons charged with being intoxicated while driving motor cars that are being continually brought before him in the Magistrate's Court, Judge J. H. Lemay, states that 'it is a real shame to see so many drunkards in possession of cars and with licenses'. Only last week at St. Johns Judge Lemay had no less than seventy- five liquor cases on his list These kinds of cases are continually on the list, and the time has come, the Judge states, to call the attention of the officials issuing licenses to the fact that far to many incompetent drivers are in possession of licenses."

Comment on the above is unnecessary, but it might be added that what takes place at St. Johns, according to this statement, takes place all over the Province, wherever the Quebec Liquor Act is in operation.

Trusting that you may be able to give this letter space, I am,

Yours sincerely,
G. ELLERY READ.

Sir,—The Globe's Calgary (Alberta) correspondent, in a most extensive article in that journal of 10th October, says: "Has the assumption by the Government of Alberta of the sole right of selling spirituous liquors lessened bootlegging? There is a fairly general agreement that it has. Some of the most notorious bootlegging of the Prohibition period have pulled up stakes and transferred operations to British Columbia where the Government has not yet barred private importation. . . ."

This is The Globe's Western correspondent's summing up of the situation in the West. All the allegations about bootlegging, it will be seen, are here admitted. Ontario is to have a much stricter form of control, and the doing away with the bootlegger and doctors' prescriptions will get rid of the most terrible menace of our time. J. H. Burnham.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"CAPTAIN BLOOD" IS AT CAPITOL TODAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

This afternoon saw the opening performance of "Captain Blood" at the Capitol Theatre and a large audience greeted this picture as one of the best shown in Peterborough in many months. "Captain Blood" is a melodrama filled with stirring action, exciting escapes, thrilling sea battles and fast and daring action. Sabatini's great romance of pirate life has been brought to the screen in an immense picture, with all the vivid romance that the celebrated author put into his story. J. Warren Kerrigan, remembered as the hero of "The Covered Wagon," plays the role of the pirate, Captain Blood. From his humble village in England, Blood is dragged a prisoner, charged with treason. Although innocent of any plotting, he is sentenced to ten years as a slave in the Barbadoes plantation. The brutalities of the guards arouses Blood, and with a gang of fellow-convicts he captures a schooner and becomes a roving pirate, preying upon cities and merchant vessels along the Central African coast. Hunted by the French and English fleets, he engages in many daring raids and becomes the dominating member of the hundreds of pirates swarming those seas. How Blood gains his pardon from the King is a remarkable story. A wondrous love-romance is worked throughout the picture. Sea fights, with the massive old-time ships engaging in terrific combats, make remarkable scenes, which are considered among the most wonderful battle scenes ever shown on the screen. A fleet of ships, designed after the old-time war vessels, were built especially for these scenes. Several of these ships are seen blowing-up and on fire. By special arrangement this picture will be shown for three days—today, Tuesday and Wednesday—and at the usual Capitol Theatre admission prices. Loge chair reservations are now being accepted. AT THE ROYAL.

LAURETTE TAYLOR SUPERB IN MANNERS' "HAPPINESS"

Metro Star Surpasses Work in "Peg o' My Heart"—Plays Shop-Girl Who Knows Secret of Joy.

When it comes to really first-class comedy our hats are off to Laurette Taylor and the Metro company for their production of "Happiness," which came to the Royal Theatre to-day. It is an aeon since anything has appeared on the screen so light, deft and amusing as this picturization of J. Hartley Manners' play, which came as a sort of a sequel to his famous "Peg O' My Heart."

On the screen "Happiness" outdoes "Peg." It is much smoother, peppier, if that is possible, and the general effect arrives at a more definite conclusiuon than the earlier picture.

Tonic For the Blues.

In "Peg" you thought Laurette Taylor was the entire centre of everything that stands for joy and good will in the world—in "Happiness" you KNOW she is. Here is a film that acts as a tonic on the nerves of the audience. A screen play like thiis every day will certainly keep the doctor away.

Miss Taylor had established a place entirely her own as the queen of comediennes behind the footlights, now she has won a similar niche in the realm of the cinema. No one we can think of possesses the same amount of personality and fire as this really great actress, and nobody can transfer her art to the screen as well as she. What we are trying to say is that Miss Taylor is superb.

Attains Her Goal.

In this, she has attained the goal she set for herself in "Peg"—the final development on the screen of the same wonderful ease and naturalness which made here one of the best-loved stars of the stage, and made it possible for her to put over the whimsies concerning the lives of little poor girls and the optimism in their hearts.

The story of "Happiness" centres on the adventures of Jenny, a shop girl, when she is invited to the home of a wealthy society matron who has become bored with too much money and a lack of desire to do anything worth while in the world.

An exceptionally fine cast supports Miss Taylor. This is headed by Hedda Hopper and Cyril Chadwick as the two bored persons, whose mental viewpoint is refreshed by the little Irish girl, and Pat O'Mailey, who loves her. Then there are Edith Yorke, Patterson Dial, Laurence Grant, Mario Carillo, Charlotta Minneau and Charles Mailes.

King Vidor, who was so successful in directing "Peg," handled the megaphone again, and even surpassed his former work. J. Hartley Manners wrote the screen adaptation and continuity from his own play.

"LEATHER PUSHERS" AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

Another of the popular "Leather Pushers" series is on to-day's programme at the Royal. These short featurettes are gaining in popularity with each issue.

NEW PHILBIN PLAY RECALLS COLORFUL TIMES ON BOWERY.

Charming "Merry Go Round" Star Heads Strong Cast.

The old Bowery, with its quaint resorts that have gone down into romantic tradition; Chuck Connors, Philadelphia O'Brien and Steve Brodie, the man who took a chance and thundered down the years to fame; these all will live again in a gripping film romance, "Fools Highway," first great Universal starring vehicle for Mary Philban since her astounding success in "Merry-Go-Round." The new picture, a spectacular picturization of Owen Kildare's famous life-story, "My Mamie Rose," comes next Thursday to the Royal Theatre.

The story is a tense heart-interest tale laid about the old New York street and its famous folk. It is known that the tale was the true story of life of the author, who, starting as a gangster and fighter, eventually became one of America's most famous authors.

The principal charm in the story is in its intensely human types: one actually comes to love old Levi, as played by Max Davidson; the kindly old Irishwoman that Kate Price portrays; the irresponsible but lovable Mike Kildare, played by Pat O'Malley, and the rest of the odd characters. These were all based on actualities; and old pictures of Bowery celebrities were used to guide the actors in making up for the roles.

The supporting cast is one of particular note. Pat O'Malley, Kate Price, Charlie Murray, Max Davidson, William Collier, Jr., Edwin J. Brady, Lincoln Plumer, Tansey Sherry and other noted film players are included. Irving Cummings, noted actor, author and director, directed Miss Philbin in the new screen classic.

AT THE REGENT.

"ONE NIGHT IN ROME" PROVES LAURETTE TAYLOR'S BEST FILM.

Metro-Goldwyn Star Delightful in Entirely New Sort of Role.

A Laurette Taylor just as scintillating and charming as the Laurette Taylor of "Peg O' My Heart" and "Happiness," but entirely different, is the star of "One Night in Rome," the Metro-Goldwyn screen version of her stage success will be shown for the rst time in Peterboro at the Regent Theatre to-night. This is a picture for those who want in their screen entertainment romance and excitement, beautiful settings, good photography and vivid acting under expert direction.

Direction Is Good.

Although the major portion of honor goes without question to Miss Taylor, who gives to her portrayal of a young Italian duchess a convincing warmth and sincerity, due credit must be accorded Clarence Badger for his direction. The story of the beautiful noblewoman's banishment from Italy and of her experiences as a fortune teller in London starts with the first scene and carries through with increasing tempo to the climax.

Touches of characterization, not dragged into the picture without rhyme or reason, but adding interest in the unfolding of the story, help make this production different. Miss Taylor proves beyond doubt her ability to portray a dramatic part with all the artistry she gave as "Peg" and as "Jenny Wreay" in her first two screen ventures.

Has Artistic Worth.

The beauty and character of the settings, as well as the photography, have not been surpassed in any picture shown here this season.

The work of Tom Moore as the hero is such as only Mr. Moore can give, while the remainder of the cast assist ably in making the story live on the screen. Particular mention is due Alan Hale, Miss du Pont, Joseph Dowling, Warner Oland, Etta Lee and Brandon Hurst.

Those who want to see the star whom Sarah Bernhardt designated "America's foremost actress" in one of the most worthwhile stories of the year, will not miss seeing "One Night in Rome." The picture was adapted from the play by J. Hartley Manners. It is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.

KILLED IN FIGHT.

BEVERLEY, Mass., Oct. 12. — Fred R. Risteen, a former Nova Scotian, whose body, weighted with cast iron, was found in Norwood Pond, North Beverley, eight days ago, was killed in a midnight fight with George W. Plummer, Jr., in the woods, three miles from his home, Mrs. Marion A. Risteen, widow of the dead man, and Plummer, told the police to-day. Both were arrested last night, charged with murder.

Lakeviews Defeat McCormicks 6-0—Argos Lose to M.A.A.A.—Tigers Win at Ottawa—Varsity 13, McGill 0

WHITEHOUSE BLANKS M'CORMICK JUNIORS, TIEING UP THE SERIES; FOURTH GAME NEXT WEDNESDAY

Lakeviews' Pitcher Held Toronto Team to Two Hits in Third of Playoffs.

RASSON TOUCHED FOR 7 HITS AND SIX RUNS

Game Started Late and Was Called in Sixth—Lakeviews Fielded Well.

FIGHTING SPIRIT

Lew LeBarr's Youngsters Displayed the Determination That Won for the Senators.

(By F. D. C.)

The battling Lakeviews, carrying the Peterboro's last hopes for an Ontario baseball title, showed a fighting spirit equal to that of Bucky Harris and his sensational Senators on Saturday afternoon when they tackled the Toronto McCormicks at Stanley Park, Toronto and beat Glad Calhoun's outfit handsomely by 6 runs to nothing in an abbreviated game, the replay of the seventeen inning tie of two weeks ago.

It was do or die with the Peterboro youngsters for a McCormick win following on their 3-1 victory here would have settled the argument and made the Toronto gang O.B.A.A. junior champions.

Now the series is even-stephen and the title hinges upon the result of a sudden death game to be played at Oshawa on Wednesday afternoon.

Lakeviews one-sided win was admittedly a surprise for although Lew Lebarr's crew went into the game determined to even up the series they did not look for such an easy task.

As it proved, however, there was only one team in the field Saturday and that wasn't the McCormicks.

Whitehouse Starred.

Whitehouse at the top of his form had the Toronto crew stopped completely. They managed to nick him for two singles in the first inning but could not drive home a run and after that went hitless for the rest of the day, in fact got but one man to first after the opening inning. Whitehouse had control and speed and a neat drop and McCormicks could do nothing with his delivery while his teammates fielded almost flawlessly, a fumble by Johnny Marchen that did no harm being the only defensive slip.

Rasson the McCormick southpaw star found Lakeviews a different team Saturday. The Peterboro youngsters stepped into his pet stuff hard and early, crowding six hits into the first three frames and the Toronto portsider lost both his cunning and his temper, the climax coming when he fumbled a bunt, made a wild heave to first, and then kicked himself out of the game by throwing the ball at Umpire 'Shiner' Johnston who ejected him with commendable celerity. It was 3 to 0 against McCormicks when the irate left-hander took his enforced departure and the Lakeviews bumped Brown his right-handed successor for three more counters.

They might have had more had not the strategy of the game made it necessary for them to voluntarily put themselves out in the fourth and fifth innings to make sure that the legal five innings were completed before darkness could put an end to the contest.

Game Started Late.

Owing to the fact that the Brantford-McCormick Juvenile O.B.A.A. game which was the curtain-raiser to the Junior fixture went overtime, the Peterboro-McCormick battle did not get under way until 4.30 o'clock. The result was that McCormicks, finding themselves away in arrears as regards runs, began to stall, "ragging" the game but Lakeviews met them with their own tactics and struck out as speedily as possible in the fifth.

In the long run the teams came very close to getting seven innings in. There were two out in McCormicks' half of the seventh when the game was finally called. The inning might have been completed had not a hot headed McCormick fan thrown a water pail at Catcher Halliday and Umpire Johnston. It had grown quite dark by that time and the officials decided it was a proper stage to call the proceedings off for the day.

Lakeviews were much the better team Saturday. Whitehouse had a wide margin in the box work and all through the Peterboro crew played smarter and better ball than their Toronto rivals who were mystified by Whitehouse and dismayed by the hot reception given Irish Rasson's choicest offerings.

Ash with a double and single and Whitehouse with two singles led the Lakeview hitters while Swing and Eisner were the only Toronto batters to secure a hit off Whitehouse. There were not particularly outstanding fielding features.

How It Was Done.

Lakeviews threatened in the first but lost their chances by carelessness on the bases. Ash opened with a clean single to centre but was caught off first when Marchen missed in an attempt to bunt. Marchen then fanned and Lebarr off Rasson's glove only to be nailed when he started too soon to steal second. No runs, two hits, no errors.

McCormicks got their only two safeties in their half. Swing started with a single past third and Boyd sacrificed neatly. Eisner dropped a Texas League into centre for a hit, Swing holding second. Clark hit to Cameron who tossed Swing out at third and Henry was easy on a pop to the Petes shortstop. No runs, two hits, no errors.

The Peterboro crew came right back to the attack in the second. Whitehouse started the downfall of the McCormick with a sharp single to right and trotted over to second on Whitlow's slow roller to Eisner on which the batter was retired. Halliday punched a single past Eisner sending Whitehouse in and on the toss to the plate the Lakeview catcher moved down to second. Johnston's tap to Henry for an unassisted out at first supplied transportation for Halliday to third and McIntyre lined a single to left to send run over. McIntyre stole second but was left there when Cameron missed three. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

The Toronto crew were easy for Whitehouse in the second half of the frame. Sinclair fanned, Woodrow hit weakly to Whitehouse and Gillespie struck out. No runs, hits or errors.

Ash Held Third.

Ash gave the Petes a great start in the third by crashing a double to left. Marchen walked. Lebarr moved the pair up with a sacrifice. Then the squeeze play went wrong. When Whitehouse bunted Ash made no effort to score and Boyd fielded the bunt and tossed Whitehouse out. Whitlow fanned, retiring the side. No runs, one hit, no errors.

For McCormicks, Rasson rapped to Marchen who made a smart play to nail the McCormick pitcher at first. Then the Petes middle-sacker went back of second to grab Swing's fly to short centre. Boyd's long fly to centre found Whitlow waiting for it. No runs, hits or errors.

Rasson Chased.

Lakeviews put the game on ice in the fourth. Halliday's fly to centre was dropped by Sinclair. Johnston bunted for a sacrifice but Rasson fumbled and then made a wild heave to first, Halliday scoring and Johnston pulling up at second. McCormicks tried to claim the ball hit Johnston and put on a storm scene that terminated with Rasson throwing the ball at Umpire Shiner Johnston who promptly chased the McCormick ace out of the game.

Brown, a right-hander went to the mound and passed McIntyre, Johnston going to third on a passed ball. McIntyre stole second. Cameron bunted down the first base line, Johnston easily scoring on the sacrifice and McIntyre going to third. Ash hit to Eisner who threw to the plate too late to head off McIntyre with run number 3.. Marchen drew a pass. Whitehouse singled over second to send Ash in with the fourth run. Lakeviews then decided they had lead enough and Whitlow purposely struck out to retire the side. Four runs, one hit, two errors.

The Toronto crew were easy. Eisner struck out. Clark hit to Cameron who tossed him out at first. Henry got a hit on Marchen's fumble, the only Lakeview error of the game, but Sinclair was an easy out on a rap to Whitehouse. No runs, or hits, one error.

Halliday, Johnston and McIntyre took three wild swings each in the Lakeviews fifth in order to hurry the game up while McCormicks killed all the time they could. No runs, hits or errors.

When they finally got to bat in their half of the fifth Whitehouse mowed them down in order, striking out Woodrow and Gillespie and throwing Brown out. No runs, hits or erros.

In the sixth Cameron rolled to Brown, Ash lifted a high fly to Clark and Marchen was thrown out by the same player. No runs, hits or errors.

McCormicks did not stir a foot. Swing struck out, Boyd hoisted to Johnston and Eisner missed three. No runs, hits or errors.

Lakeviews finished their seventh and McCormicks had two men out and Henry on first when the water pail episode and the darkness combined to have the game called, so that as McCormicks failed to complete their inning, the game reverted back to the end of the sixth and the seventh inning records do not go on the record. Whitlow lost his first hit of the series accordingly, the Lakeview centre fielder lining a single to centre with two out in the seventh.

Johnson Had His Speed Of 20 Years Ago, Says Landis

WASHINGTON, October 13—Tribute was paid to Walter Johnson by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the czar of organised baseball, during a flying visit to the Supreme Court on Saturday.

"Walter Johnson never had a faster ball twenty years ago," Judge Landis said.

"He had perfect control and could put it over the plate within a fraction of an inch of where he wanted it to go.

"I want to go on record as saying that Friday's struggle was a perfect game, not only from the viewpoint of the spectators on the stands, but also from an artistic point of view. I never had seen anything like it before, and probably never will again. I regard it is the greatest game ever played.

"When I got back to my room in the hotel after the intense excitement of the three hours' play was over I had a gallon and a half of water wrung out of my undershirt."

COLLEGIATE WIN RUGBY PRACTICE

Students Showed Better Condition and Plays Against Excelsiors.

Coach Browne's Collegiate team ran wild with the Excelsior's squad on Saturday afternoon at Exhibition Park when they piled up 33 points to nothing. The Excelsiors held fairly well during the first half but in the second division condition told and the P.C.I. youngsters went down the field gaining yards in single plays. During the last half the Excelsiors had possession of the ball only three times, once during the last period.

The P.C.I. new plays worked splendidly and the interference on the line was the best exhibition ever seen here. The line had a hole for each play and showed the results of good coaching and a great improvement over last year. Bookout tore off long runs and proved hard to stop. Rye was the chief gainer through the line.

During the first half P.C.I. was called back numerous times for men off side, but practice will overcome this. Pogue had a reportory full of plays and called them to advantage.

The tackling and running of Turner and Sloane were bright spots in the Excelsior's game. Some of the Excelsior players lack experience but they have the material and with practice will make real players. This is true of Milloy and Dundes especially. The Excelsiors had no substitutes and were one man short until the second half when "Red" Eastwod went in to snap the ball.

The lineups:

Excelsiors—Snap, Dinsdale; insides, Cowan and Ashmore; middles, Adams and Fleming; outsides, Milloy and Sloane; halves, Ridpath, Mulholland and Dundes; quarterback, Turner.

P.C.M.—Snap, Yellands; insides, Neal and Killally; middles, Ebbs and Rye; outsides, Martin and Henry; flying wings, Fraser and Wood; halves, Bookout and Cole; quarterback, Pogue; subs, Merrell, Goheen, McLeish.

TIGERS LEAD BIG FOUR

Narrow Victory in Ottawa Saturday Was Second Straight.

HAMILTON, Oct. 13. — Tigers had very little edge over Ottawa Saturday when Tigers won 6 to 1. The much vaunted Tiger lined failed to gain appreciably, and the halves scarcely made a good end run all afternoon. Gibb was the only consistent gainer through the line, while Quinn made a few broken field runs in running back kicks. Right near the end Tigers started a march to Ottawa's goal that the whistle halted. The young Ottawa line held well, and made good gains in the first half. They seemed to tire as Tigers gained strength, and could make no progress through the line after half time. Tubman played a scintillating game, and Miller also flashed brilliantly at times. With more experience, Ottawa will make a fine showing. Tigers now lead the Big Four Union, as Argos lost in

CLUBHOUSE QUIET

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.— The world's champions of 1924, as a base ball team, disbanded Saturday, leaving their record engraven in the permanent history of the sport and in the memories of its followers.

Ceremonies marking the disintegration of the fighting aggregation, which brought Washington her first league and series pennant, were informally staged in the local clubhouse. They consisted in the simple handshake, a slap on the shoulder and "see you next Spring," as most members of the team departed by train and automobile for their several homes for the scenes of winter activities.

Prior to leave-takings, Manager Bucky Harris appeared with a fistfull of checks marking the winners' split of the world's series gate. There were twenty-four checks each for $5,959.64, drawn to the twenty-two active members of the Senators with two additional made out to Nick Altrock and Mike Martin, the latter the club trainer.

The players themselves chipped in for Wade Lefler, for Fran Baxter, the lame bat boy, and the groundkeeping squad, and the Washington club wired a bonus of $1,000 to Wid Matthews, who was sent to Sacramento in mid-season as part of the $50,000 deal which brought McNeely here. President Clark Griffith declared, as he signed the check, that the "dividends on that investment were fat enough to justify a generous view of the situation."

Uncle Sam, as a silent partner in the enterprise, will receive $109,310.40 through the Internal Revenue imposts. An official statement from the Treasury to-day placed the total admissions at $1,093,104, upon which a tax of 10 per cent, will be levied.

There was little to suggest the triumphant contestants of a season's battles in the little group at American League Park. Weary to the final degree and sapped by the strain of Friday's twelve-inning thriller, the players barred baseball and any remotely related topic as subjects not to be discussed For the most part they stood silently waiting while attendants cleaned their lockers and packed the uniforms and other personal belongings in waiting trunks. Then a trip to the Treasurer's office for a final "O.K." on the accounts and one by one the group departed.

'Lucky Bounce," Says McNeely.

Reticent as they were to discruss the series, each player denied having any particular part in the victory, ascribing it generally to "the bunch" or Harris's leadership, and in some cases to "the breaks" of the game. McNeely, to whom is attributed the decisive hit of the final game, dismissed queries to— whom is attributed the decisive hit of lucky bounce that did it." The only unanimity was in expressions of satisfaction that Johnson had come through to victory.

Piles of telegrams on the clubhouse desks testified to the intense interest held throughout the country. Scores of messages were addressed to individual players by persons, clubs, chambers of commerce, most of whom were utterly unknown to the recipient But hundreds came to the Washington club attesting the writers' joy over the outcome Similar messages deluged the White House, some suggesting that the team be invited to dinner there.

Although most of the team insisted that they were "fed up" on baseball for months to come, several already have started on exhibition tours of varying length. Manager Harris left for New Haven, where he and Goose Goslin are to participate in a game. Harris will return to Washington for the Winter, while Goslin will proceed to Salem, N.J., his home town.

Walter Johnson, Joe Judge, George Mogridge, Al Schacht and Nick Altrock left Friday night to join a team of professionals for an authorized barn-storming trip, while Sam Rice also hiked off right after the series for Canada, where he will join a European tour with the members of the Giants and White Sox. Muddy Ruel will also take this trip.

Among those who left were Tom Taylor, Fred Marberry, Wade Lefler Bennie Tate, Joe Martina, Mule Shirley and Harry Leibold.

Taylor was headed for Memphis, where he says he will give his injured hand time to heal before looking around for a winter job. Marberry is now on his way to Streetman, Texas, which proudly claims him. He does not expect to overwork himself during the Winter but says he is going to try to improve his curve ball before rejoining the Nats next year.

Lefler, a member of the North Carolina bar, expects to hang out his shingle at Winston- Salem; Martino will again become an oyster merchant at his home in New Orleans; Liebold will again "wrack 'em up" in his billiard parlor in Detroit, while Tate has nothing in mind at present to occupy his spare time at West Frankfort, Ill. Shirley, who deserted the capital Friday, was bound for Snow Hill, N.C., and he expects to kill time, at least until the snow flies watching the college football games in the Sunny South. Mule was a grid star at North Carolina University before taking up the diamond game.

Tom Zachary, Paul Zahniser, Curley Ogden and Earl McNeely will stick around the capital for a few days longer. Johnson, it seems, will only play a few games with the barn stormers, and Zach expects to take his place with the same combination The other three will wait here until Johnson gives the word, then they will join him in a hunting party at his home in Reno, Nev.

Peckinpaugh, the veteran shortstop, whose gameness was one of the features of the series, was in the clubhouse group Saturday. His injured leg was in bandages but the attending physician had found no permanent hurt from the activities of past week and predicted a thorough recovery before spring. Peck announced his intention to return to his real estate business in Cleveland.

Racing at Toronto Saturday, Miss Rosa Grosse broke the world's record for 100 yards when she made the run in 11 1-5 seconds. This is remarkably fast time for a woman runner. Miss Grosse made a great number of admirers in Peterboro when she raced here at the events held at Riverside Park a couple of weeks ago.

PHELAN CHARITY CUP FINAL WON BY THE THISTLES

The Quakers Dominated the Early Stages and Missed Chances Galore.

LAST-MINUTE GOALS

Burgess' Nice Play Let Richmond Tally Twice in Last 12 Minutes.

The meeting of the Quaker Oats and the Thistle on Saturday at the Oval resulted in the latter retaining the Phelan Charity Cup for the 1924 season by the score of 2 to 1.

The attendance of spectators was gratifying, as the collection amounted to a good sum for charity. Both teams showed many changes for the previous game and was not the same cup tie battle.

Game Described.

Captain Jackson won the toss and Gardner set the game agoing and Quakers immediately pressed. From a throw-in Burgess got possession and had a creditable try which just missed. Play was at mid-field for a time, but at last Gardner and McLellan got going into Thistle area, only to see Anderson in a cool manner frustrate the attack that ultimately carried the sphere against Walker, who nipped the Thistle fullback nicely. Green shot across but Rae's head popped up to prevent the waiting Quaker centre have a chance at goal. Fouls were given against Jackson and Honor respectively but in the latter verdict Richmond and Hutton were robbed by Wilshaw in clever fashion. Then Ross retaliated with a long drive that Pellow found peculiar.

Ding-Dong Play.

A grand shot by Richmond found Pellow ready. From the worrying tactics by Richmond, the Thistle forced two unsuccessful corners. A break-away from Scott's clearance gave his left wing men an opportunity to score, but McLelland's shot was handled by Curtis smartly.

Scott Brilliant in Centre-Half.

Very smart, clean tackle and placing by the half-backs of each team was much in evidence, and Scott never wasted any time in parting with the ball, also buzzing around the Thistle centre-forward to prevent him getting a try at goal. While Jackson did likewise with Gardner until he got injured. Gardner came away nicely as he trapped the ball, tricked Jackson, then Rae, but he found Anderson unbeatable, as he punted clear. Walker sent his forwards right back again, Jackson and Gardner tackled.

Jackson Injured But Resumed.

From the play, the Thistle player had to receive attention but resumed at left half, while Carmichael changed to centre-half. The throw up left McLellan in possession and making tracks for Curtis citadel passed accurately to Baker who skied the ball into the heavens, only four yards out and nobody to beat. From the goal kick, the Thistle forwards tried every move to convert, but they could not penetrate the Willshaw-Honor defence who checked quickly in close tackle and punting at first chance. Ultimately Green went down the wing to evade Ross and Anderson and running at a fast pace let drive from twenty yards out. Curtis jumped up into the air to pull down a wicked ball. Scott placed back again to Gardner's foot who quickly turned in swinging fashion with his right foot to put the ball in below the cross-bar with Curtis' outstretched arms saving a positive goal, then Green rattling another effort at the goalie. Carmichael headed outside penalty area, then punted clear to his centre forward who tried to trick Honor, only to gain a free kick for handling just one minute before half-time—no scoring.

Half-Time.

The Quakers pressed on resuming, and the whole forward line missed an open goal as the Thistle defence was out of order and it was interesting to hear the spectators yell "Oh" and "goal" as the ball traversed right along the vacant goal, until Carmichael kicked to the touch in the nick of time, as Mayette was running in to pick up the cross. The Thistle later came into the picture and the forwards gave Pellow a busy time. They all had a try while the defence held them far out until Carmichael robbed Gardner when in the act of breaking away. He carried the ball forward, parted out to Burgess who picked it up on the run, left Metcalfe sliding on the ground as he tapped the ball forward, but the Quaker man stopped his progress outside the dreaded area for a free kick. Jackson tested Pellow wit ha stinging shot.

Opportunities Go A-begging.

Wilshaw sent his forwards down upon the Thistle defence to gain two fruitless corners. On one occasion Green dribbled past three opponents then finished with a low ground shot that rolled slowly past, looking for a waiting foot or a gust of wind that could have blown it through. A few seconds later, Green again had Curtis in difficulty with a left foot drive. At the other end, Burgess had the monopoly of the play as he gained three corner kicks that were void of any count.

Gardner's Clever Tactics.

There was no player who needed watching more than Gardner. He time and again individually would make headway thorugh his opponents but could not get a chance to steady the ball because of the timely shoulder and clever headwork of Carmichael accounting for his non-success also his close tackling gaining precedence.

All the Scoring in Last 10 Minutes.

Up to this stage of the ninety minutes, the game was lackadaisical and spasmodic, also minus of last Saturday's cup tie football, until Burgess tore down the wing, with two Quaker players after him and crossing over to Richmond, the latter put the ball past Pellow. He stopped its transit a little ,but Williams made sure as he ran into goal. From the centre kick, Gardner, McLelland and Green had the Thistle in queer street right close in on the goal. The Quakers' centre met a cross from the left wing by lifting the ball into the net two minutes later. This made the game interesting and each team doing their utmost to gain the coveted goal.

Richmond Carried Ball Through.

With nine minutes to go, Burgess and Williams combination resulted in a perfect cross by the outside left into goal where the Thistle centre-forward carried the ball bodily into the gial, amidst his fellow-players' congratulations. The referee awarded a goal, but to his surprise Scott claimed an infringement of the law, and Dellow making no claim. Referee Clark abided by his decision after consulting a neutral lipesman. The Thistle continued to harass the Quakers and full time found them still at it.

Result—Thistle 2, Quakers 1.

Goal scorers: Williams and Richmond for Thistle, Gardner for the Quakers.

EPINARD LOSES HIS THIRD RACE

French Three-Year-Old Finished Length and Half Behind Sarazen.

TIME WAS FAST

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Small all existing Kentucky track records for a mile and a quarter to pieces, Sarazen, three-year-old chestnut gelding, owned by Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II., Saturday vanquished Epinard, pride of the French turf, in the final race of the international series before a record-breaking crowd of from 50,000 to 60,000 spectators.

Sarazen, ineligible for the previous two international races because he was a gelding, flashed across the wire a length and a half ahead of the gallant French horse in 2.00 4-5. This was within 4-5 of a second of the world's record established by the great Whiskbroom II. ten years ago. Whiskbroom at that time carried 135 pounds, while Sarazen was burdened with 120 on Saturday. Sarazen stepped the fastest mile and a mile and a quarter ever run on the Latonia track. He was clocked at the mile in 1.35 4-5, clipping a fraction of a second off the track record.

Epinard, strangely enough, finished as he did in his two previous American starts when he finished second to Wise Counsellor and later to Ladkin. While Sarazen's victory was convincing, Epinard was just as wonderful in defeat. Working his way through interference, when Altawood and Mad Play bumped in the final sixteenth of the race, Epinard came up from fourth place, shot quickly to the outside, flashing ahead of Mad Play and gaining rapidly on the Vanderbilt gelding in the closing strides.

Mad Play, the entry of Harry F. Sinclair, probably ran the greatest race of his career, finishing on top of Epinard for third place. Altawood, owned by C. Bruce Head of Lexington, made a desperate effort and barely beaten for third place. Altawood finished fourth, six lengths ahead of Princess Doreen, the heavily played filly, which landed fifth place, while Little Chief finished sixth, My Play seventh and Chilhowee last.

The victory was worth $55,000 to Mrs. Vanderbilt, in addition to a $5,000 gold cup. Epinard pulled down $6,000 as second prize, while $3,000 went to Mad Play and $1,000 to Altawood as fourth prize money.

Epinard and Sarazen were heavily played in the pari-mutuel wagering, although the bulk of the western money was placed on the hopes of Princess Doreen. A $2 ticket on Sarazen paid $13.40 to win; $4.20 to place, and $3.90 to show.

U. OF T. DEFEAT M'GILL SQUAD

College Rugby Season Opened at Varsity Stadium—Toronto Inferior.

GAME WAS OPEN

VARSITY STADIUM, October 13. — In a stubbornly contested and hard fought contest, Varsity defeated McGill here on Saturday by 13 to 0 in the opening game of the intercollegiate series. The score by periods was 1-0, 4-0, 7-0, 13-0.

The bulk of Varsity's scores were on single points, the exception being a forced safety touch in the third period and a field goal by Sandy Somerville in the final period. Warren Snyder, the Varsity captain, kicked most of the single points for his team, in futile attempts at field goals, none of which he was able to get.

McGill menaced the Varsity line only on two occasions, due to mistakes by the Varsity team, on penalties against the locals. Varsity lost 80 yards by penalty and many downs while McGill was penalised for 30 yards altogether.

Varsity forced a kicking game right from the start, booting the ball on the first down without exhausting the players in midfield line plays, such as McGill attempted. Later on Varsity changed their tactics and mixed their plays so that McGill did not know what to expect.

Ripped McGill's Line.

Neither team made many gains in line plunging until the third period, when Varsity ripped the McGill line up only to lose the ball on a penalty when within scoring distance.

The sensational feature was supplied by Varsity in the second period when Snyder started a 65-yard run for what was thought to be a touchdown. He smashed through the McGill line, knocking McGill tacklers right and left and then passed to Soanes. Soanes raced to the McGill goal line and might have gone over himself or score, but to make it sure he passed to Somerville. The officials ruled it was a forward pass and instead of a touchdown for Varsity the ball went to McGill on their own 15-yard line. That was the closest play to a major score during the afternoon.

The game was very open, and Pequegnat distinguished himself by his broken field running in taking back punts. He made a number of brilliant plays. Mills and McGibbon did smart work at quarter. The wing line held well and gave the backs good protection. The tackling of the ends was very good and they showed speed and judgment in following down under punts.

McGill did not seem to be in as good condition as Varsity and made frequent changes. Number of McGill players were knocked out trying to stop Snyder's "bull-like" rushes with the ball.

Hanna and Joe Cameron did the best work back of the line for McGill. Hughes the left foot kick, booted well but was not sure in his catching. Little also did good work on the secondary defence with quarterback Mickles.

McGill had not much punch to their attack and failed twice when a sure score was handed to them on a silver platter.

OSLERS WIN TITLE

Defeat Galt Two Straight in Senior O.B.A.A. Finals.

HAMPDEN PARK, Oct. 13. — Oslers of Toronto are the new Ontario baseball champions. They replaced the Galt Terriers, who have held the title for the past two years in a snappy ball treat Saturday by 4 to 2. Oslers won the first game in Galt on Wednesday by the same score.

Seven thousand people watched the game. Both teams played in true championship calibre. Joe Spring was the hero again, holding the Black "Lined" champions to three hits. The Terriers made several bids to catch Oslers and finished strong. Spring's fielding was also auspicious. He nipped Watts off second base for the fine put-out in the ninth that brought the championship to Toronto. Eleven Galt batters fanned at his famous drop curve.

Oslers crashed three runs off "Lefty" Dougherty in the first two innings before "Friendly" Graham was rushed to the rescue. Fleming had three hits, Spring two and Hughes and Breen delivered the other wallops that counted runs.

A double by Himes in the fourth and a triple by Lynch paved the way for Galt's two runs.

Watts in left and Grove in centre field made grandstand catches. Burt and Fleming both stopped rallies by the Terriers with their fielding. Galt is lodging a protest, claiming inadequate ground rules for Saturday's game.

SENIOR O.A.L.A. WINNERS.

WESTON, Oct. 13.—Weston retained its senior O. A. L. A. championship here Saturday by defeating Toronto Maitlands 8 to 1 in the final for the Provincial laurels. Weston won the first game in Toronto and by their victory on Saturday swept the series by a total of 19 to 6. The champions were always the better and never for a minute from the opening period of the first game was in doubted that they would keep their title.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

GIANTS OFF TO PLAY IN EUROPE

McGraw Worn Out by Series —Wasn't in the Books to Win, He Said

SIX WEEKS ABROAD

NEW YORK, October 13. — "It wasn't in the books for the Giants to win."

With this terse summing up of the late lamented world's series John J. McGraw on Saturday night led his New York Giants on the first lap of the European trip with the Chicago White Sox. Fourteen players, the wives of eight of the athletes, officials of the club and two newspaper men, were in the party which left for Montreal from the Grand Central station at 9.30 o'clock.

Next Wednesday evening they will sail from Quebec for Liverpool and in another week from that McGraw's second tour of foreign countries with a baseball team will begin with a game in Liverpool. From there the teams will go to London, Paris, cities in Ireland and Scotland, Brussels, Nice, Rome and Berlin.

From a world's series to a world's tour was no easy transition for the Giants. As soon as they arrived here from Washington the players who will make the trip began packing for the great adventure. All day on Saturday there were busy scenes in the Giant offices on Forty-third street, and McGraw was so taken up with the tickets, pass-ports and other last minute preparations that he hardly had time to think about the bitter defeat of Friday.

"I'm going abroad to forget baseball," said McGraw. "Of course this is a baseball tour but it will be a vacation for me. Anything would be a vacation after the hard season and the terrific season we have passed through. I think it was one of the hardest campaigns I have ever experienced. I know that I am tired and worn out. The world's series took a great deal out of me."

However, close friends of the little Napoleon said that he did not feel this year's defeat as keenly as that last October at the hands of the Yankees. For one thing he wanted to make it three straight championships last fall. For another thing he does not mind the Senators winning as much as he did the Americans League team of New York. As he said yesterday: "The Senators' victory seems to have pleased the big majority of persons, and that is some thing after all."

In comparative quietness, the mixed team of Giants and players from other clubs departed. Many friends of McGraw and the Giants were there to say good bye, but only a few of the general public crowded around the gate as the members of the party passed through. There was little demonstration.

The schedule of games in Europe has not yet been compiled but it is known that three Saturday games will be played in London, and three Sunday games in Paris. Following each contest in London the clubs will cross the channel to Paris. After that the itinerary will include Dublin, Belfast, Birmingham, Manchester, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Brussels, Nice, Rome and Berlin. The tour, including the time spent on the ship will last about six weeks, which will bring the tourists back about Dec. 1st.

The line-up of the Giants will be: Gowdy and Henline, Philadelphia, catchers; McInnis, Boston, first base, Frisch, second base; Groh, third base Jackson, shortstop; Meusel Young and Stengel, Boston, outfield; Nehf, Jonnard and Bentley, pitchers.

The White Sox will have the following: Ruel, Washington and Picinich, Boston, catchers; Clancy, Chicago, first base; Wojack, Chicago, second base; Morehart, Chicago, ss; Kamm, Chicago, third base; Rice, Washington, Falk and Mostil, Chicago, outfield; Faber, Robertson, Lyons and Foreman, Chicago, pitchers.

Johnny Evers, manager of the White Sox, will be in charge of that aggregation, and McGraw and Hughey Jennings will direct the Giants. Charles A. Comiskey, President of the White Sox, and his son, Louis, will make the tour.

CHARITY CUP GAME PLAYED NORWOOD

C. P. C. Juniors Defeat North Dummer by 4-1 on Neutral Ground.

The replayed game in the competition between the C.P.C. juniors and North Dummer was played on neutral ground at Norwood on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Hector Munro made excellent arrangements for the game on the Exhibition grounds. There was a splendid crowd and a very good game was witnessed, in which the Packers showed the best form of the season and ran out winners by 4 goals to 1.

The Game.

The township men won the toss and played with the sun behind them. Munro was at once prominent with a splendid drive, which Bradley threw out. T. Montgomery sent to Mitchell, who raced away at full speed and sent to James, who was well placed and like a flash the ball was placed out of the reach of Hawthorne. From the centre kick F. Bell made a great effort to score, Bradley saving at the expense of a corner. Darling took the kick and sent well in the crowd, Munro heading over the bar. Oxley sent well up the field and Strudley sent to Foster, whose centre was met by James, who again beat Hawthorne. This put the township men on their mettle and they brought great pressure to bear upon the Packers' goal. W. Bell was very unfortunate, just lifting the ball over the bar. With an open goal, Halliday relieved the pressure and sent to Downer, and some nice combination was seen by the Packers' forwards. Carveth came to the rescue and robbed Strudley just in the nick of time. H. Jory, who played a great game, sent to Darling, who in turn gave to Munro. Bradley saved his shot. One of the Packers handled the ball in the forbidden area and a penalty was awarded the township men. H. Munro took the kick and beat Bradley all the way. This put new life in the township men, and the Jory brothers kept sending their forwards along with some nice ground passes. Half time arrived, with the ball in the centre of the field and the Packers leading by 2 to 1.

Second Half.

Upon resuming the Packers made a dash for the township goal, Strudley sending in a beauty which Hawthorne tipped over the bar. Foster took the corner kick and placed nicely, Garveth heading out of danger. The game was now both even and exciting, each goal having some narrow escapes. Strudley was again very prominent, receiving a nice pass from Chambers. He went away at full speed and sent in a terrific drive which hit the upright. J. Downer met the rebound and scored the third goal for the Packers. From the centre kick the Township men urged by their supporters to play up, responded in great style. Munro and H. Darling, by nice play, worked the ball up the field and W. Bell experienced hard luck in not scoring. The Township defence was in great form and kept them from scoring. The play continued fast and exciting and it looked as if there would be no further scoring. H. Strudley got possession and beating all opposition scored the best goal of the game. Time was soon afterwards called and the Packers left the field, winners of a splendid game by 4 goals to 1.

The Teams.

North Dummer— Hawthorne, A. Payne, W. Garveth, A. Jory, H. Jory, G. Little, F. Bell, W. Bell, H. Munro, H. Darling, Harold Darling.

The C.P.C.—Bruce Bradley, Oxley, T. Montgomery, J. Buchan, Halliday, Chamber, Mitchell, W. James, M. Strudley, J. Downes, T. Foster.

BIG SCORES IN SOCCER GAMES

Wet Grounds Made Ball Hard to Handle by Goalkeepers.

REVIEW OF FEATURES

LONDON, October 13. — The extraordinary goal scoring in the principal leagues in Saturday's football association games was largely due to the wetness of the ground, which made the ball slippery in the goalkeepers' hands.

Thirty-three tallies were registered in the first division, of which the Bolton Wanderers-Preston game accounted for seven; four were netted at Blackburn; four at Huddersfield, and the same number at West Bromwich. In the second division 36 shots found the nets of which the Hull City game accounted for seven; six were made at Leicester, six at Coventry, and five at Derby. In the Scottish league, the Edinburgh Hibernians bagged seven goals while the Cowdenbeath-Rangers game saw four counters recorded—two each.

In the tilt between the local rivals, Birmingham and Aston Villa, the the largest crowd of the day was present, forty five thousand people seeing the home team take Villa into camp by a solitary counter. Villa missed several opportunities in the first half and were continually on the aggressive.

Roberts' Great Play.

In the 'Spurs-Burnley contest the Tottenham club were unfortunate in being deprived of the services of Clay for over an hour. The most spectacular feature of the game was the great goal scored by Burnley when Tom Roberts running forty yards by himself, beat a couple of opponents and finished with a great shot. The effort was enough to make the club directors feel that the 4000 pounds they had paid for him was worth it.

Arsenal finished their game at Huddersfield thoroughly demoralized and their four to nothing defeat would have been greater but for the brilliant and plucky play of Robson.

At no time in the game did the Yorkshiremen look like losing their unbeaten record. Smith scored a wonderful goal for the leaders; from a corner he swerved the ball right into the Arsenal net.

Bolton Wanderers scored four times in the first fifteen minutes of the game with Preston North End. The latter club went to pieces and it would seem that nothing but a miracle can save them from relegation this season. The game incidentally brought the Wanderers frof the 17th place in the standings up to the 13th.

Manchester City's defeat at the hands of Blackburn Rovers caused them to relapse from second position to the 6th while it promoted the Rovers three rungs up.

Sunderland were one of the two clubs to emerge with full points on their opponents' ground. Curiously enough the other team was Notts Forest who have not inspired much confidence in their supporters this season. The Foresters defeated Shef field United by the closest margin and sent United down the ladder to keep company with Preston North End at the bottom.

Scottish League.

In the Scottish League, the Rangers' draw with Cowdenbeath cost them considerable since their next three pursuers scramble, all acquired full points. Celtic's narrow win over the Heart of Midlothian, gives them temporary possession of the table on goal averages, above Airdrionians and Hibernians in the order named. Rangers are fourth.

Kilmarnock improved their position remarkably by their three to one victory over Queen's Park and jumped from 17th place to 12th.

Third Lanark entered the cellar when St. Mirren defeated them on Saturday and Ayr United's crushing defeat by the Hibernians is responsible for bringing the former down in the Association with Third Lanark.

Three visiting teams won in Scottish League (first division) football yesterday. Aberdeen, St. Johnstone and St. Mirren.

In the Junior sections of the English league about 45,000 saw Fulham play Chelsea to a draw. Portsmouth retained its undefeated record while Derby County retained possession of the league standings.

TWO FIELD GOALS DEFEATED ARGOS.

M.A.A.A. Scored First Victory Over Toronto Since 1919.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—(Canadian Press).—After several seasons of consistent defeats at the hands of the Toronto Argonauts, the Montreal Interprovincial Rugby Union squad broke the losing succession which has existed since 1919 when they downed the double blue in a scheduled league fixture here Saturday afternoon 8 to 2.

While a capacity crowd of close to 6,000 looked on, Art Evans, the local half-back, dropped two splendid field goals in the second quarter of the game, which proved the deciding factor in the victory. One was a magnificent effort from the forty yards out and capped an afternoon of splendid playing by the doughty little half, who, incidentally, tallied all the points for the victors.

It was not a brilliant game, being dotted with fumbles, misplays, and at times forgetfulness of signals, the Argos being the guilty squad in the latter connection. Montreal dominated the play enough to eliminate the excitement that would have been created through a closer battle. As a result, the crowd found what thrills there were in the individual play of members of the two teams. The sterling work of Jeff Russell, local flying wing; the tricky play of Art Evans; the sturdy pounding of Clary Booth, and the flashing of the youthful Argonaut backs, Reeves, Hambly and Dinsmore.

Saturday's struggle witnessed a melee among the players and a few spectators one minute before the final whistle. Dinsmore, who had played stellar Rugby throughout the afternoon, somewhat marred his performance by illegal interference in attempting onside kicks in an effort to even the score. Apparently exasperated when the first attempt in the final quarter had resulted in Argos regaining the ball for a gain, only to be called back by Referee Simpson, Dinsmore charged Eddie Crain, local quarter, out of the play on the next attempt, while the ball was still in the air. His charge escaped the notice of the officials. A moment later he charged Bert Ryan, but Ryan was set and handed Dinsmore to one side. The latter regained his feet and rushed at the local middle wing, and the pair squared off. Others joined in and then a section of the crowd started for the field. There was a mild melee but it was soon quelled.

STEAMER BURNED OFF POINT PETRE

Crew of Steamer Derbyshire Saved By Unknown Boat.

KINGSTON, October 13. — (Special.) — The Steamer Kendall of the George Hall Coal and Shipping Co., arriving in port this morning, reported the Steamer Derbyshire of the same line was destroyed by fire on Saturday at Point Petre, about 48 miles west of Kingston, near the Main Ducks. The fire started on the vessel during Friday night. The members of the crew were taken off by another steamer, but the name of this steamer is not known. Capt. J. W. Scarrow was in command of the vessel The Derbyshire was on her way west light. She was a wooden vessel valued at $25,000, and the loss will be covered by insurance, so it was stated. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The fire burned all Friday night and Saturday morning and sank during Saturday afternoon. The vessel was of Canadian Register.

GERMAN TEAM WON.

PARIS, October 13 (Canadian Press). — The German champion workmen's football team yesterday defeated the French champion workmen's team, 3 to 0, in the first soccer match the former enemies have played in France since the war.

Previous games had been played between French and German teams only in the Rhineland.

CUSTOMS OFFICERS MAKE A BIG HAUL

Capture Ship Loaded With 34,000 Cases of Assorted Liquors.

NEW YORK, October 13. — An oil burning vessel, with its crew of 32 men, and a cargo of 43,000 cases of liquor, was seized yesterday by the coast guards cutter "Seneca," revealing a yarn of the liquor traffic more lurid than any stories of the buccaneers.

After firing three shots across the vessel's bow, the customs agents boarded a seemingly abandoned ship.

In the wheelhouse, two sailors lay stretched on deck snoring. Below the deck the rest of the crew were found sleeping off the effects of too much drink or nursing the injuries they had received in fighting.

Three of the crew had broken jaws. Another man, who was flushed with fever, called for water. His leg had been broken three days ago and nothing had been done for it.

The captain was found in the cabin where he had locked himself in with a store of arms and ammunition.

He declared that the crew had drunk and fought every day since the ship "Sagatind" cleared from Antwerp, a month ago, for St. Pierre.

The vessel left with a cargo of 100,000 cases of assorted liquor. Only 43,000 cases remained, he said. In his safe the officers found $26,000, in American money.

'BALISAND' HERO IS TOO FORMAL

But Hergesheimer's New Book Is Interesting—Deals With Period Following American Revolt.

The veteran of seven years campaigning with Washington comes back to his home state to find that he doesn't belong. People forgot the war then as easily as they do now. National ideals were ignored in local squabbles. The analogy to present times is obvious.

People who didn't amount to much in pre-war times rose to unwarranted prominence. The proletariat began to assert itself.

Richard Bale, of Balisand, couldn't make the grade. He wouldn't change with his surroundings. From the opening chapters, when he is full of enthusiasm for Washington's principles, to the closing, where he feels the country has gone to the dogs with Jefferson's, he is the aristocrat who can't change.

The story lags at times and has a certain dullness, because Hergesheimer treats his hero like the gentleman he believes him to be. We never catch a glimpse of the proud Bale in his shirt sleeves. He won't get confidential or clubby over his cups.

But in spite of the formality of the hero, Hergesheimer is generous with his own geniality. He piles on color, injects warmth and glow and weaves the spell with words of which he alone is capable. There is a love story of wistful delicacy and shadowiness. No one has ever made the April mean, the elusive romance and tragedy of accumulated experience more poignant than he.

Selma Lagerlof has told her own story, and with that sensitiveness to beauty and a simplicity and charm of style that make it one of the most delightful of autobiographies.

It is called "Marbacka," after the Lagerlof homestead at Farmland, Sweden, and is published by Doubleday, Page Co. No more wistful picture exists in modern day literature than is painted in the early portion of the book with the crippled child in pathetic relief. There are a half dozen amazingly real people running through the idyllic story, particularly the kindly, swaggering Lieut. Lagerlof and his inevitable schemes. This is truly the autobiography of the soul of Selma Lagerlof, who already holds a Nobel prize for literature, and who sits back now in her 65th year to tell of her childhood.

Just south of Yellowstone Park, in the shadow of the Teton mountains, Struthers Burt lives a considerable portion of the year in his cabin.

When the tourist season is on he converts it into a "dude ranch," as such resorts are called in Wyoming, Montana, and the environs. Burt has chosen this as a meal ticket that he may not be dependent upon writing. In this place foregather of summer days such notorious trout pursuers as Henry Van Dyke.

Anyway, Burt has done a very amusing and well written book about it: "The Diary of a Dude Wrangler," (Chas. Scribner Sons), in which are combined such philosophy, anecdot and incident as furnish interesting commentaries on our civilization.

FELLOWSHIP IS TOPIC BEFORE ROTARY TO-DAY

Educational Committee Has Charge of Club's Regular Weekly Luncheon.

A COMMON TASK.

Rotarian Rev. Harold Young Emphasizes the Necessity Of Such a Foundation.

To-day's luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club was in charge of the Rotary Educational Committee, and was featured by two most eloquent addresses on Rotary fellowship by Rotarians Rev. Harold Young and Alex. Mowat. The result was an inspiration to every member present and the effect upon Rotary activities should be marked.

Rotarian W. R. Morris, chairman of the Educational Committee, presided, and in his introductory address, emphasized the necessity of educating Rotarians as to the aims and work of the organization and of educating outsiders as to what was being done by Rotary.

Rotarian Young urged his hearers to develop in Rotary a genuine fellowship, something that got down deep in each man's heart as distinguished from the ordinary social fellowship that was to be met everywhere where people gathered together. Most eloquently he contended that this fundamental fellowship must be founded on four things: a common friend, a common danger, a common hope and a common task, and as the first three of these things touched Rotarians but lightly, it was clear that if the fellowship most desired were to be developed it must be based on the fourth—a common task. Rev. Mr. Young therefore held up before his fellow Rotarians this necessity of dedicating themselves to the accomplishment of some worth-while task, some mission big enough to arrest the imagination and challenge the interest of the members. Lacking some such task the speaker had doubts as to the future of the movement.

Rotarian Alex. Mowat briefly but eloquently emphasized the value of genuine fellowship in Rotary, pointing his remarks by a practical illustration that brought the point squarely before his hearers. Rotarian Mowat is a member of the Rotarian Educational Committee, and to-day, as on other occasions, his address was inspirational and helpful.

It was announced by Rotarian Fred. Hungerford that the Famous London Concert 8 would appear in Peterboro on October 27 and 28 at the Grand Opera House, under Rotary auspices, and it is hoped to make this event not only an artistic but a financial success.

The sum of $1,224.70 was the total thankoffering received, the meeting realizing over $1,100, and from several later contributions. An excellent address on "The True Spirit of Thanksgiving," was given by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, and Mr. M. Cuthbertson, returned missionary from Japan, also spoke, relating some of the good work done in Japan as a result of thankoffering donations. An enjoyable vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Chambers.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 13—(Canadian Press). — Police authorities made public last night the confession by George Plummer, to the killing of Fred. R. Risteen, and by Mrs. Marion Risteen, widow of the victim, that she had helped Plummer dispose of the body in a pond.

Their story is that the men while drunk on the night of September 21, quarrelled in the woods at North Beverly, fought over Plummer's attentions to Risteen's wife, and that when Plummer knocked Risteen down the latter's head struck a stone and he died.

Clarence Settell, former secretary to Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, was committed for trial on a charge of stealing $29,925 from the Hydro Electric Commission, by Magistrate Jelfs to-day. Charges of forgery and defrauding the Hydro Electric Commission by causing W. H. Childs, of Hamilton, to endorse a cheque for $29,925 have been formulated against Settell, but he was not arraigned on these to-day.

Evidence was given to the effect that he cashed the cheque at the Canadian Bank of Commerce here, after having represented that the money was for the purchase of a right of way. Edward A. Hugill, who has charge of the land buying for the Commission, swore that Settell had no authority to purchase land for the commission. Geo. W. Ballard, Crown Attorney, presented the case against Settell and C. W. Bell, K.C., defended the prisoner.

101 UNEMPLOYED IN PETERBOROUGH

Conditions In This Line Are Not as Bright as They Were a Few Weeks Ago.

During the past week things have changed considerably in the employment situation in this city, and at present conditions are not as bright as they were a few weeks ago.

Last week things were reported to be fair. In the Canadian General Electric Company some men are working two weeks out of every three, while others are only getting one or two days of work every two weeks.

The Westclox is about the only large factory in the city that is finding enough work to keep their men busy, while things in the textile line are very good.

The De Laval Company is not getting the work that they expected, and a number of men have been laid off in this plant.

With practically nothing at all doing in the iron business and the C. G. E. and the De Laval slack, there is not a very bright outlook for the present unemployed.

During the past month a number of men have left the city in search of work elsewhere, while there are still 101 on the unemployed list.

A number of men have been shipped to the bush, six going this morning, while there is still orders in for a few more men.

During last week there were 43 new applicants and 34 replacements, which shows that there are more men applying for work each week than there is work for.

There are a number of short jobs about the city, but they are mostly one and two day jobs.

The building of a new school in Port Hope has supplied work for a number of bricklayers from this city, while there will likely be some more men from this city go to Bowmanville when the new Government Building is started there.

Conditions throughout Ontario are generally slack, while in most places there is a demand for bushmen and farm hands.

HAMILTON SCANDAL.

Shortages Mount Up To Sixty Thousand Dollars.

HAMILTON, October 13 (Canadian Press). — Just when it was thought that the bottom of the Hamilton civic scandal had been probed, and that there would be no further disclosures to shock the public, the announcement was made this morning that the conditions in the city treasurer's office were far worse than was thought at first.

Instead of the $32,000 shortage which was discovered at first in the books of Harold S. Forbes, the missing cashier, it is now announced that he was approximately $60,000 short, practically double the original amount.

In this connection it was also learned that the defalcations did not commence a couple of months before Forbes' departure, but that the manipulation of the figures in the books, covering up large cash shortages, occurred much further back than that, and that there may even be irregularities as far back as last year.

AUTOMOBILES COLLIDED

At five minutes past three to-day while two cars were proceeding south on George St., at Murray one cut the corner eastward and on being struck by the second car was carried into a hydro pole Ferguson Bros.' car, which was in the wrong, was badly smashed, the radiator, mud guards, lamp and tire being damaged. Constable John Naples was in attendance.

All is in readiness for the hunt, and mounts have been reserved for the Prince and his staff.

Smith. He is being held for questioning.

K.K.K. IN HAMILTON.

Fiery Cross Is Believed To Be The Work Of Persons Interesetd In The Formation of Klan.

HAMILTON, Oct. 13. — (Canadian Press).—There was a disposition last night to regard the fiery cross, which was erected on Mountain Brow, as a hoax, but to-day the belief is that it was the work of persons interested in the formation of the Ku Klux Klan here. Small cards have been surreptitously circulated, hinting at the formation of such an organization, but it is not thought the plan would be approved here by more than a very limited number.

POLICEMAN BOUND.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — (Canadian Press Cable).—In connection with the disturbance at a Communist meeting in Trafalgar Square yesterday, a policeman who had arrested four men, was himself bound over to keep the peace at Bow Street today. The policeman told the Magistrate he had heard one of the accused, who wore a Fascisti badge, call the crowd dirty dogs, and refused to go away, so was arrested. The crowd threatened the policeman who sang the National Anthem to which the Communists replied with the "Red flag."

The Magistrate held that the policeman had provoked the crowd.

WILL STUDY DRAMA.

In accordance with a suggestion made at a recent meeting of the Women's Art Association, that a club be formed for a study of the drama during the coming winter, the Little Theatre Club held a meeting last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, when plans were made for the formation of such a society. The programme of study and production will be chosen by a committee and announced later. Mrs. Bingham was elected director of the club, Miss Edna Borbridge treasurer and Miss G. Glover secretary.

CASES OF YOUTHS AGAIN ADJOURNED

Plea Will Be Made For Boys Who Pleaded Guilty In House-breaking Charges.

When the boys who were last week charged with breaking into and entering several houses in the city, appeared at the police court this morning for sentence, a further remand was granted on request of the Crown and by consent of the several counsel for the prisoners.

Unrepresented at last week's hearing the boys to-day had the most brilliant legal talent in Peterboro lined up in their behalf, including J. F. Strickland, G. N. Gordon, K. C., and V. J. McElderry. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., appeared for the prosecution.

A fourth boy of 16 was arraigned this morning on charges of breaking and entering the Canadian Woollens Office on December 9th, 1923, during the night, and taking $100; and a second charge of breaking and entering the residence of Mr. Edwards, 506 McDonnel street, on September 16, 1923, by night, and taking $42.

Mr. Gordon, acting for the prisoner, preferred not to elect or plead.

Messrs. McElderry and Strickland preferred to reserve their ammunition until Friday, when a strong appeal for the boys will be made backed by a bulky exhibit of petitions.

A city resident pleaded guilty of being intoxicated on Chambers St., yesterday and was fined $10 and costs.

Youth Considered.

On account of the youthfulness of the boys charged with housebreaking, The Examiner is withholding their names. Three of the boys are sixteen years of age, and the fourth is 17. Efforts are being made by city organizations to guide the lads into honest lines, and the Examiner believes that this will be easier accomplished if the names are not broadcast.

SOFTBALL GAMES AT RINK TO-NIGHT

Three Exhibition Games Will Be Played From 7 To 10 O'clock—No Admission.

This evening in the Brock Street Rink, starting at 7 o'clock sharp, there will be played three exhibition softball games.

The first game will be played between the Lock Works and the De Laval, while at eight o'clock the Belmonts and the Kiwanis will play, and at nine the Brass will meet the C.N.R.

All teams have been strengthened considerably, and three fast games are assured the fans.

To-morrow night for the benefit of the teams that will not have a chance to play to-night, the Rink will be open for practices.

The following is the schedule drawn up by the committee for practising to-morrow night:

6.30 to 7, L.O.L. 50; 7 to 7.30, Bowlers; 7.30 to 8, Quaker Oats; 8 to 8.30, Teachers; 8.30 to 9, Engineers; 9 to 9.30, Rotary; 9.30 to 10, K. of C.; 10 to 10.30, Triple Link.

No admission will be charged to-night or to-morrow night.

The official opening of the softball season in this city will take place on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, when Mayor Turner, G. N. Gordon, M.P., and other officials of the city will be on hand.

Commencing on Wednesday evening there will be a small admission charged to help defray the expenses. Better lighting fixtures are being installed, and the seats have all been screened off to afford protection to the fans. The Rink will undoubtedly be much more comfortable than the Armouries, which was used for this purpose other years, as the Rink affords the fans a place to sit and watch the game in ease.

The schedule will be published in Tuesday evening's paper, so the fans will be able to see what is on the card for Wednesday night.

DIRIGIBLE ZR-3 IS SCHEDULED TO REACH MOORINGS ON WEDNESDAY

Passage of the Atlantic Proceeding Smoothly and Hopes of Record Flight Are Rising—Will Likely Circle Over Big Eastern Cities.

CREW ACCUSTOMED TO AIRSHIP LIFE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Driving westward at an average speed of from 50 to 55 miles an hour, the German-built air cruise ZR-3 last night was approaching a point where the Navy Department momentarily was expecting to establish direct wireless communication with her.

Unofficial despatches during the day brought word of the air cruiser's passage to the Azores sector, reviving hopes that a new record for trans-Atlantic flight might be set when she stoops to her moorings mast at Lakehurst, N.J. The arrival is predicted for Wednesday morning by naval officers detailed to keep in touch with the flight.

Reports of a moderate atmospheric disturbance in her path were declared to increase rather than diminish her chances for a speedy passage. Westerly winds of more than average force are prevailing north of Bermuda, according to the observation ships, stationed by the navy near the northern steamship lines.

From Bermuda the course probably will be influenced by later meteorological observations but officials here are confident it will be a straigt-away path for her destination, with a possibility that the ship may be taken on a short swing over New York City before landing.

Life on Zeppelin.

The ZR-3 was talking with Hamburg Germany last night. The message indicated that the giant air cruiser had encountered some slight engine trouble but that she was proceeding satisfactorily with three engines running.

In conversation with Hamburg it was reported that the crew had become habituated to life on board the big Zeppelin. At the time the message was being sent some of the officers and men were snatching naps in their bunks, others, more energetic, were playing a phonograph and singing while several were engaged in detailing their experiences in letters home.

A varied fare at the principal meal was reported. The menu comprised soup, boiled ham, string beans, potatoes and pudding. It was heartily enjoyed by all despite the novel conditions under which it was eaten, the radio operator reported.

OVER COASTAL CITIES.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Now that the ZR-3 has passed the "top of the hill," as old mariners call the halfway point in trans-oceanic voyages, it is believed probable here that if all continues well the big dirigible will reach the region of the Virginia capes late Tuesday.

In view of the splendid progress of the airship so far, and the fact that reports indicate fairly good flying weather, Zeppelin officials are of the opinion that Dr. Hugo Eckener, in command, will slow down the motors and arrange his schedule so as to pass Norfolk and Richmond and skirt the coast, giving Washington a view of the big ship Wednesday morning. It is then likely, officials believe that the ZR-3 will proceed to Baltimore, Wilmington, Philadelphia, New York City and Newark, prior to mooring at Lakehurst in the afternoon.

Morning Report

CHATHAM, Mass., Oct. 14.—At 7 am., Boston time to-day the ZR-3 in a radio message W.C.C. the radio corporation, of America, station here reported her position at latitude 40.25 north, longitude 44 west.

"All is well', the message said. Fine weather was being encountered it was said and the Giant Dirigible rearing toward America reported the Steamer Collingsworth directly beneath her.

W.C.C. reported being in direct communication with the ZR-3 practically throughout the night from 1 a.m. on. It was expected to maintain contact throughout the day.

Half an hour after sending her position to W.C.C. the ZR-3 began receiving the government wind and barometer reports from the U.S.S. Milwaukee. Working intermittently all through the night on wave lengths of 2,200 and 2,300 meters stations W.C.C. maintained practically ideal communication with the ZR-3 officers said. The Dirigible used a wave length of 1,510 meters.

EUROPEAN NATIONS TO APPLY FOR BIG LOANS

France and Belgium Likely To Follow Germany To Money Mart.

NEW YORK, October 14. — Completion of the $200,000,000 loan to Germany, will pave the way for other international loans aggregating several hundred million dollars within the near future, in the opinion of United States bankers.

While a great part of this business would be for account of German industries, it was said on Monday that that France already was negotiating for $150,000,000, and that Belgium was insistent that her demands be given immediate attention.

Financial district information accepted as true though lacking confirmation of the Morgan house, that the banking commission for handling the German business will be in the neighborhood of five points, a usual margin in transactions of this kind.

VESSEL SEIZED AS RUM RUNNER

Taken To San Francisco On Charge Of Illegally Selling Liquor.

FIRST VOYAGE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., October 14.—On her first voyage under new officers, the steamer Quadra, formerly a Dominion government light house tender, has been seized off San Francisco, by the United States coast patrol forces, and taken to San Francisco to face a charge of illegal selling of liquor. The ship as seized near the Farralones, at 11 p.m., on Sunday, and towed to port by the cutter Shawnee.

The United States revenue officers claim that they are acting within their rights under the British-American liquor seizure treaty recently signed.

Immediately upon being taken to port, Captain Ford, master of the Quadra, placed his case in the hands of the British Consul.

The capture of a small fishing vessel loaded with $20,000 worth of liquor on Saturday night, believed at San Francisco to have led to the capture of the Quadra. Upon the small boat being taken a search was immediately made for a "mother ship" and the prohibition authorities say that they found her about six miles off the coast, well within the limits of the British-American treaty.

On September 9th the Quadra was loaded with 15,000 cases of liquor and cleared for San Salvador. The value of the cargo and ship is estimated at $400,000.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS' OUTPUT AMAZED PRINCE

Rode Pony Through Miles of Pens and Barns—Was Cordially Greeted.

IN DETROIT TODAY

Luncheon Guest at University and Visited Field Museum—Met Veterans.

CHICAGO, October 14 (Canadian Press). — Edward David Windsor, heir to the British throne, was Chicago's guest on a private visit for seventeen crowded hours yesterday.

At every stopping-place the enthusiastic welcome of the cheering throngs turned the affair into a cordial public reception. Lusty cheers and big-throated automobile horns saluted him at every turn.

"My word,' said the Prince to his host during one of the day's brief stops, "these Americans are enthusiastic and vigorous."

He doffed his hat and smiled graciously in response to every greeting.

Chicago picked up the Prince enthusiastically at Lake Forest, a suburb, soon after 8 o'clock in the morning. He was the guest of Louis F. Swift, the packer. He was whisked along the lake shore and through ever-growing throngs to the stockyards for an hour's inspection tour, and the University of Chicago, for a somewhat formal reception by college officers, city officials, and some 200 invited representatives of the community.

After luncheon in Hutchinson Commons, on the University quadrangle, the party next stopped at the Field Museum, where despite more thousands of eager citizens, the Prince was afforded a fleeting view of the more notable exhibits.

When the party stopped for tea at the Chicago Club late in the afternoon the boulevard traffic quickly knotted itself so thoroughly for several miles that extra police squads were called to extricate the private visiting party.

At the Stock Yards.

At the Stock Yards, the Prince abandoned his motor and mounted a horse for his inspection trip through miles of cow alleys, sheep barns and big repositories. Work halted momentarily in virtually every department of the yards, and live stock which had not been marketed by the time of the Prince's arrival went into the traders' classification "holdover."

The Prince exhibited keen interest in the operations of the various departments and gave expression to undisguisd amazement when informed of the magnitude of a day's work in packing town.

Guest at Luncheon.

Ernest Dewitt Burton, president of the University of Chicago, formally welcomed His Highness in the name of the luncheon guests.

"We all heartily wish that he may live long to symbolise and foster the friendship between Great Britain and the United States," he said.

"May his nation and ours ever stand shoulder to shoulder in the maintenance of the highest ideals of national life and in the promotion of international peace and welfare."

The Prince acknowledged the toast with a smile and a not of the head.

Met British Veterans.

At the Field Museum eight World War veterans of the British Armies, most of them with decorations of the Empire upon their breasts, saluted the Prince.

His Highness walked quickly to the spot where they stood at rigid attention, shook hands with each, and thanked him individually in the name of the Empire for his services to the British people.

Last night, the police escort abandoned, the Prince was the guest of Wolcott Blair, a personal friend, at a private dinner party. Only invited guests were permitted within the bounds of the Saddle and Cycle Club grounds, the scene of the party.

The Prince's schedule provided for his arrival at Detroit early to-day, to be the guest for the day of Henry Ford, and his departure thence to-night for Toronto.

Beyond that none in the party would outline the itinerary, but it was understood that here had been no change in he plans within the last three days.

INFANT SCALDED.

Girl Said To Have Killed Child By Bathing In Boiling Water.

MORRISTOWN, N.J., October 14. —Ethel Burke of Troy Hills, is held without bail on a charge of manslaughter. She is accused of pouring boiling water on 20 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Estelle, of Newark.

The act took place, it is alleged, at a baby home conducted by the girl's mother, Mrs. Della Burk, at Troy Hills, where nine infants were under the care of Mrs. Burke. Prosecutor Bolitho asserted that the home had been conducted without a license Mrs. Burk told the county officers that she had left the infants in her daughter's care while she herself went to a nearby store. The daughter, it is charged, put the baby in a bath tub, poured boiling water over it and washed its body. The infant died last Friday without having received any attention from a physician. Coroner Tom Louis, of Boonton, was called five hours later.

An inquest and a hearing to determine the sanity of the girl will be held, it was announced at the Prosecutor's office.

IRAK BOUNDARY UNDER DISPUTE

Turkish Premier Alleges Britain Ignores League of Nation's Decision.

TROUBLE FEARED.

GENEVA, October 14 (Canadian Press). — Accusing Great Britain of ignoring the League of Nations decisions, Ismet Pasha, Turkish Premier and Foreign Minister, yesterday telegraphed the League that if British troops commit acts of aggression on the frontier between Turkey and Irak, Britain must bear the entire responsibility.

The Turkish telegram, which was given out last night, indicated that it had been distributed to all the members of he Council at the request of Ismet, who asks that the Council act to ensure respect for decisions it has previously reached.

Committee Appointed.

The telegram shows that the Mosul dispute is still far from settlement. At the last meeting of the Council, both Great Britain and Turkey agreed to the appointment of an arbitral committee of three which would collect all the information on the Mosul question.

Both countries also agreed to accept any decision concerning the Irak-Turkish frontier which the Council might pronounce. The arbitral committee has not yet been appointed.

The difficulty arises from the failure of Great Britain and Turkey to agree on what constitutes a status quo frontier. Britain contends that the status quo line is that fixed by the Treaty of Lausanne.

Ismet Pasha, however, argues in yesterday's telegram that the status quo line is that which existed when the Council took its action on he arbitration measure on 30th September.

Mediation Needed.

The Turkish Premier insists that his troops are sticking to the Turkish side of this line. As the Brition refuse to accept this provisional frontier, pending an arbitral settlement of the Mosul dispute, he opinion is expressed here that there is need of further and quick mediation by the Council if difficulties in the Near East are to be prevented.

INTEREST REDUCED.

Savings Offices Will Now Pay 3 Per Cent. Instead of 4.

TORONTO, Oct. 14 —(Canadian Press).—Commencing on Nov. 1st the Ontario government has decided to reduce by 1 per cent the rate of interest which is being paid upon deposits in Provincial Savings offices, now amounting, according to Provincial Treasurer Price's computation, to 21,000,000. Instead of four per cent. interest, therefore, Government will hereafter pay but 3 per cent. same rate as banks pay on savings.

The necessity of saving money wherever it is found possible to do so was given yesterday by Provincial Treasurer Price as one of the reasons for this important step in the Provinces saving venture. With the present deposits saving effected to the treasury will amount to $210,000 a year. And deposits are continually increasing.

AVOIDANCE OF TRIPLE FIGHTS ALREADY SHOWN

Unionist Candidates Withdrawn at Paisley and In One Glasgow Division.

PREMIER STARTS.

Describes Understanding Between Older Parties as an Unholy Alliance.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Apprehension of another era of labor government has driven the older parties to an accommodation that all appeals in the past have failed to accomplish, namely to the voidance of three-cornered contests giving parliamentary seats to minority candidates.

The headquarters of the Conservative and Liberal parties officially disavow that any such accommodation had been arranged, and assert that anything of the kind, if it exists is the work of local election organizations. Nevertheless, clearly there is a good understanding and this is seen in the unionist predictions, already enumerating the large number of labor seats which are expected to be captured in London and elsewhere by avoidance of triangular contests.

Early Evidences.

The first fruits of this understanding appeared last night in the withdrawal of the Unionist candidate at Paisley, leaving H. H. Asquith the Liberal leader with straight fight against the Laborite alone. Similarly in the Tradeston district at Glasgow, the Unionist candidate has withdrawn and the Liberal nominee has been left to contest against Thomas Henderson, the Labor candidate.

Withdrawals of Conservative or Liberal candidates have been effected in other constituencies in accordance with local exigencies, and should the process be continued it will bring about a complete change in election prospects, making any fair prediction of results quite impossible. The extreme importance of this new departure will be realized by recalling that in the last general election there were more than 260 such triangular contests, of which the Unionists won 118, Labor 84 and the Liberals 52.

The Prime Minister opened his election campaign with a speech at Glasgow last night. He admitted that never in his life had he acted with greater alacrity than when he picked up the challenge thrown down by his opponents.

An "Unholy Marriage."

Mr. MacDonald described the understanding between the Conservatives and Liberals to overthrow the government as an "unholy marriage."

Two great parties, he added, professing to be fundamentally opposed, are now kneeling to each other and arranging to withdraw candidates.

"They are afraid of us," said the Labor premier. "It is our success that is our trouble. If we had made a mess of it, especially of foreign affairs, they would not have turned on us. These two old parties, who had always been understood to be as great enemies as God and Satan, have united to destroy the Labor government."

Defending the Russian loan, the premier said that the British guarantee was not for money to be spent exclusively in Russia. Two-thirds of the loan would be spent on the Clyde or in Birmingham or wherever British machinery was made.

Most of the speeches of the Labor candidates emphasize what they term the unholy alliance of the Liberals and Conservatives to keep labor out.

CUSTOMS OFFICERS MAKE HUGE HAULS

Series of Raids on Atlantic Coast Netted 13 Rum Runners and 100,000 Cases of Liquor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press). — In a series of raids all along the North Atlantic coast, extending from the Jersey shore to Gloucester, Mass., the revenue cutter service yesterday bagged thirteen rum-runners laden with more than 100,000 cases of liquor, worth approximately $4,500,000.

It was a long threatened offensive of the prohibition navy against its natural enemies. It is regarded by the Customs officers as the most successful blow yet dealt to a horde of rum-runners which infest the seaboard from end to end.

From New London, Conn., comes the news of the capture of two tugs, three small schoopers and one launch, all loaded to capacity with liquors and whiskies. Thirty-four prisoners were taken on these rum-runners.

The coastguard officers at Gloucester, Mass., seized five rum-runners carrying an aggregate of 3,000 gallons of alcohol and several cases of whiskey, which they attempted to run the blockade. The boats were caught about eight miles off-shore. On the Pacific coast United States revenue agents seized the British ship Quadra, near Farallons Islands and captured liquor with the reported value of $750,000.

HARVESTING IS RESUMED IN EDMONTON DISTRICT

Weather More Favorable In Many Prairie Sections —Some Rain.

WINNIPEG, October 14. — The weather conditions are more favorable for the completion of harvesting it was reported from most districts of the prairie, following a period of heavy and general rainfall.

Alberta was clear over the week-end and Edmonton reports that harvesting was resumed on Monday in that district.

In Saskatoon and Manitoba rainfall was heavy during the week-end but yesterday the skies had cleared and fair cooler weather was forecast. It will be several days, however, before harvesting can be resumed at most points, even with good drying conditions.

TWO NOMINATED.

REGINA, October 14. — W. H. Poulson was on Monday nominated by the Liberals, and E. J. Laxdal, of Dafoe, by the Progressives, to contest the Wynyard election, to fill the the vacancy caused by the resignation of George W. Robertson, Oct. 20 will be polling day.

THIRD AUTOPSY EVIDENCE TEST

Risteen's Head Struck Rock in Fight Slayer Pleads in Defence.

WIRE ABOUT NECK.

BEVERLEY, Mass., October 14 (Canadian Press). — At the request of counsel defending Mrs. Marion A. Risteen and George W. Plummer, Jr., a lodger at her home who has confessed that he killed the woman's husband in a quarrel, and sank the body in Norwood Pond, North Beverley, another autopsy was ordered yesterday on the body of Fred S. Risteen, which was found in the pond more than a week ago, weighted down with 70 pounds of iron.

This autopsy, the third to be held since the body was found by Plummer's young brother while fishing, is based on the man's claim that Risteen met death by striking his head against a rock when he fell during their fight in the woods.

The combat, Plummer said, in his confession, resulted from Risteen's accusation that he was familiar with Mrs. Risteen.

Medical Examiner George A. Stickney, of Beverley, had found that death was due to strangulation. A piece of telephone wire was wound tightly about the neck when the body was taken from the water.

Funeral services, arranged for yesterday afternoon at North Beverley Cemetery, were postponed in consequence of the autopsy order.

A device has been perfected whereby radio users can leave the sets and be notified through distinctive audible signals whether music, lectures or other forms of entertainment are being received in their absence. The invention, it is said, also will eliminate long hours of sitting with receivers to the ear by operators on board ship while its selective features will enable radio listeners everywhere to choose entertainment.

GRAND JURY IN SQUIRES TRIAL FAIL TO AGREE

No Bill Reported in St. John's (Newfoundland) Case When Jury Divided Evenly.

DISCHARGE ASKED

Prosecution Contended Jury Was Not Properly Drawn or Summoned.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—The discharge of Sir Richard Squires, charged with larceny of public moneys while he was premier, was asked by his counsel yesterday after the full bench of the supreme court of the colony had handed down an unanimous decision that the grand which reported a "no bill" in his case acted with substantial observance of all the requirements of law. The motion was taken under consideration until today, to permit the crown to make answer.

It was the contention of the prosecution that the grand jury was not properly drawn or summoned. The court's decision of 2,000 words was written after review of affidavits filed Saturday evening containing descriptions by the sheriff and bailiffs of the methods of obtaining the jury. This jury of twenty men was divided ten to ten upon the question of indictment, and a true bill requires 12 affirmative votes, a no bill was reported.

The evidence considered by the grand jury included the report of a royal commission that Sir Richard Squires while premier took funds transferred from the liquor control department, and accepted gratuities from the British Empire Steel Corporation.

GREAT OPPORTUNITIES.

Canada Offers More Opportunities Than the United States.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Thomas White believes greatly in Canada.. He told those attending the opening meeting of the Business Training Course in technical institute last night, that he considered that Canada offered more opportunities to young business men than any other country in the world Sir Thomas said that he could truthfully say there were ten open roads to prosperity now to one there was, when he was a young man. Many, he added, thought the Great Republic to the South was a great promised land. He did not believe this. Canada offers far more opportunities than United States ever offered to alert young men determined to carve his future said Sir Thomas.

WAHABIS ADVANCE ON ROAD TO MECCA

Reject Truce Overtures and May Besiege Islamic Shrine.

JEDDAH, Arabia, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—The invading Wahabi forces which have been threatening the city of Mecca, Chief Shrine of the Islamic world, have advanced from their position some distance from the city and have taken up a position astride the route from Jeddah, the fort of Mecca, to Mecca itself, it was announced Monday by the president of the council of notables here.

This move by the Wahabis has restricted communications and the movement of supplies between Mecca and Jeddah.

The president of the council says there is apprehension with regard to a scarcity of food and water in Jeddah owing to the influx of refugees from Mecca. He adds that, in order to avoid bloodshed, the remaining Hedjaz forces in Mecca, with King Ali, have retired to a small fertile town half-way between Jeddah and Mecca.

Four messengers despatched from Mecca with letters offering terms to the Wahabis for a cessation of hostilities, were captured and the letters destroyed. The offers were unceremoniously rejected, and therefore it is assumed Mecca will be besieged.

A MONEY MAKER.

MONTREAL, Oct. 14—(Canadian Press).—While preparing a young chicken for dinner, Mrs. L. Marcus, Park Avenue, found twenty-five shining Canadian five-cent pieces in its crop. She had bought the bird for $1.25 at a neighboring butcher shop.

WASHING OILCLOTH.

For washing oilcloth use a flannel well wrung out of water and wipe the cloth until it is as dry as possible.

PETERBOROUGH IS EXAMPLE.

These pictures, showing Charlotte street before and after taking the cure for an outbreak of unsightly poles, are being broadcast over the continent by a firm manufacturing electrical supplies. The top picture shows the sidewalks blocked by hundreds of huge poles; the bottom picture shows the same section after Mr. H. O. Fisk's design of electrical transmission had been adopted. Not only is the street a street in Peterborough, but the scheme is one originated by the manager of the Peterborough Utilities and carried out under his direction.

All of which is good advertising for the city.

STUNG TO DEATH.

Blooded Calf Died From Stings Of Swarm Of Bees.

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y., Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—Knocking over a bee-hive in its gambols, a blooded calf belonging to James Morrison, of Westtown, was stung to death yesterday. The calf, which had broken its tether, wandered to where the bees were kept, and having toppled over the hive, is thought to have been eating the honey when the enraged insects swarmed upon it. The calf was stung so badly about the head, mouth and throat that it died for lack of breath owing to swelling, despite the efforts of a veterinarian.

Plebiscite Bulletin

Oct. 14, 1924 PETERBOROUGH No. 21

THE BISHOP of TORONTO SPEAKS OUT

IN his annual charge to the Synod of the Anglican Diocese of Toronto, early in June, Right Rev. J. F. Sweeney, Bishop of Toronto, had the following to say:

"One matter that has again come to the front and has been recently occupying much public attention is that of the Ontario Temperance Act. I would advise those who are agitating for a change in the law, before pressing for such change, to seriously study the facts ,bearing in mind some of the altered conditions of better and happier home life, better and quister hotel accommodation, greater orderliness and less ground for pity and disgust on the public highways and streets of our great and congested city, less poverty and pauperism, with an increase of thrift, and, above all, more hopeful conditions under which workers can carry on social and moral reform work.

SECRET DRINKING AND BOOTLEGGING.

"The fact that in some cases Prohibition fails to prohibit and encourages secret drinking and bootlegging is not so much the fault of the law as it is the failure of its enforcement throughout the Province ,it being the dishonourable determination on the part of offenders to break it, and, through greed, cupidity, and blindness to moral obligations, to make fortunes out of those whom Prohibition is intended to help in the way of sobriety, morality and thrift.

WHAT THE O.T.A. DOES.

"The Ontario Temperance Act sets out to remove the facilities and therefore to lessen the opportunities and, correspondingly, the consequences of the liquor traffic. It is for those who cannot restrain their appetite a measure of restriction; for others a self-denying obligation. I plead with my clerical and lay brethren to consider carefully the responsibility involved in connection with this revived question of the O.T.A., and only after deep study of the question in all its bearings to let conscience, with the vision of its accountability before it, determine the course that each for himself shall pursue."

Noted Speaker Thursday Night

One of the most noted speakers on the continent, Mrs. Gordon Wright, of London, Ont., Dominion President of the W.C.T.U., will Address a Public Mass Meeting in the Grand Opera House, next Thursday Evening, October 16. Be sure and hear her. Admission Free.

TO VISIT LINDSAY.

Peterboro Engineers Plan Next Meeting in Northern Town.

In deference to the number of branch district members resident in Lindsay and district the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada plan to hold their next meeting on 16th October, at Lindsay.

The Peterborough contingent have arranged to leave Peterborough about 5.30 p.m., as a dinner has been arranged for at the Lindsay Rotary headquarters at 7 o'clock.

The meeting, which will be held at 8.15. will be presided over by F. R. Welford, Esq., M.E.I.C., of Lindsay, and will be addressed by R. O. Wynne-Roberts, Esq., M.E.I.C., of the firm of R. O. Wynne-Roberts & Sons, civil engineers of Toronto, who will give a paper on "Sewage Disposal."

The question of sewage disposal being a live topic in Lindsay at the moment, it is expected that the meeting will prove of great interest and provide full discussion.

Supplementing the paper J. A. Dallyn, Esq., director of the Sanitary Engineering Division, Department of Health, Toronto, will show moving pictures of the up-to-date disposal plants and methods.

The arrangements for the transportation of the Peterborough members and friends are in the capable hands of B. L. Barns, A.M.E.I.C.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE MOOSE.

Have you followed the trail of the lordly moose through the flaming forests of the north and heard him call from the barrens or tracked the fleet-footed deer over newly-fallen snow, with the keen wind in your face while the trees cracked in the frost and the whole forest seemed vibrant with life? If you have you know the real joy of the Canadian autumn, which is never found on the city's streets nor in pulsing marts of commerce, but only in the clean open spaces and the fragrant silent woods.

Now that the leaves are turning crimson and gold you will begin to dream of the little hunting camp in the far north woods, of sparkling dewy dawns, tramps through the fallen leaves, blasting camp fires, wonderous autumn nights and the bed of balsam boughs, for there is no tonic in all the world for a tired brain and a weary soul like a hunting trip in the northern wilds.

Canadian National Railways tap the choicest of the solitary hunting districts of Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces and if you are going off on a hunt this year go to the nearest ticket office and procure a copy of "Hunting in Canada," which contains full information as to the various districts, accommodation and guides. Then pack up your old rifle, sweater and togs and be off. 11,14,16,18

THREE RIVERS, Que., October 14 (Canadian Press). — This city in 1925 will have the greatest paper mill in the world.

The International Paper Company will install three new machines and raise its output to 600 tons per day.

The enlargement of the plant will involve $5,000,000 expenditure.

A NATIONAL ASSET.

As the greatest transportation company in the world, the Canadian Pacific Railway has maintained a national service in the Trans-Canada Limited which is second to none and on the conclusion of the summer schedule of this crack train has transferred the equipment to the Vancouver Express which leaves Toronto every night at 10.10 p.m. on its trip across the continent, via Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, the spiral tunnel, Sicamous and parts of the Canadian Pacific Rockies famous throughout the world, on its way to Vancouver, where the travellers are unanimous in their praise of the service of the Vancouver Hotel. The Canadian Pacific also operates a steamship service to Victoria, the Mecca for winter tourists.

Not only does the Vancouver Express carry tourist and standard sleepers, but it also carries a compartment-observation car complete in itself, while a parlor car is added from Revelstoke to Vancouver.

Added to this national service is a feature service from Toronto to Montreal via the Lake Shore Line, which has been entirely reballasted with crushed rock and relaid with 100 pound rails, insuring a maximum of comfort for travellers at night as well as an absence of dust in daytime. Trains leave Toronto Union Station at 9.00 a.m. daily, 10.00 p.m. daily except Saturday, and 11.00 p.m. daily. Arriving at Windsor station, the traveller has the benefit of immediate facilities in the women's rest room, lunch room and barber shop, which cannot be duplicated in any other station in Montreal. An added convenience is offered those who wish to travel to Montreal from North Toronto, in the 9.45 p.m. train, daily except Saturdays, from Yonge street station.

Canadian Pacific agents will gladly make your reservations and supply you with any information you require. They are fully qualified to offer a "second to none" service to the public.

Assassination Attempted.

Attempt To Take Former Kaiser's Life Failed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press).—An attempt to murder the former Kaiser at Doorn, Holland, has been made by a German, according to a despatch broadcast from Nauen, Germany, and picked up last night by wireless. The message declared the local police believe the would-be assassin was one of a gang of conspirators whose chief aim is Wilhelm's death. The man carried two sets of passports, one forged and the other in good order.

HAYNES RODE POORLY, SAYS WERTHEIMER

Jockey is Blamed by Owner of Epinard for Making Weak Finish.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 13. — Pierre Wertheimer was bitterly disappointed over the outcome of the final international race Saturday. He was emphatic in blaming Haynes for a weak finish.

"I am very disappointed in the way Haynes rode Epinard," said the owner of the French colt. "I think that Haynes did not make nearly as strong a finish with my horse as he might."

Mr. Wertheimer would not say whether another rider will be up on the French colt in his two races in Maryland. That impression was gathered, however, by persons who conversed with the French sportsman after the race. It is evident that Mr. Wertheimer more than ever desires an opportunity to prove to the American racing public that he has a better horse than any in the United States and it would not be surprising that the best boy he can engage will pilot Epinard next Saturday afternoon in the $10,000 race at Laurel.

SMART GOAT DRESS

This really is a coat dress. It is fastened but once in the front and is worn over a sleeveless slip of a different color. Its usefulness lies in the fact that one may have a number of underslips of different shades and fabrics to give variety and change. The lines are very smart and the sleeves show the new flaring cuff that is considered more flattering than the straight-sleeve line.

Tenth Anniversary.

About sixty of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Forrest gathered at their home at Crow Bay, on Tuesday evening, October 7th, 1924, to join with them in celebrating the tenth anniversary of their wedding.

The evening was spent in social intercourse, music, cards and dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest were presented with two handsome wicker chairs, the presentation being made on behalf on the guests present, by Mr. George Stephens and the address was read by Mr. James McMullen. Mr. Forrest, in his reply, thanked his many friends for being so thoughtful and kind and in the long years to come, when resting in the arms of the chairs, he and Mrs. Forrest would think of their many friends who gave these beautiful chairs.

They then sang, "For they are jolly good fellows."

Mrs. Forrest, a bride of ten years, wore a blue georgette trimmed with beads and also wore a bouquet of roses and ferns.

The following is the address:

Campbellford, Oct. 7, 1924.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Forrest,—We, your friends and relatives are gathered together to-night on this the tenth anniversary of your wedding day, to congratulate you on the completion of the first ten years of your married life. As a token of our kindest regards and best wishes for your future prosperity and happiness, we would ask you to accept these two chairs. May you for many years to come enjoy their comfort and rest and in peace and happiness in their welcoming arms. When old age approaches and you look back over the years of your lives, may this gift ever remind you of the old friends who have gathered to-night to speed you still further along the paths of life. Hoping that you may always tread in the ways of happiness, good fortune and contentment.

Signed on behalf of the gathering— George Stephens and James McMullen.

Birthday Party.

Little Miss Ruth Palliser, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Palliser, Oliver Road, entertained about a dozen little girls at a birthday party on Saturday, October 11th, from three o'clock to half past seven. The dining room was prettily decorated with red crepe paper. A large red hoop was hung over the table with all day suckers hanging down from it and red streamers from the decorated hoop to the four corners of the table. The young folks enjoyed the birthday cake with ten candles on it, as well as the other good things to eat. During the afternoon games were played on the lawn and after tea in the house. Ruth received many pretty presents, among which was a gold ring set with amethysts from her parents.

League Meeting.

A very interesting evening was spent at the League on Monday night. In the absence of Miss Keir, the vice-president for the night, the president took charge of the meeting.

Miss Catherine Clarke gave the devotional topic. Miss V. Sanders and Mr. T. Craighead also gave splendid readings, pertaining to the church one hundred years ago, one giving the life of Barbara Heck, the founder of Methodism in Canada and the United States, the other the life of Ryerson and how he obtained freedom for the Methodist church.

During the recreation period sides were chosen for partners for a watch contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Swain of Toronto, spent the week end with Mr. Swain's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Swain.

Mrs. Morrison visited friends in Smith on Sunday.

MOTHER-IN-LAW CLUB.

Club With Eleven Members Has Been Organized In New Jersey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(Canadian Press). — A Mothers-inLaw Club, with eleven members, has been organized at Orange, N.J. Mrs. Joseph Pernitze was elected president. "There will be no room in the club for hackneyed jokes about mothers-in-law," Mrs. Pernitze said. "We have organized as women with mutual interests to hold afternoon tea parties twice a month and bridge parties once a month. We will not talk about sons and daughter-in-laws.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, October 14. —About half-past one on Friday afternoon, as Mrs. B. Pickering, of Havelock Road, was going upstairs to dress, she found her room full of smoke and fire. The alarm was put in, and as soon as possible, on account of the long detour because of the new bridge not being used, the Fire Brigade was on hand. The fire was extinguished, and every one had left. But about four o'clock the fire broke out again worse than at first. Most of the house was burned and some of the furniture, while most of the bedding and clothing was damaged by water. Mrs. Pickering was slightly burned also. Their family of small children were all rescued.

The fire is supposed to have started from the chimney and got in the partitions. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Pickering in their loss. They had already had a great trouble this summer in losing a little daughter by drowning when she was trying to save her little sister.

Mr. Pickering is an employee at the Campbellford Cloth Company mill.

Althouse — Scott.

In Havelock, at the manse, by Rev. James McIlroy ,on Thursday, 2nd October, 1924, Ethel Hazel Scott, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Scott, Wellington Street, Campbellford, to Mr. Colin Althouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Althouse, of Healey Falls. The young couple will reside at Healey Falls.

Temperance Meeting.

A large audience gathered to hear Mrs. Gordon Wright, of London, Dominion President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and Dr. J. F. Oaten, Field Secretary of the Ontario Temperance Union.

Mr. C. L. Owen acted as chairman for the evening, and he asked a number of the citizens to the platform, Messrs. J. A. Irwin, F. Weston, R. Weston, J. D. Cumming, W. J. Armstrong, Rev. C. F. McIntosh, Rev. W. Elliott, G. A. Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bell, Mrs. Charles Macoun, and Mrs. W. H. Ashton as well as the two speakers for the evening.

After the chairman's splendid address Miss Hazel Atkinson sang a solo "If Winter Comes," accompanied by Miss Cherrie Turner.

Miss Helen Wood then sang the solo, "Pale Moon," accompanied by E. C. Dolman.

Dr. Oaten then addressed the audience. He gave some figures. In 1914 when the bar rooms were in full swing, for every thousand people in the Province 118 boys and girls were at school. In 1921, when the bars were closed, out of every thousand people 179 boys and girls were attending school, in other words, 30,000 boys and girls were getting a chance. The reason for this was, more money was spent on the homes and families and not on beer.

Dr. Oaten's address was clear and concise, and did not fail to show the benefit of the O.T.A.

Mr. George Lucy then sang the solo, "Friend o' Mine," accompanied by Mr. Dolman.

Mrs. Wright of London was then called upon. Her address was excellent, and as Christians and moral-living people we can do nothing else but support the Ontario Temperance Act. It was unfortunate that every man and woman in Campbellford, who has a vote, did not hear Mrs. Wright.

Mrs. De Carroll then favoured the audience with a solo, "Twinkle Star," accompanied by Mr. G. Lucy.

Rev. C. F. McIntosh took much pleasure in moving a hearty vote of thanks to both speakers.

This was carried by a hearty clap of hands.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Gordon Wright was the guest of Mrs. W. H. Ashton while in town.

A great number of the citizens of Campbellford took advantage of the fine day to attend the Fair at Warkworth.

Mrs. Parker Smith of Cobourg is spending a few days this week with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beavis, Garry Street.

Mr. James Forde on Garry Street has ripe raspberries and strawberries in his garden this week.

Mrs. C. W. Turner, Queen Street, spent Thursday night and Friday with her sister, Mrs. K. Boots, at Warkworth, and also attended the Fair.

Government Control is People's Control

THE people of Ontario—not any narrow or isolated section of them—but the people of Ontario as a whole—have certain ideals of public and private life. British traditions have given us these.

These ideals are well understood.

Lawlessness, disrespect for law, lack of self-restraint, and excesses of all kind find no approbation in Ontario.

Government Control, in the present plebiscite, is simply a mandate by the people to the Government to proceed with legislation which, while dealing with, and as far as possible eliminating, excesses in drinking, will restore respect for law, and recognize the right of the citizen to regulate his private life in accordance with the principles of moderation and sanity.

Prohibition is a denial of such a mandate. It consists of an absolute order of "MUST NOT".

That it undermined private and public life—that it made lawlessness profitable—that it took revenues which should be used for the public good—that it created evils harder to subdue than those it pretended to abolish—was the verdict of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba within the last year. They had tried Prohibition for seven years and found that period quite long enough.

Of course, the verdict was not rendered without a fight. Just as here, the people were told of the wonders of prohibition. They were told how rich they had become, how sober they were, how crime had vanished, how low taxes were and how happy and prosperous everybody was. "Impartial" writers wrote articles in the newspapers, "unbiased" speakers made speeches.

But the people were not moved. They knew better.

Then they acted. Just as soon as the opportunity arose they voted for Government Control. The Prohibitionists tried to prevent the people from expressing their views. Everywhere they said that a vote was unnecessary and sought to avoid one. Just as here.

But the people prevailed. They decided that, through their Governments, they would take control themselves.

Vote for Government Control as follows:

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?	X

JUST GOOD BUSINESS.

Fire Prevention Week is over, but the emphasis it placed upon the necessity of eliminating fire hazards, correcting dangerous and careless habits and reducing the number of preventable fires should be lasting and should produce results.

The prevention of fire, of course, should be a task for fifty-two weeks of the year, not merely one, and if the people dismiss all the advice they have received as merely campaign propaganda designed for the moment, they are making a serious and costly mistake.

Canada's fire loss per capita should be a matter of national reproach; the economic waste represented in this loss is so great that it should appal every citizen.

Were these costly fires merely the result of illfortune they would in all conscience be serious enough.

When it is realized that eight out of every ten of them are the result of carelessness and lack of thought they become more than misfortunes—they can be described as nothing else but crimes.

Fire Prevention Week was intended to sell to Canadians the idea that the majority of fires could be prevented with ordinary care, and that if they were prevented there would be lower insurance rates and a reduction in the cost of living.

In other words, it is good business to prevent fires—and every citizen should make it his business for the next fifty-two weeks.

BUT JUST HOW, MR. FERGUSON?

Premier Ferguson has not yet succeeded in making it quite clear as to what policy will be adopted by his Government in the event that the majority of Ontario electors vote in favour of Government control.

He has made several statements that clear up some of the doubtful points, but as to the exact nature of his plan of action the Premier still has the Province mystified.

His latest announcement goes to show that the system he has in mind differs materially from those in operation in British Columbia and Quebec, for Mr. Ferguson says:

"Looking into the matter of operation both in British Columbia and Quebec, their systems are called 'Government control,' but there does not appear to be very much restriction or attempt at control. Properly speaking, they only operate a monopoly for the purpose of the revenue that is in it."

And then he goes on to dimly outline what is to be expected in Ontario should the Ontario Temperance Act be abandoned in the following words::

"With this Government our first thought is to restrict its use and curtail to the utmost the evils that may arise from it."

Now, if Mr. Ferguson would only elaborate that point a little he would be of great assistance to many puzzled electors.

As the Examiner has pointed out, there are thousands of citizens who are neither fanatics on the temperance question nor so eager to have liquor available that they do not care how the supply is provided who want to vote to some purpose on October 23rd.

To them an amplification of the Premier's latest statement telling just how the Goverment proposes to restrict the use of liquor and curtail to the utmost the evils arising from it would be decidedly helpful.

RURAL FIRES.

London, Ont., is facing a problem that periodically arises in Ontario cities, and that is the lack of a definite basis as regards the use of civic fire-fighting apparatus in dealing with a fire in a rural district.

The Fire Chief took a piece of apparatus and six men to a barn fire outside of London, and has been taken to task by Mayor Wenige for his action.

Perhaps the head of the Fire Department may have been wrong in allowing his consideration for otherwises to override his responsibility to the city employing him, but that is after all only a minor factor in the question.

The real problem—and this interests Peterborough as well as it does London or any other centre—is how a plan can be worked out by which the unprotected surrounding districts can be assisted in the event of a bad fire without depleting the city's fire apparatus and leaving urban residences ill-protected themselves should a fire break out before the apparatus has returned.

It is difficult to be stony-hearted when help is wanted—and yet the cities pay heavily for fire protection and cannot be asked to run the risk that is represented by the sending of fire-fighting appliances to outside points.

Our good friend the London Advertiser suggests that additional fire equipment be maintained in the London fire halls to be available for rural fires, the expense to be met by the districts served by this apparatus.

It is a suggestion well worth considering in view of the fact that every centre periodically runs into this awkward situation.

YOUR GUARDIAN ANGEL.

Here's a fellow who imagined he was ill. Doctors couldn't find anything definitely wrong with him. Yet he was constantly afraid he was threatened by dread maladies. A twinge of stomachache and he feared cancer. A shooting pain in the right side; he rushed to his physician, afraid he had appendicitis.

Since the war, doctors' offices are cluttered with these neurasthenics and hypochondriacs. The source of the trouble of most of them is mental or in an unbalanced condition of endocrine glands.

This particular fellow had all the tricks of the "hypo." Including sitting for a quarter hour taking his pulse. With his attention concentrated on it, his heart naturally responded to his nervous tension and began to run fast. He was sure he had organic valvular trouble.

The only way to cure most of these cases is to get them to forget about themselves. Nearly every doctor agrees that many maladies (at least, imaginary) can be generated by thought—especially digestive disturbances. Imaginary ailments, forgotten, disappear.

This apprehensive patient's latest tangent from normal was an obsession that he was getting tuberculosis of the lungs. Began to take his temperature every hour or so.

Broke a clinical thermometer. Broke another. So on. Finally he'd dropped and smashed nearly a dozen. Started him thinking.

"I believe," he told his physician, "that my guardian angel broke those thermometers to get word across to me that I was to forget my temperature. Do you believe in spiritualism?"

Doctor didn't. Said so. He claims his patient's nervousness caused him to drop his thermometers. Or maybe it was his subconscious mind announcing its revolt at being interfered with too much by his conscious mind. At any rate, he's cured—has forgotten his worries, and is in A-1 health.

We don't all believe in guardian angels. But we certainly do get "hunches" now and then that seem to be messages from "the other side." Maybe this "psychic beyond" is really the subconscious mind or a sixth sense that slumbers most of the time. Maybe not. That's for the individual to decide for himself.

But no one can deny the existence of "hunches," inspirations and premonitions of impending disaster or approaching death. Slumbering in us are mysterious powers.

AS TO EMERGENCY WORK.

"There is something in the statement of a speaker at the Hamilton Labor Temple the other evening, 'Canada owes every citizen the opportunity to work.' It is more manly than the demand to be supported at public expense without working."—Hamilton Herald.

Undoubtedly—but with regard to the dictum that Canada owes every citizen the opportunity to work, let us clear our thought, says the Ottawa Journal. Canada may owe every citizen the opportunity to work—but this should not be interpreted to mean that Canada owes to every citizen the opportunity to work the citizen wants to work, or to work where he wants to work. Much unemployment may exist in cities, while yet there is liable to be work elsewhere which is not taken. For instance, an Ottawa contemporary had a letter yesterday from a Pembroke correspondent, a paragraph in which read as follows:

"I passed by our local employment agency today and saw the window lined with ads., mostly 'men wanted for the bush, wages $22 to $30 per month'."

This recalls a famous occasion when after a parade of the unemployed in Ottawa had besieged the City Hall, Mr. J. R. Booth advertised for 500 men to work on the construction of the Parry Sound Railway, and did not get any applicants.

If the public must make work for the unemployed, the work should be simply such as is useful in the public interest, and where the public wishes it; and the wages paid should be such as will afford protection against distress, and nothing more.

WELL, WHY SHOULD THEY HURRY?

The suit over the $82,000,000 Jay Gould estate is continuing, and is doing its full share to ward off unemployment in the ranks of the legal fraternity of New York.

There are 35 legal lights shedding their combined brilliance on the document, and the cost is $10,000 for a day's work, said estimate being made by William Wallace, counsel for the estate of George Gould. That makes $286 per day for a lawyer.

There is something to admire in the way they have gone about the business. They do not rush in and start their business at seven in the morning, then dash out at noon for a plate of beans washed down with a mug of coffee, then back for a whole afternoon with a demand for night sessions. Not a bit of it. These miners are working in the pay streak, and they are not excited. They have a session that starts at ten in the morning; that gives a lawyer plenty of time to get properly dressed, to assume an attitude of quiet dignity and a demeanor of great wisdom. In fact, it gives him just the right amount of time to look like a $286-a-day man should look.

When it comes noon, after two hours of research into what Jay Gould really never meant to be done, they knock off for a couple of hours. Then in the afternoon they resume for another two hours of remunerative exercise, and the day's work is done, a nicely-regulated four-hour affair, beating out by several laps the dream of the socialist who says six hours is enough for any man to work to prevent over-production.

And this nicely-tuned performance has been running off and on, mostly on, since July of 1916. Some progress has been made. The lawyers have finished taking information from Edwin Gould, having made a start in April of 1917. None of them was in favor of hurrying Edwin along with what he had to say; none nudged him and suggested that he talk faster. That would not have been good form in court circles, especially when those who might have done the nudging were drawing $286 for a four-hour day. Just think what might have happened if he had blurted right out and told all he knew in half an hour!

The lawyers on this case certainly know their business. They have stepped aside from the mad way in which New York people rush about, trying to stick up a skyscraper in a week, counting Saturday afternoon off. They are cuddling up close to the biggest melon patch that ever cast a bloom in the home of the brave and the land of the free.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Bobby Leach still wants to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel. Other men prefer to run their motor cars at top speed through traffic.

The British people have a lot of elections, but they get them over quickly—an example that might well be followed on this side of the Atlantic.

Judging by the number of cars being damaged in Peterborough, the motorists are going to settle the traffic problem for themselves by a process of elimination.

The cheer leader at a football game may be added to the list of unnecessary noises.

No wedding ever went off without a "hitch."—Montreal Herald.

That Quebec man who went down to the river to drown himself and wouldn't go in because the water was too cold evidently wants to die in comfort.

One good result of this plebiscite campaign is that it is making people search the scriptures more assiduously than they have for years.—Hamilton Herald.

$375,000 ON HIS BIRTHDAY.

Great-Grandson of John B. Stetson Inherits a Fortune at 21.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Oct. 13. —Heir to a fortune on his twenty-first birthday, Henry H. Roelofs, great-grandson of John B. Stetson, hat manufacturer, went through his accustomed busy day in his real estate office at 1,102 Atlantic Avenue. Nineteen years ago his great-grandfather bequeathed a fund of $100,000 to be held in trust for the boy. The original bequest, with accumulated interest, amounts today to approximately $375,000.

He said he had no definite plans for the future "except to keep on working and look to the happiness of my family."

Roelofs until recently was employed as a clerk in a radio shop at a salary of $25 a week, and then became associated with a real estate firm.

With his widowed mother, Mrs. John B. Roelofs, and his wife and two months old baby girl, Edith Ann, young Roelofs lives at 105 North Pennbrook Avenue, Margate City. He started to purchase his home five years ago at a price of $6,000. Roelofs says that the unpretentious dwelling will continue as his abode.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Choice butchers were easily sold and Frank Hunnisett took several baby beeves at $10 and $10.50 a cwt. and one choice handyweight steers at $7.50 a cwt. Good butchers sold at $6.25 and $6.40 a cwt. Trade in the heavy steers was quite slow owing to the higher prices asked. The exporters on cable reports were not prepared to pay advanced prices and had only bought about 300 up till noon. For these they paid from $6.25 to $7.25 for steers and $5.50 to $6.25 for heifers. For export bulls Rogers and Maybee paid $4.25 a cwt.

Local packers were buyers of two loads of choice heavy steers and for these $7.35 and $7.80 was paid. This was 25 to 30 cents a cwt. better than last week. Butchers' cows were steady with very few choice ones available. Good cows sold at $4 to $4.25 and plain cows at $3 a cwt. Stockers and feeders had a stronger undertone and a load of light western heifers with through billing sold at $3.90 a cwt. The market was not overloaded in any class and sales toady will about take care of the offerings.

There was little variation in the calf market from last week. Good and choice calves were not too plentiful and prices were consequently firm. Top calves this morning were 10 3-4 and 11 cts. a pound, mediums 9 cents and common calves 6 to 7 cents.

A fairly large run of lambs did not weaken prices any and the first sale of a bunch of lambs at 12 cents was at an advance of 25 cents a cwt. from last Thursday. Other good decks sold at 11¾ cents and heavier lambs at 11½ cents. Sheep were steady at quoted prices.

The contract price for hogs over the week-end was $10 a cwt. f.o.b. This price was easily held this morning and sellers were trying for a further advance to $10.25 a cwt.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, October 14 (Canadian Press). — The egg market remained firm. Storage stocks are moving freely as dealers report that fresh firsts and seconds are not as uniform in quality as storage eggs, also the profits are better on storage than on fresh, which signifies how important it is for producers to market their eggs promptly to avoid deterioration.

Toronto market firm, jobbing specials 53, extras 49 to 50, firsts 39 to 40, seconds 34, storage extras 43 to 44.

Montreal market active. Jobbing extras 46 to 48, firsts 39, seconds 31 to 32.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 14 (Canadian Press). — There was no change in the condition of the demand for coarse grains here yesterday, prices being firm with a small trade passing. Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley was quoted at $1.08 and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track, and Ontario white oats changed hands a 67 to 68 cents and No. 3 white at 63 cents a bushel, ex-track.

A weaker feeling prevailed in rolled oats and the prices were reduced 15 cents per bag.

The market for baled hay was without any special feature to note.

The undertone to the egg market was firm and moderate sized trade was transacted. A stronger feeling developed in the butter situation, and prices were advanced 1-4 to 1-2 cent per pound. The export trade was quiet.

The cheese section was quiet owing to the fact that prices were higher than the bids received.

Owing to the fact that large shipments of old crop beans received from Ontario points have not been up to the standard, heavy losses have been sustained by producers. The prices have been cut to $2.65 a bushel for three pound pickers and in many cases the offerings have been refused. The new crop is not expected to come in until the end of the month, and no great hopes are held out of its being a crop up to the average standard of former years.

SPEAKER NOT OPPOSED.

Laborites will not Nominate Candidate against Whitley in Halifax.

LONDON, October 13. — After all, J. H. Whitley, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Liberal member of the late Parliament for Halifax, Yorkshire, will not be opposed by Labor in the present election. Although the Labor party in Halifax about two weeks ago, before anyone thought that there would be a general election so soon, decided to put a candidate in the field against the Liberal representative, the party has not decided not to do so.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

JAPAN DISAVOWS ULTERIOR MOTIVE

Protocol Amendment Not Aimed at United States —Embassy Statement.

PARIS, Oct. 14. — (Canadian Press).—The Japanese attitude at Geneva, where the Nipponese delegation succeeded in obtaining an amendment by the assembly of the League of Nations to the protocol of arbitration and security, was presented Monday in a lengthy statement from the Japanese Embassy here, issued through Havas.

The statement declared that "the wild talk about Japan's objective in this instance being the United States of America, or certain British dominions, is purely imaginary and entirely foreign to the true motives of the delegation with which it was purely a question of a juridical nature, a question of principle with the loyal intention of keeping the covenant free from patent inconsistency and illogicalness."

It was explained that the Japanese delegates felt that the original of the protocol would ultimately result in weakening, rather than in strengthening, the League," and it was sought to prevent this.

The statement, in discussing the proposal to declare an aggressor nation one that acted after the council had declared itself incompetent, suggests:

"Can a doctor, who cannot offer a remedy to a patient consulting him, declare that patient a criminal, when the latter, in desperation, administers to himself medicine without the doctor's prescription?"

In conclusion, the statement says: "As to the existing problems between Japan and America, it would be a lack of respect to statesmen of the two countries to suspect their capacity to settle them out themselves."

JURY AT INQUEST CRITICIZES THE FAILURE OF CANADIAN WOOLLENS TO COMPLY WITH FACTORIES ACT

"If Provisions Had Been Carried Out Fatality Might Have Been Avoided."

DEATH OF JAMES HERR

Superintendent of Auburn Plant Admits Elevator is Not Modern.

A verdict implying accidental death was returned last night by the jury inquiring into the death of James Herr, who was killed in an elevator at the Auburn plant of Canadian Woollens Ltd. on Thursday last.

In the verdict presented by foreman Charles Ackerman, the jury says "we are of the opinion that the elevator was started either by the deceased or some other person or persons unknown." It was shown by witnesses that it is possible to start the elevator from any one of three floors, and that the only warning given is the preliminary shaking of the control rod. The verdict continues: "We are also of the opinion that had the provisions of the Factory Act been complied with, the possibility of this fatality taking place might have been avoided." The sections referred to are those requiring a locking device on the operating rod; a notice "dangerous" in letters at least four inches in height; and guards on the elevator platform. Witnesses from the plant testified that there is no locking device in regular use, and no notice. The superintendent of the plant, Levi Bond, admitted that the system is not modern, but declared that inspectors from the Workmen's Compensation Board and the Government had repeatedly passed this elevator. The representative of the former body had made his last inspection ten days before the fatality County Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young presided, and the witnesses were examined by County Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C. The company was not represented by counsel.

J. M. McCulloch.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch said he attended Mr. Herr at Auburn Mills about 4.15 or after the accident and found him dead. Evidence was found of a depression across the body over the lower rib on the left side. Dr. McCulloch came to the conclusion that there had been sufficient fixation of the muscles of the diaphragm to cause suffocation.

Dead When Found.

Levi Bond, superintendent of Canadian Woollens at Auburn plant for 2 years, said he came from Waterloo, New York and his duties are to manufacture cloth and attend to the details of the plant.

He saw the body in the elevator facing the back. It was caught between the first landing and the floor of the elevator. The feet hung over the edge of the car.. When taken down the body showed no evidence of life.

The elevator is operated by a hoisting apparatus and is worked by a rod that shifts the belt. There is no lock on the rod and it can be operated from three floors. The elevator is inspected regularly—four or five times in two years. It has been passed by the Factory Inspector and the Inspector of the Prevention of Accident Association.

The government inspector had been there three months ago. He calls twice or three times a year. No recommendation were made regarding the elevator.

Mr. Bond said he is acquainted with the Factory Act and so far as he understands this elevator complys with its provisions. He knew of notices that are to be posted in the plant, but none for the elevator. There are no notices affixed to the elevator or gates and Mr. Bond was not aware of the fact that notices are required there. The plant complys with all recommendations from the factory inspector.

The name and address of the inspector are not attached to the elevator, Mr. Bond said, and he did not know this was required.

James Herr was taking a sheet of waste to the top floor when the accident occurred. Mr. Bond did not know of any provision in the act forbidding operatives using freight elevators.

The lower gate works automatically, descending as the elevator rises.. The top of the elevator car is covered by a heavy screen, with nothing to obstruct a view of the shaft.

Mr. Hatton read from the Act that notices are to be affixed on elevators at each floor in letters at least 4 inches in height and that a lock must be provided to secure the operating rod. Mr. Bond said neither of these provisions have been recommended by the inspector at the Auburn plant.

System Not Modern.

The starting of the elevator is signalled by the rattling of the operating rod, which can be heard very distinctly on every floor.

Characterizing the system as crude, Mr. Hatton asked whether the signal is ever omitted.

"Not to my knowledge."

"It could be done?"

"Yes."

Mr. Bond said his supposition is that Mr. Herr either came to his death by backing off after the elevator started; or he went to shift his load with one foot, and fell off.

The fact of the body being inside the gate gave Mr. Bond the impression that Mr. Herr had fallen off after the elevator started.

"It would have been possible to have started the elevator from the top floor just as the man was getting on?"

"Possibly."

The inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board examined the elevator ten days before the accident..

"You don't consider the system you have at the plant modern?"

"It is not modern."

The foreman of the jury asked whether there had been any complaints of employees starting the elevator while others were working there?

"None whatever."

Same In Other Plants.

John Southern, assistant superintendent, said he had been with the plant 18 months. He came from Pittsville, Mass. He does not know what notices are required by the Ontario Factory Act. The system of operating the elevator at Auburn is the same as in Pittsville. No other warning was given of operation but the shaking of a cable.

The elevator can be started from either inside or outside the car on the lower or top floors.

Didn't Hear Signal.

Francis Perkins, an employee at Auburn Mills, said at 4.15 there was nothing on the elevator. A few minutes later he heard it in operation. He did not hear the rod shake. The shaking of the rod makes about as much noise as the elevator working.

A man on the fourth floor, looking down and seeing no one in the elevatr might if he wished start the elevator without warning, but the witness had never known of a person failing to give the warning.

The witness said he was waiting to go down in the elevator at the time.

Coroner Dr. Young: "You didn't start the elevator going so that when you were ready the elevator would be at the top?"

"No.."

Other Witnesses.

Archibald Goldie said he regularly operated the elevator and when starting from the bottom he never shook the rod as it was not necessary. When starting from the top the rod was always shaken.

Percy Telfer an employee in the plant corroborated the evidence of the previous witnesses.

Edward Vinette said he lowered the elevator to allow the removal of the body.

There is no danger at the third floor and the rod is not shaken there. The machinery is on that floor and it can be easily seen whether the elevator is operating.

Only one accident has occurred in ten years and that was through a man tampering with the safety appliances, Mr. Vinette said.

A. Kylie, repair man, had never heard of anyone starting the elevator without shaking the rod.

James Nelson said he had never seen the elevator started without warning and he never remembered telling anyone he had. He did not tell the police, he said, that he had known it to start without warning. Finally he said "I might or I mightn't; I don't think I did tell anyone."

Florence Driscoll said sufficient time is always allowed to elapse between shaking the rod and starting the operation so that a reply may be received from anyone proposing to operate it from another floor.

The Verdict.

"We the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of James Herr who met his death in the Canadian Woollen Company on the afternoon of October 9, after listening to the evidence of witnesses and after visiting the scene of the fatality are of the opinion that the deceased met his death by being caught between the platform of the elevator and the gate and ceiling of the basement in the factory. We are of the opinion that the elevator was started by either the deceased or some person or persons unknown to ourselves.

We are also of the opinion that had the provisions of the Factory Act been complied with, i.e., that the elevator must be provided with a locking device; that the word "dangerous" in letters at least 4 inches high must be affixed to the bottom rail of every gate, and the top of the platform shall have guards to protect the occupants; that the possibility of this fatality taking place might have been avoided."

The jury consisted of:

Charles Ackerman, foreman; John Gillespie, Frank Maloney, Thomas Shields, Dennis Maloney, Martin Furlong, Frederick Miller, Thomas McAuley, Joseph Metheral, E. V. Warne, T. J. Wilson.

MACDONALD WAS GIVEN OVATION

POINTS TO RESULTS.

LONDON, Oct. 14. — (Canadian Press).—Ramsay MacDonald's first public appearance in the present election campaign was the signal for a demonstration of loyalty from his supporters.

When the audience had finished its ovation, the Premier launched at the outset into the question of foreign policy. When Labor assumed office, he said, they found the name of Britain lower in international reputation even than the Russian rouble. Much had been done to restore Britain's place in world politics and to re-assure other nations as to the dependability of Britain's policy.

Sedition Case "Humbug."

"Sheer humbug" was the way the Premier described the charges brought against the Government in connection with the suspension of the Campbell sedition case. Common fear had got into the hearts of Liberal and Tory alike, he said, that at last new heirs had been born to the hallowed thrones occupied so long by the old line parties.

"It is our success that made the trouble," MacDonald asserted, amid applause. "If I had made a mess of Europe, if my friend Wheatley had made a mess of his job, we would not have been voted out in the House of Commons. They would have given us a much long tether."

Turning to the proposed loan to Russia, the Premier emphasized that two-thirds of it would be spent in British industrial centres. "This proposal for a Russian loan," he said, "is a proposal to increase available credits for British industry and open the door for industry stimulated by that credit because it will open up Russian markets to our goods."

Revived the League.

When he came into office, the Premier went on, he had found the League of Nations practically dying because no great, beneficent lead had been given to it. "We went to Geneva and gave that lead," he added, "and the League of Nations today is more vigorous than ever."

The Premier complained that the Government had not had fair play in Parliament, where it had met with "pettifogging, partisan trickery aimed to prevent an honest government doing its work."

In his peroration, the Prime Minister appealed to the nation to put an end to contemptible party tactics by giving the Government a clear majority. Another salvo of cheers broke out as he resumed his seat.

FAST RACES AT MARMORA'S FAIR

Horses That Have Been Covering District Circuit Clash Again.

CROWD OF 2,500.

MARMORA, Oct. 13.—Brilliant sunshine prevailed for the holding of the adjourned Fair on Saturday. The attendance was about 2,500. Quite an interesting feature was the parade of the school children from the school to the fair grounds. They followed the Arlie Marks' Kiltie Band. The exhibits were quite the best seen for years and the judging was made difficult through the close competition. The finest class of horses ever trotted in Marmora were seen at their best, for owing to the vastly improved track, faster racing was made possible. Racing enthusiasts were highly delighted at this and they anticipate a great name for the races at the fairs in the future. The following officials acted at the races:

Starter—Mr. George Tice, Belleville.

Timers—G. Wellman, Frankford, Ross Turley, Frankford.

Judges — A. L. Neal and Fred Johnston.

Following are the results:

Children's Work — Mrs. J. E. Bailey.

There was much interest taken in the tent, wherein staged the baby show. The awards were held over till the following Monday. A lady representative from the Ontario Provincial Board of Health was in attendance and gave lectures.

All school children who desired, were weighed upon the scales in this tent and tagged with their weight.

The Midway was the largest ever seen.

The ball game between Marmora and Belleville resulted in a win for Belleville by 14-2.

The fair was visited by E. GusPorter, M.P., J. Robert Cooke, M.P.P. and Sheriff J. H. Clare.

Despite the large attendance there were no accidents or any untoward incidents to mar the pleasures of the day.

The gate receipts totalled $639.

At night the town hall was filled to overflowing for the return visit of the Arlie Marks players, many being turned away from the doors.

President T. E. Neal in the evening received many congratulations on the success of the fair.

While the list of prize winners is not available for a day or so special mention may be made of the attractive exhibits of Mr. Arthur Hart, chef of the Hub Dining Rooms, Deloro, who obtained 9 firsts and 4 seconds with his exhibits in Domestic Science.

"Exhausted Nerves and Palpitating Heart"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I tried several doctors, but it seemed nothing they gave me helped. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I tried it, and can say it certainly has done wonders for me. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes."

CAVAN WILL HEAR PETERBORO TALENT

Quartette Will Sing At Thanksgiving Dinner In Cavan.

CAVAN, Oct. 14. — The Ladies' Aid of Cavan church met at the home of the president, Mrs. Richard Matchett on Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance. Mrs. Matchett conducted the meeting. There was a number of reports from committees who had been securing talent for the programme, following the Thanksgiving dinner, which will be given in the evening of Thanksgiving day.

A quartette is expected from Peterboro to sing, while the literary part of the programme will be given by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, Peterboro.

Temperance Qu n.

Rev. R. T. Richards was present, and spoke for a few minutes on the Temperance question, emphasizing the fact that the ladies should remember that only one cross must be marked on the ballot, and asking that each person should use his or her influence to persuade those who are indifferent or undecided to vote in favor of Prohibition. The sum of fifteen dollars was voted to be given in aid of financing the Temperance campaign.

Much planning has been done for the fowl dinner. These plans will be completed at the meeting in November.

Mr. Richards dismissed the meeting after which Mrs. Matchett served lunch.

Miss F. Hunter invited the Aid to meet at her home on the first Thursday in November.

Mr. Melville Carr has been appointed an inspector of game and fish.

Mr. L. Parnell, Newcastle, was a visitor to Cavan on Sunday.

The first euchre party for this season was held in Ca an Community Hall on Thursday evening.

On account of the teachers' convention the Normal Students have a couple of days' holidays this week. Gerald Staples is home for Thursday and Friday.

It is understood that the C.P.R. intend to build a road into Dranoel station this fall. This year no person has been allowed to drive over Mr. Porteous' property to the station. The mixed train has stopped morning and evening in Mr. T. A. Kelly's lane to accommodate those wishing to attend the Peterboro market.

Mr. and Mrs. McColl visited Rev. R. T. and Mrs. Richards last week.

NEW INDUSTRY AT LAKEFIELD

Location of Company Hinges on the Sale of $15,000 Worth of Stock in Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 13.—A public meeting was held on Friday evening in the Memorial Hall at which the members of the Board of Directors of the Spar Mining and Milling Co. addressed the ratepayers. The attendance was not large but the interest shown in the proposition was intelligent and genuine.

Mr. E. A. Tanner occupied the chair and in a brief speech expressed his pleasure at the opportunity afforded to hear the particulars of the new industry, the Spar Mining and Milling Co., at first hand. The land in the north country, which is not the best for agriculture, contains much hidden treasure in the shape of minerals, and non-metallic ores. The site of the proposed mill is near Dignan's mill and on a section of street, which until recently we did not know was a street but in realtiy is a continuation of Concession street. The council proposes to close this section and rent it at a nominal rental to the company.

We are prepared to listen to the proposition of these men who ask very little in return Since August the government has forbidden the giving of bonuses by municipalities.

Mr. A. W. Taylor of Toronto, the Secretary and Sales Manager of the company was the first speaker. Mr. Taylor said they had looked over the mill site and proposed to visit the Eel's creek property Dolomite will be the principal product of the company and will be indeed a profitable venture. There is too much money going into the United States from Canada for articles we should have in our country which is so much richer in raw materials, said the speaker. The company would like to locate their mill in Lakefield, but will require some assistance; the workmen will be local men and a good deal of money will be in circulation benefiting the local merchants and in fact, the entire village. The factory will start in a small way but hopes to enlarge as the volume of business increases. The initial expense will be the construction of a small mill and bringing down a quantity of the ore to start with. It is the intention of the company to make his ore carry itself after it is brought down and crushed. It would be wise for the people of Lakefield to look seriously into this matter as it will be a good thing not only for the individual but for the entire village.

Mr F. O. S. Robertson A.I.M.M.E. managing director of the Company, was the next speaker

Mr. Robertson is a metallurgical engineer and has always been connected with large concerns before the war and since his return. He has been amazed at the situation in Canada, which though so richly endowed with natural resources, spends such enormous sums annually in importing from the United States, goods we should produce in our country. There is too much money spent in the States by Canada every year and it is time Canadians woke up to this situation. Raw materials are shipped into the States from Canada and one pays duty on the finished product coming back. This has been especially true of the non-metallic minerals, for there is only on man grinding any of these. This man, who lives in Madoc, has made a fortune out of grinding talc. The deposit of dolomite at Eel's creek, is an enormous one, of the best quality and with a market already the prospect is splendid, as the pure white dolomite (which this is), is not found in the States.

The uses to which the ground dolomite can be put are very numerous, so numerous indeed, that one realizes its tremendous importance in the world of commerce. Milwaukee has a mill which began by manufacturing two car loads per day and has greatly increased owing to the large market and their ore is of an inferior quality to ours. The proposed plant in Lakefield would be an up too date one run by pneumatic processes which entail no dust or danger to workmen. Dolomite as a filler is invaluable and it is used as a filler in paints, in paper manufacture, in roofing papers, in paper board and fibre board ,in the textile trade for dressing cloth, in all kinds of rubber goods especially in making tires, in soap manufacture, in graphite, in toilet preparations, in lubricants, in linoleum and oil cloth, in leather goods, manufacture of corks, and refining of oil. It is used as a polishing powder for plate glass and also in clouding and dimming glass (in the latter case by being put into the molten glass) It is also used in Portland cement, in the asbestos industry, and in coating the outside of ships and structural work as it is a preservative of iron or stone work. It is used in the bleaching of barley and as an absorbent of odours in veterinary surgery. In chemical plants it is invaluable, being an absorbent for nitro-glycerine. It is used as a filler for fertilizer and insecticides and in stove polish and the manufacture of imitation amber and for dusting pans in candy factories. It is used in electrical insulations and in the manufacture of spark plugs and it is a splendid heat and electric insulator. It is also used in chewing gum manufacture. In making concrete blocks it has the effect of making the blocks looks like real stone and prevents darkening through dampness.

Take it New industry — Cm7cs a There is very little export of non-metallic minerals from Canada which is so rich in this respect. The best felspar is found in Canada and is shipped to the States to be ground and we have to pay duty to get the ground product back. This is not right and should be stopped as being unpatriotic and determental not only to our country but to our people.

The Spar Mining and Milling Co., are for the present, giving to concentrate on dolomite, and will start in a small way but with the large market which is waiting there are handsome profits and those who invest in the $40,000 issue which is being put on the market are getting in, so to speak no ground floor. Small start is wise and need discourage no one, Henry Ford, and Chas. Schawb both started in a small way and so did many others of the great captains of industry.

Mr. Peter McLaren, M.E.,M.G.S., was the third speaker. Mr. MacLaren, who is a mining engineer and who has been connected with mining since 1890 says that this deposit is supposed to be the lower strata of the Niagara limestone and is supposed to be 65 feet thick but at the least it is 50 feet thick and it is expected that there are five million tons of dolomite in the Eel's Creek property so there is no fear of a shortage. The returns on a mine of this sort are quicker than with gold which requires so much expenditure or machinery before the first bar is made. With this one (dolomite), it is ready for the market as soon as it is ground and there is a waiting market.. The whiter and finer, the better the product and this deposit, from the samples, is the best in Ontario.

Mr. MacLaren gave an assurance of their absolute sincerity and said they wanted to make a good thing out of it.

The chairman then called on Reeve J. C. Strickland. The Reeve, on whose property the dolomite has been found, said he was surprised when Mr. Robertson told him what dolomite was, and its numerous uses and its enormous importance in the manufacturing of so any necessary articles. The returns from the samples are splendid and he is convinced that there is money in the project. The duty on dolomite shipped in from the States is from 15 to 17 per cent, which is saved by home manufacture. This enables the Canadian manufacture to sell his product cheaper and there is a ready market and the returns are large and the manufacture not at all expensive. There is a great deal of interest in Toronto in the company and they want to have the mill located there but the Reeve was able to secure its location in the village if $15,000 worth of stock is locally subscribed, Toronto capitalists taking $25,000 worth. As soon as the stock is sold work will begin and at present prices have been secured on lumber and various necessities in the building and equipping quarters at Eeel's Creek and a mill in the village and also rates have been assured on towing the ore to Lakefield. The company would like to bring down 4000 tons of ore this fall but the reeve feels that 3000 tons would be all that we can expect this season. Plans are being drawn for the mill and with the ready market it is merely a case of getting the ore out.

Mr. J. F. Lillicrap, President of the Board of Trade, was the last speaker. Mr. Lillicrap, whose business is that of a lumber merchant, was in the Province of Quebec in 1916, looking over some timber limits for Mr. J. M. Kilbourne and in the vicinity of the limits, he found some odd looking rock, taking a sample home, he compared it with some he had brought from Eel's Creek 45 years before In discussing mineralogy with Mr. Robertson some time later (whom he had known for some years) he mentioned this mineral, and Mr. Robertson took Mr. Lillicrap's sample of Eel's Creek rock and analyzed it and found it to be dolomite. In June of this year Mr.. Robertson wrote the speaker asking where the rock was found and at once the machinery was set in motion which brought about the present meeting of the formation of the Spar Mining and Milling Co.

Mr. Lillicrap has known Messrs. Robertson and MacLaren for years and is convinced of their sincerity.

Messrs. D. Simmons and Alex MacDonald spoke briefly asking about the uses of the product and its marketing possibilities and were answered satisfactorily.

The attractive possibilities of the company were set forth in a neat prospectus which were given to the interested members of the audience. Mr. J. C. Strickland will handle the sale of shares in Lakefield and vicinity.

ROSS YOUNG IS MARRIED.

Brooklyn Girl Becomes Bride of Giant Player—Large Crowd Attends.

NEW YORK, Octoer 13. — Ross (Pop) Young, right fielder of the New York Giants, and Miss Dorothy Peinecke of Brooklyn, were married on Saturday night, as a ceremony which had been postponed because the world's series went the extreme limit.

The crowd that attended the ceremony filled St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, at Church avenue and St. Paul's Place. Nearly all of the Giants, including Manager McGraw, were present. Dave Pancroft and "Bill" Cunningham of the Boston Nationals were present.

The ceremony had been fixed for Friday night on the theory that the Giants would have won the world's championship by that time. After the ceremony there was reception at the home of the bride at 21 Linden Boulevard, Brooklyn.

What's Best for a Bad Stomach?

Nine-tenths of all stomach trouble—indigestion, sourness, gas, pain, heartburn, etc., are caused by an excess of acid in the stomach.

Artificial digestents, such as pepsin, are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead neutralize the acid that has upset your stomach with a spoonful or two tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia, taken with a little water. This instantly sweetens the stomach and stops the pain and discomfort and your food digests as nature intended. For quick positive relief from Acid Stomach

FUNCTION OF THE CORONER'S JURY IS TO FIND CAUSE AND MANNER OF APPARENTLY UNUSUAL DEATH

Juror's Oath Demands True Presentment Without Fear, Malice, Favor or Affection.

CORONER'S DISCRETION

Safeguards Life and Ensures Justice in Case of Foul Play.

In view of the Coroner's Inquests necessitated by the unfortunately large number of sudden deaths in Peterboro this fall, a description of the functions and proceedings at a typical inquest will be interesting.

The Coroner's inquest had its origin in the Crown's vigilance on behalf of the King, but today the Coroner's chief function is to inquire into the manner of death of persons dying suddenly, accidentally, or by slaying.

When it has been made to appear to a Coroner that an enquiry should be held touching the death of a deceased person, he takes control of the situation, examines the body and issues a warrant to the chief constable to take charge of it. If upon this inquiry it is learned that death was purely accidental, or the, result of suicide, under circumstances that do not require further investigation, the coroner's duty is to collect the evidence connected with the death and report it in detail to the Crown Attorney. The coroner also issues an order to bury the body.

If, however, after his personal enquiry the Coroner comes to the conclusion that an inquest with a jury is necessary, he issues a Coroner's Warrant, which instructs the police to warn twelve competent men for jury service. Jurymen must be ratepayers and their names must appear on the voters' lists.

If a post-mortem examination is considered necessary the Coroner issues an order to a qualified medical man who reports his findings to the jury.

If an arrest has been made in connection with the death it is proper that the prisoner should be present at the inquest.

The Inquest.

The proceedings at an inquest in Peterboro can be best explained by describing an actual case.

The jurymen are summoned by Detective Sergeant William Meagher and Detective William Carey, and gathered at the place where the inquiry is to be held. County Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young presides and the witnesses are examined by County Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C.

The warrant on which the jury was called is returned to open the hearing as follows: "You good men of this city summoned to appear here this day to inquire for our Sovereign Lord the King when, where, how and by what means this man came to his death, answer to your names as you shall be called, every man at the first call, upon the pain and peril that shall fall thereon."

The name of each member of the jury is called and if seven or more answer they will constitute the jury.

The foreman having been selected, he is asked to stand up and take the Bible in his right hand and listen to his oath, and the jury as the same time are bidden to harken to their foreman's oath, which is as follows:

""You shall diligently inquire and true presentment make of all such matters and things as shall here be given you in charge on behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King, touching the death of this man, now lying dead, of whose body you shall have the view; you shall present no man for hatred, malice, or illwill; nor spare any through fear, favor or affection; but a true verdict give according to the evidence and the best of your skill and knowledge. So help you God."

After the foreman has kissed the Bible, it is handed to Sergeant Meagher who gives it thereafter to the jurors as they come to be sworn. The jurymen are sworn in threes, as follows:

"The oath which your foreman upon this inquest hath now taken before you on his part, you, and each of you, are severally well and truly to observe and keep on all your parts. So help you God."

Each juror kisses the Bible and takes his seat.

After viewing the body, paying special attention to the wounds, if any, which are said to have caused death, the jury proceeds to hear the evidence. The stenographer who records the evidence must be sworn to take down and transcribe the evidence without favor or partiality.

The constable who calls the jury is the first witness. He may be examined by the Crown Attorney or a representative of the Attorney-General, if he is present. The same privilege of examining the witnesses is, with the consent of the Coroner, extended to counsel appearing for anyone interested in the proceedings. The prisoner, if he is present at the inquest, has the right to give evidence in his own behalf if he so desires. He should be warned, and if he does give his evidence he can be subjected to cross-examination and cannot refuse to answer any question put to him relevant to the case. If the question tends to incriminate him, he has the right to object to answer on that ground. If he takes the objection he is protected and the evidence cannot be used against him in a future trial.

If an adjournment is necessary the jurymen are each bound in the sum of $100 to reassemble at the appointed time.

The proclamation made at the reopening of the hearing is: "Oyez, Oyez, Oyez. All manner of persons who have anything more to do at the court before the King's Coroner for this county on this inquest now to be taken and adjourned over to this time and place, draw near and give your attendance."

When all the known evidence is in, and before closing the court, the Coroner announces:

"If there is any other person who can give further evidence on behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King as to when, where, how and by what means this man came to his death, let him come forward and he shall be heard."

The evidence is summed up by the Coroner and the jury is left alone to consider its verdict, the constable in charge taking the following oath:

"You shall well and truly keep the jury upon this inquiry without meat, drink or fire; you shall not suffer any person to speak to them, nor shall you speak to them yourself, unless it be to ask them if they have agreed or their verdict, until they shall be agreed. So help you God."

The verdict is presented in written form by the foreman. It must be signed by every juryman and signed and sealed by the Coroner.

The jury is then instructed "Oyez, Oyez, Oyez. All you good men of the County summoned to appear here this day to enquire for our Sovereign Lord the King as to when, where, how, and by what means this man came to his death, depart now and take your ease. God save the King."

SELECTING FRUIT

When selecting fruit buy that which is not bruised, as a break in the skin means quick decay.

BUY LARGE FISH

Buy a large fish and use the leftovers rather than a small fish for one meal, because there is less waste in proportion to the amount of meat.

CHAPTER XXXIII (continued)

Lord Henry admits that the answer silenced and bewildered him, being utterly unexpected. Yet what the prisoner urged was a truth so obvious that it was difficult to apprehend how his lordship had come to overlook it. But Sir John, less perspicuous or less scrupulous in the matter, had his retort ready.

"Did you not come to Arwenack and forcibly carry off thence—"

"Nay, now, nay now," the corsair interrupted, good-humoredly. "Go back to school, Sir John, to learn that abduction is not piracy."

"Call it abduction, if you will," Sir John admitted.

"Not if I will, Sir John. We'll call it what it is, if you please."

"You are trifling, sir. But we shall mend that presently," and Sir John banged the table with his fist, his face flushing slightly in anger.

"You can not pretend to be ignorant," Sir John continued, "that abduction is punishable by death under the law of England."

He turned to his fellow-judges.

"We will then, sirs, with your concurrence, say no more of the piracy."

"Faith," said Lord Henry in his gentle tones, "in justice we can not. And he shrugged the matter aside.

"The prisoner is right in what he claims. We have no jurisdiction in that matter, seeing that he committed no piracy in English waters, nor—so far as our knowledge goes—against any vessel sailing under the English flag."

Rosamund stirred. Slowly she took her elbows from the table, and folded her arms, resting them upon the edge of it. Thus leaning forward she listened now with an odd brightness in her eye, a slight flush in her cheeks reflecting some odd excitement called into life by Lord Henry's admission—an admission which sensibly whittled down the charges against the prisoner.

Sir Oliver, watching her almost furtively, noted this and marvelled, even as he marvelled at her general composure. It was in vain that he sought to guess what might be her attitude of mind towards himself now that she was safe again among friends and protectors.

But Sir John, intent only upon the business ahead, plunged angrily on.

"Be it so," he admitted impatiently, "we will deal with him upon the counts of abduction and murder. Have you anything to say?"

"Nothing that would be like to weigh with you," replied Sir Oliver. And then with a sudden change from his slightly derisive manner to one that was charged with passion:

"Let us make an end of this comedy," he cried; "of this pretense of judicial proceedings. Hang me, and have done, or set me to walk the plank. Play the pirate, for that is a trade you understand. But a' God's name don't disgrace the queen's commission by playing the judge."

Sir John leaped to his feet, his face aflame.

"Now, by heaven, you insolent knave—"

But Lord Henry checked him, placing a restraining hand upon his sleeve, and forcing him gently back into his seat. Himself now addressed the prisoner.

"Sir, your words are unworthy one who, whatever his crimes, has earned the repute of being a sturdy, valiant fighter. Your deeds are so notorious—particularly that which caused you to flee from England and take to roving and that of your reappearance at Arwenack and the abduction of which you were then guilty—that your sentence in an English court is a matter foregone beyond all possible doubt. Nevertheless, it shall be yours, as I have said, for the asking.

"Yet," he added, and his voice was lowered and very earnest, "were I your friend, Sir Oliver, I would advise you that you rather choose to be dealt with in the summary fashion of the sea."

"Sirs," replied Sir Oliver, "your right to hang me I have not disputed, nor do I. I have no more to say."

"But I have."

Thus Rosamund at last, startling the court with her crisp, sharp utterance. All turned to look at her as she rose, and stood tall and compelling at the table's end.

"Rosamund!" called Sir John, and rose in his turn. "Let me implore you—"

She waved him peremptorily, almost contemptuously, into silence.

"Since in this matter of the abduction with which Sir Oliver is charged," she said, "I am the person said to have been abducted, it were perhaps well that before going further in this matter you should hear what I may hereafter have to say in an English court."

Sir John shrugged, and sat down again. She would have her way, he realized; just as he knew that its only result could be to waste their time and protract the agony of the doomed man.

Lord Henry turned to her, his manner full of deference.

"Since the prisoner has not denied the charge, and since wisely he refrains from demanding to be taken to trial, we need not harass you, Mistress Rosamund. Nor will you be called upon to say anything in an English court."

"There you are at fault, my lord," she answered, her voice very level. "I shall be called upon to say something when I impeach you all for murder upon the high seas, as impeach you I shall of you persist in your intent."

"Rosamund!" cried Oliver in his sudden amazement—and it was a cry of joy and exultation.

She looked at him, and smiled—a smile full of courage and friendliness and something more, a smile for which he considered that his impending hanging was but a little price to pay. Then she turned again to that court, into which her words had flung a sudden consternation.

"Since he disdains to deny the accusation, I must deny it for him," she informed them. "He did not abduct me, sirs, as is alleged. I love Oliver Tressilian. I am of full age and mistress of my actions, and I went willing with him to Algiers where I became his wife."

Had she flung a bomb amongst them she could hardly have made a greater disorder of their wits. They sat back, and stared at her with blank faces, muttering incoherencies.

"His—his wife?" babbled Lord Henry.

"You became his——"

And then Sir John cut in fiercely:

"A lie! A lie to save that foul villain's neck!"

Rosamund leaned toward him, and her smile was almost a sneer.

"Your wits were ever sluggish, Sir John," she said, "else you would not need reminding that I could have no object in lying to save him if he had done me the wrong that is imputed to him."

Then she looked at the others.

"I think, sirs, that in this matter my word will outweigh Sir John's or any man's in any court of justice."

"Faith, that's true enough!" ejaculated the bewildered Lord Henry. "A moment, Killigrew——"

And again he stilled the impetuous Sir John. He looked at Sir Oliver, who in truth was very far from being the least bewildered in that company.

"What do you say to that, sir?" he asked.

"To that?" echoed the almost speechless corsair.

"What is there left to say?" he evaded.

"'Tis all false,' cried Sir John again. "We were witnesses of the event—you and I, Harry—and we saw——"

"You saw," Rosamund interrupted. "But you did not know what had been concerted."

For a moment that silenced them again. They were as men who stand upon crumbling ground, whose every effort to win to a safer footing but occasions a fresh slide of soil. Then Sir John sneered, and made his response.

"No doubt she will be prepared to swear that her betrothed, Master Lionel Tressilian, accompanied her willingly upon that elopement."

"No," she answered. "As for Lionel Tressilian he was carried off that he might expiate his sins—sins which he had fathered upon his brother there, sins which are the subject of your other count against him."

"Now what can you mean by that?" asked his lordship.

"That the story that Sir Oliver killed my brother is a calumny; that the murderer was Lionel Tressilian, who, to avoid detection and to complete his work, caused Sir Oliver to be kidnapped that he might be sold into slavery."

"This is too much!" roared Sir John. "She is trifling with us, she makes white black and black white. She has been bewitched by that crafty rogue, by Moorish arts that——"

"Wait!" said Lord Henry, raising his hand. "Give me leave."

He confronted her very seriously.

"This—this is a grave statement, mistress. Have you any proof—anything that you conceive to be a proof of what you are saying?"

But Sir John was not to be repressed.

"'Tis but the lying tale this villain told her. He has bewitched her, I say. 'Tis plain as the sunlight yonder."

Sir Oliver laughed outright at that. His mood was growing exultant, buoyant, and joyous, and this was the first expression of it.

"Bewitched her? You're determined never to lack for a charge. First 'twas piracy, then abduction, and now 'tis witchcraft!"

"No," she answered. "As for Lionel Tressilian he was carried off that he might expiate his sins—sins which he had fathered upon his brother there, sins which are the subject of your other count against him."

"Now what can you mean by that?" asked his lordship.

"That the story that Sir Oliver killed my brother is a calumny; that the murderer was Lionel Tressilian, who, to avoid detection and to complete his work, caused Sir Oliver to be kidnapped that he might be sold into slavery."

"This is too much!" roared Sir John. "She is trifling with us, she makes white black and black white. She has been bewitched by that crafty rogue, by Moorish arts that——"

"Wait!" said Lord Henry, raising his hand. "Give me leave."

He confronted her very seriously.

"This—this is a grave statement, mistress. Have you any proof—anything that you conceive to be a proof of what you are saying?"

But Sir John was not to be repressed.

"'Tis but the lying tale this villain told her. He has bewitched her, I say. 'Tis plain as the sunlight yonder."

Sir Oliver laughed outright at that. His mood was growing exultant, buoyant, and joyous, and this was the first expression of it.

"Bewitched her? You're determined never to lack for a charge. First 'twas piracy, then abduction, and now 'tis witchcraft!"

Juror's Oath Demands True Presentment Without Fear, Malice, Favor or Affection.

CORONER'S DISCRETION

In view of the Coroner's Inquests necessitated by the unfortunately large number of sudden deaths in Peterboro this fall, a description of the functions and proceedings at a typical inquest will be interesting.

The Coroner's inquest had its origin in the Crown's vigilance on behalf of the King, but today the Coroner's chief function is to inquire into the manner of death of persons dying suddenly, accidentally, or by slaying.

When it has been made to appear to a Coroner that an enquiry should be held touching the death of a deceased person, he takes control of the situation, examines the body and issues a warrant to the chief constable to take charge of it. If upon this inquiry it is learned that death was purely accidental, or the result of suicide, under circumstances that do not require further investigation, the coroner's duty is to collect the evidence connected with the death and report it in detail to the Crown Attorney. The coroner also issues an order to bury the body.

If, however, after his personal enquiry the Coroner comes to the conclusion that an inquest with a jury is necessary, he issues a Coroner's Warrant, which instructs the police to warn twelve competent men for jury service. Jurymen must be ratepayers and their names must appear on the voters' lists.

If a post-mortem examination is considered necessary the Coroner issues an order to a qualified medical man who reports his findings to the jury.
